Van Nuys And Gillette Win Close Senate Races

Willis Asks Recount
House Fight Open
81 Seats G. O. P. Gain
Ickes Sees 3d Term

Byron Succeeds Lewis

WILLIAM D. BYRON was assured election to the House to succeed Representative David J. Lewis, from Maryland, when he had a lead of 1,100 votes over A. Charles Stewart with only four precincts unreported. Page 34.

President Returns

By Sidney Olson,

President Roosevelt returned to the Capitol last night to find:

Secretary of the Interior Ickes had stressed the "possibility that the President might be drafted for a third term."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had said, without knowing of Ickes' remark, that any third-term comment was outside the province of a Cabinet officer.

Capitol Hill Republicans, surveying Tuesday's election wreckage and finding it good, prepared to demand of the New Deal a shift to the right as the price of co-operation.

Indians Recount Demanded

Two unpurged Democrats and court bill opponents, Senator Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana, and Guy M. Gillette, had finally squeezed through to victory by narrow margins. In Indiana there was a Republican recount demand from forces backing Raymond E. Willis, 63-year-old country editor, who refused to concede to Van Nuys.

Gillette narrowly won over former Senator Lester J. Dickinson, Republican conservative, after a see-saw race that wasn't settled until all precincts were in.

Final House statistics showed a Republican gain of 81, with but one contest in doubt. This makes 170 the total Republican strength, as compared to 86 members and one vacancy in the last Congress.

As of yesterday, the Republicans made a net gain of 11 Governors—they actually elected 14 Governors, but lost three contests to new Democrats—and eight Senators. Only a recount showing a victory for Willis can upset this Senate score.

The one unsettled contest was in the Fourth Washington District, where Representative Knute Hill, Democrat, was being hard pressed by Frank Miller, a Republican.

Battle Forseen

Favorite Capital topic yesterday was whether the President would relax the intensity of his drive for New Deal reforms in order to create party harmony for 1940.

There was no doubt anywhere that if he pursued a middle-of-the-road course he would have an easy two years more at the helm. Senate Republicans conceded this yesterday, while expressing at the same time their doubts he would do so.

President Back, Faces Heavy Calendar Today

President Roosevelt returned last night from Hyde Park facing a busy schedule today.

This morning he is to have a press conference at which eager reporters will seek to learn his reaction to Tuesday's election, then will participate in the Armistice Day wreath-laying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Later, he will receive a farewell call from the Italian Ambassador, then will have conferences with Secretary of the Interior Ickes and House Majority Leader Rayburn.

A cabinet meeting will be held at 2 p. m., and at 4 the President will receive Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff of the Cuban army.

"We Are the Natural Protectors of the Freedom of This Hemisphere—"

The Armistice 20 years ago ended the greatest war in history. We in America are proud of the record of our armies in that terrific struggle, and we cherish the memory that they were the decisive factor in the defeat of the common enemy.

The lessons of the war, with all its appalling loss of human life and its cost and its threat to the very existence of our civilization, stand out plainly before us.

Yet we are confronted by the fact that the situation in the world today is as menacing as at any critical time in history. It is something for our serious consideration. It demands immediate and vigorous action on our part lest there be visited upon us the recent experience of England and France. Not only from beyond the Atlantic do these dangers threaten the Americas. Moreover, we are the natural protectors of the freedom of this hemisphere, and we cannot escape our obligation.

I would like to see a complete and well-balanced army provided, adequate in size and thoroughly trained and fully equipped with modern arms and with industrial provision for its maintenance against loss or obsolescence.

To meet all these requirements promptly and without excitement is, in my opinion, the most important duty that confronts the American people on this twentieth anniversary of the Armistice. The performance of that duty should preserve our peace, and if that proves impossible will enable us to be secure behind our defenses.

More than this, it will bring home to other governments our strength, and will pave the way for reduction in armaments, which is the wish of all of us who hate war.

The Rev. C. M. Cope, No. 1 "marrying parson" of Elkton, Md., was reported to have made arrangements yesterday to return to his farm in North Carolina as Free State voters rolled up an overwhelming majority for the new law curbing the marriage mill which has made "an Elkton marriage" famous in divorce courts.

Two other pastors who have made a specialty of curb servicing Cupid—the Rev. Joseph Baker and the Rev. W. F. Hopkins—were directing their attention toward the field of evangelism, in which both have had experience.

Other immediate results of the verdict of Maryland voters in favor of a 48-hour "waiting period" between issuance of a marriage license and the ceremony follow:

W. Henry Pippin, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Elkton, reported that the town's marriage business had already begun to fall off, although the law does not go into effect until December 8. He attributed this to the publicity given the huge majority for the law.

Under the white glare of searchlights, the District ushered in the twentieth Armistice Day last night with a reproduction near Silver Spring, Md., of the battle of Cantigny.

Infantry of Maryland and District National Guard units, tanks of the regulars at Fort Meade, airplanes of the 29th Division combined to simulate the battle which tested American arms in France. Tin-hatted troops, bayonets flashing in the weird light, moved in long waves across Sligo Park while artillery boomed and machine guns chattered in the background.

More than 30,000 persons gathered on the hillsides to stand in the chill air while 600 troops, 11 tanks, artillery and planes made the narrow valley a terrifying scene of war. Among veterans of the real battle who saw it reconstructed was Sergt. Herman Freeman, 40, Kensington, Md., who won the Croix de Guerre for wiping out a German machine gun.

The guns at Sligo Park signaled the most elaborate Armistice Day celebration in Washington's history.

Court Stiffens Sentences of Policy Runners

Proctor Clamps Down
Refuses Probation
2 Get Long Terms

Severe sentences for numbers racketeers will be his policy from now on, Justice Proctor announced in District Court yesterday as he refused probation for two convicted policy writers.

Severity by the court, he said, appeared the only means of enforcing the new lottery law, which apparently has failed to reach the key racketeers.

But the "big shots" cannot operate without their slip writers, runners, collectors and pay-off men, Justice Proctor said, and the way to deprive the racketeers of these henchmen is to put them in jail.

District Attorney Pine applauded Proctor's announcement.

"I am in hearty accord," Pine said, "with the court's attitude toward punishment and I believe that such an attitude, if pursued, may make for greater progress in our effort to remove this form of criminal activity."

It was in sentencing Smith that

'Bonded' Husband Has Wife Indicted With Her Mother

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—A complaint by the "bonded husband" of a Brooklyn woman led to the indictment today of the woman and her mother on charges of grand larceny and conspiracy.

Timid-looking Joseph Newrick, 38, said the pair had fleeced him out of his $2,500 life savings by forcing him to post the money pledging he would be a good husband and would not run off to his native England.

For two weeks after the marriage, he said, he was not permitted to move into his bride's home until he had put up the cash.

Even then, he declared, he had to sleep on a couch in the living room while his bride, Elvira, 35, slept with her mother, Mrs. Katherine Suero, 68.

He later discovered, he said, that his wife had made prior arrangements to divorce him after their marriage in September, 1937.

Gallup Poll Accuracy Praised By New Dealers, Republicans

"Why hold elections? Why not have Gallup polls instead?"

This is the reaction of Leon Henderson, executive secretary of the National Economic Committee, to a query from The Post for comment on the accuracy of Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, in forecasting Tuesday's election. Dr. Gallup, after a brilliant record in estimating election results in the important primary contests, came within one half of 1 per cent in estimating the Lehman-Dewey vote in New York, and also concluded Republicans would win as many as 75 Congressional seats in the elections this week.

The statements of many Government officials revealed an intense interest in and respect for the scientific forecasts of Dr. Gallup.

Replying to the query of The Post, Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, said, in a telegram to Eugene Meyer, publisher, "preliminary indications are that the Gallup poll has maintained its remarkable reputation as a barometer of public opinion."

"The Gallup poll has become an American institution," said Robert H. Jackson, solicitor general. "It seems to have succeeded to a greater degree than any other poll in giving due weight to all factors which make for reliable results. I can pay no greater tribute to its standing than to say that in our brief in the child labor cases pending in the Supreme Court, we cited The Washington Post of May 24, 1936, and of February 24, 1937, to prove the continued vitality of the child labor amendment which the

A. F. L. Sets $4,000 Yearly Pay as Goal

Business Gains Noted
Greater Share Sought
'Partnership' Is Aim
Go Ahead, Roper Says

Watching and recording further business gains throughout the country, the American Federation of Labor last night cautioned union leaders to be alert for opportunities to press for wage boosts, and held out a possible goal of $4,000 per year income for every family, from "rightly distributed production."

Secretary of Commerce Roper, meanwhile, told business leadership to "shift from the brake to the accelerator," adding that "there is enough constructive work at hand to gainfully employ all willing workers for a long time to come."

Clothing Workers Ask Raise

A quick wage-increase development came last night when the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, headed by Sidney Hillman, petitioned Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews for a hearing on a demand that the minimum wage for clothing workers be raised from 25 cents an hour to 40 cents. Some 300,000 workers would be affected. The action, reported by the Associated Press, was taken at Pittsburgh.

The A. F. of L., in its Monthly Survey of Business, called for a "new conception of wages—wages based on producing power with machines" rather than "the old conception" based on "human skills and energy alone."

Partnership Is Aim

"Productivity wages" can be established through collective bargaining, it said, by "(1) raising wages according to increases in productivity in an industry, and by (2) some form of partnership wage which shares excess income equitably between management, workers and investors."

Maximum production, properly distributed, the survey declared, "means an income of over $4,000 for every family with higher incomes for those in more responsible positions."

A production program that would forestall adoption of fascism or communism was called for, through a thorough-going study of the Nation's consuming needs, followed by a program "under democratic methods" to get the goods produced.

Mass Market Needed

Such a program, developed by a commission representing owners, management, labor, consumers and government, "would give private business an opportunity to raise production rapidly with assurance of reasonable profit," the survey continued, and "make possible sustained mass production with higher standards of living for all."

Mass production has been created without a mass market able to absorb the production of high powered industry plants, it is stated in the survey, hence "the spectacle of millions on starvation incomes in the midst of a possible plenty."

It cited industrial advances in recent months, re-employment of 1,000,000 persons since the May-June low point, and said "it is likely that 300,000 to 500,000 more returned to work in October."

The gains have added "millions of dollars to workers' buying power, and the figures of the Department of Agriculture show an increase of $102,000,000 in total monthly income of non-farm workers since June," the survey continued.

"Inventories of retail stores now

Ocean Upheaval Moves 450 Miles an Hour
Severe Shocks Felt in Alaska
No Damage Reported From Sea or Tremor

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, Nov. 10.—A tidal wave apparently caused by a severe submarine earthquake centered near the Aleutian Islands washed shores of the Hawaiian Islands today.

Lieut. Commander J. H. Peters, of the United States Coast Geodetic Survey, said the wave, traveling an estimated 450 miles an hour, was subsiding after reaching a peak about 4:30 p. m. (10 p. m. E. S. T.), six hours after recording the quake.

Eastern Molokai Island, southeast of Oahu Island, on which Honolulu is located, reported the wave swept inland 23 feet beyond the normal water line. Maui Island, immediately south of Molodai Island, reported a two and one-half foot rise above normal following an 18-inch drop below normal.

No damage had been reported.

In Honolulu Harbor there was a maximum rise and fall of nine inches, with 35 minutes between wave crests.

Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, volcanologist at the Kilauea Observatory on Hawaii Island, earlier had reported "a very serious earthquake," apparently in the Aleutian Islands, might cause a tidal wave on the eastern shores of the Hawaiian Islands. He asked assistance of territorial officials in warning Hawaiian harbormasters.

Jaggar said there was no cause for alarm, but that Army and Navy officers should warn harbormasters to be prepared.

"It is too big to have come from Japan," he added.

Shock in Alaska

Anchorage, Alaska, Nov. 10 (AP).—Light earthquake shocks were felt here at 10:25 a. m. (3:25 p. m., Eastern standard time) today, and the Woodley Airways radio station received a report of a severe quake at Naknek station on Bristol Bay.

The shocks here had an east-west swaying motion, gentle but noticeable.

The Naknek report came from a radio operator who also said there was no damage. Naknek is at the upper end of the Aleutian peninsula, on the north side.

More Quakes in Mexico

Mexico City, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—New earthquakes today rocked coastal areas in Oaxaca and Guerrero states, in southwestern Mexico, to add to the panic caused by three sharp tremors felt yesterday afternoon.

The Tacubaya Observatory seismograph recorded three temblors during the night. Epicenter of the disturbance was estimated to be in the Pacific Ocean only a short distance off the coast.

At Omtepec, Guerrero State, many persons spent the night in the streets and open fields.

Wallace Asks Republicans For Farm Plan

Invites New Members
Department Is 'Open'
Hull Sees Argentine

By Robert C. Albright.

New Republican House members who wrested a majority of corn and wheat belt seats from Democrats in Tuesday's balloting yesterday were invited by Secretary Wallace to submit their farm plans.

"I wish to assure these gentlemen that the facilities of the Department of Agriculture will be freely open to them to help work out their ideas," the Agriculture Secretary told reporters.

Meanwhile, a reported plan to dispose of surplus United States wheat in Brazil and other South American countries, brought quick repercussions. Argentine Ambassador Felipe Espil conferred with Secretary of State Hull on the reports. Brazil now is a choice market for Argentine wheat. Secretary Wallace dodged questions on the reports at a press conference, but it was learned that President Roosevelt has been told of the reported Argentine resentment.

Wallace's challenge to Republicans to get together on a farm plan of their own followed decision of the AAA to push forward experimentally with the Wallace "two-price" plan for domestic consumers and possible "temporary ex-

'Strong Man' Of Cuba Here On State Visit

Col. Fulgencio Batista, 37-year-old Cuban army chief of staff, arrived in Washington yesterday on a mission which he described as "simply official courtesy," but admitted he would avail himself of any opportunity which might arise for discussions likely to benefit relations between his country and the United States.

Participation of the stocky strong man of the Caribbean in Armistice Day exercises in Washington has been widely interpreted as a likely occasion for conferences covering the entire range of Cuban-American interests, with emphasis on problems of trade and defense.

Questioned on reports of an explosion yesterday in a Cuban ammunition plant, the chief of staff said his information was that the blast took place on private property. No fatalities had as yet been reported to him, he added.

"The motive for my visit is the one we all know," the Cuban leader told a press conference at the State Department, referring to his invitation from Gen. Malin Craig, U. S. chief of staff, to join in today's rites honoring America's World War dead.

Col. Batista said he thought it very appropriate for the United

Nazis Burn, Pillage

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—The greatest wave of anti-Jewish violence since Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933 swept Nazi Germany today and Jews were threatened with new official measures against them.

Millions of dollars worth of Jewish property was destroyed by angry crowds. Jewish stores were looted. Synagogues were burned, dynamited or damaged in a dozen cities.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels, calling for a halt in the demonstrations, declared "the final answer to Jewry will be given in the form of laws or decrees."

A Day of Vengeance

It was a nation-wide day of vengeance for the death yesterday of Ernst vom Rath, secretary of the German Embassy in Paris, who was shot Monday by a 17-year-old Jew, Herschel Grynszpan.

Bands of youths roved the streets of Berlin and other cities from early morning, smashing windows of Jewish shops. In many places crowds which gathered after daybreak pushed into the establishments and came out with loot. Most of Berlin's 1,000 Jewish stores were plundered.

Sounds of breaking glass and shouts of looters died away only near midnight. Hundreds of Jews voluntarily spent the night in jails fearing worse violence as reports of burning and looting continued to come in from many cities.

550 Say Employers Are Violating Wage-Hour Act

Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews announced today he had received 550 complaints of employer violations of the fair labor standards act.

He said the complaints were based on alleged failure to pay the statutory minimum of 25 cents an hour or failure to pay time and a half in cash for overtime.

Andrews announced regulations which would permit employment of handicapped workers from October 24 to next February 1, at less than the minimum wage if they are employed by "charitable organizations and institutions conducted not for profit but for the purpose of carrying out a recognized program of rehabilitation of handicapped individuals."

Civil Service To Investigate McNinch Purge

U. S. Employes Alarmed Merit Chiefs Perturbed Fear Precedent

By James D. Secrest.

An investigation of the McNinch purge of the Federal Communications Commission by the Civil Service Commission will be made, it was learned yesterday, as Government employes expressed alarm that the abrupt dismissals of three FCC workers without hearings would set a precedent for other executive departments.

Harry B. Mitchell, chairman of the commission, would not state definitely what the civil service regulatory body may do, but he did say:

"If it appears our duty to make an investigation of the dismissals to determine whether any regulations have been violated, we will do so."

He explained the commission has not yet received any formal report from Chairman Frank R. McNinch on the FCC dismissals.

From another source, however, it was learned that a quiet inquiry already had been instituted by the civil service unit although no formal complaints have been received from the employes involved.

Merit Chiefs Perturbed.

The Civil Service Commission blocked the first attempted purge of the FCC by McNinch several weeks ago when he asked that 50-odd positions, including the examining division and the press relations job, be exempted from civil service. Though the commission has taken no formal action, Mitchell stated that he felt the request to be contrary to the spirit of the executive order extending the merit system last June.

The statement of G. Franklin Wisner, who was ousted as chief of the press relations division, as understood to have been specially perturbing to the Civil Service Commission as well as to Government employes.

Citing his civil service record of 12 years, Wisner said:

"It is evident in this case civil service broke down completely and the law was ignored by circumvention. No one under the civil service henceforth can feel secure."

Wisner's job was abolished by the FCC, and yet a similar position was set up under the direction of Chairman McNinch. M. L. Ramsay was hired at a salary of $7,200. His predecessor was paid only $4,600.

McNinch Faces Inquiry

While Davis G. Arnold, former chief examiner, and Melvin H. Dalberg, former examiner, appeared to be without a basis for appeal under the civil service system at present, reports were current that the FCC may return to the old examining system or something closely akin to it. In such an event, it was said, examiners also will be able to charge circumvention of the civil service act.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Dalberg had been added suddenly to the purge list by Chairman McNinch because the examiner had gone to the White House and complained to Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President, against McNinch's threat to abolish the examining division.

An investigation of the FCC purge and dissension may be conducted by a Congressional committee even before Congress convenes. The inquiry is expected when a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee begins hearings on the FCC budget, probably in early December.

Even though he may dodge this inquiry, Chairman McNinch faces at least a Senate hearing. While he may be appointed chairman of the Federal Power Commission again during the current Congressional recess, his appointment will be subject to confirmation by the Senate despite the fact that he quit the job to take over the FCC housecleaning."

School Officials Discuss Budget

Members of the Board of Education and school officials met with the Budget Bureau yesterday to discuss the 1940 school bill of $13,179,000 recommended by District Commissioners.

The budgetary needs for that year, as requested by the schools, originally was placed at $18,923,110. This figure, however, was cut to place the District bill around $50,000,000.

The Budget Bureau has been holding meetings for the past two weeks with various municipal department heads so that the District budget will be completed when Congress convenes.

House to Have One Less Woman Member Two Are Democrats and Two Republicans

By the Associated Press.

The House will have four woman members next session—one less than in the last Congress.

Only two of four Democratic Congresswomen were re-elected in Tuesday's election — Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, and Representative Caroline O'Day (Democrat), New York. Representatives Virginia Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana, and Nan Wood Honeyman (Democrat), Oregon, were defeated.

REP. ROGERS

On the Republican side, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Massachusetts) will be joined by Miss Jessie Sumner, 39-year-old county judge from Milford, Ill.

Newburgh, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP).—One State senator is going to make certain that the public won't see his name and photograph on weather-beaten election campaign posters for months to come.

Thomas C. Desmond, re-elected to the Senate last Tuesday from the Orange-Sullivan counties district, today ordered a secretary to retrace the 1,000 miles he traveled before election and remove the posters he tacked on telephone poles, fences, etc.

How many? About 2,000, the secretary says.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 10 (AP).—Gov. Frank Murphy, New Deal Democrat, who lost his re-election campaign this week, said tonight there was no basis for reports he would receive a Federal appointment.

The Governor's defeat caused speculation that he might be appointed to the Supreme Court, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals or the Eastern Michigan District Court. He was high commissioner to the Philippines before being elected Governor of Michigan in 1936.

"After the first of the year I will be practicing law in Detroit," he said. "The only thing to which one can go back with dignity in this world of ours is private life."

3 Writers Call Munich Pact Burden to U.S.

Neutrality Act Blamed Morley Quotes Benes Isolation Plan Hit

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—A discussion of "where will the Munich settlement lead?" drew divergent opinions tonight from Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Felix Morley and Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick, but all agreed that the pact had thrust a tremendous burden on the United States.

Speaking on a broadcast (N.B.C.) of "America's Town Meeting of the Air," they agreed the United States was partly to blame for the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia by Nazi Germany.

Morley, editor of The Washington Post, citing the neutrality act as an encouragement to German aggression, told of a confidential interview he had with the then Czech President Benes.

"I put the question of our neutrality policy to President Benes. That democratic little statesman did not hesitate in stating his opinion. 'It is not my business,' he said, 'to criticize the policy of your country, but here in Czechoslovakia we feel that American neutrality legislation is in the nature of a blank check to Germany to fill out at our expense'."

Cost Termed Heavy

"That blank check," said Morley, "has been filled out. And the cost is heavy. For no country will it be more heavy than for the United States. The simultaneous emergence of Germany and Japan as clearly dominant powers shatters the fancied isolation of the United States."

Said Gen. Johnson, former NRA administrator:

"What is the lesson for us? There are ravening wolves in the world—in Germany in Italy, in Japan. Munich made German force immeasurably stronger. She is the enemy of our principal institution—individual liberty. She is the enemy of our economic institutions because what she needs is markets in countries which have raw materials. She is the enemy of our Pan American policy—the Monroe Doctrine—because such markets exist principally in South America."

Fighting May Come

"If Germany proves that force triumphs, her very comeback proves also that force has failed," said Mrs. McCormick, an editorial writer for the New York Times and Pulitzer prize winner for foreign correspondence.

"In the end there may be no other way but fighting to protect what is vital to our life as free men; meantime, the experience of our own generation drives us to try first every other way—diplomacy, bargaining, economic battle, propaganda, example, sacrifice instead of lip-service to our ideals, honest recognition of the causes of war, diagnosis of the national diseases, strengthening our own unity, our own economy, our own institutions, our own moral fiber. Democracy needs vitamins. It is ready for a strong lead. Where do you think this lead should come from?"

The Gallup Poll

U. S., British Public Skeptical of Hitler's Vows Nazis Want More Land, Is Widespread Belief

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, Nov. 10.—On the twentieth anniversary of Germany's World War defeat, public opinion in the United States and in England is overwhelmingly skeptical of Hitler's promise that the new and powerful Reich desires no more territory in Europe.

GALLUP.

In a speech September 26 at the height of the Czech crisis, Hitler declared that the Sudetenland was "the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe."

According to surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion in the United States and by the British Institute, an affiliate, in England, virtually nobody believes him.

The same question was used in the two surveys: "Hitler says he has no more territorial ambitions in Europe. Do you believe him?" Sentiment in the two countries is amazingly similar.

AMERICAN VOTERS
Yes	8%
No	92
BRITISH VOTERS
Yes	7%
No	93

Explains Munich Reaction

The significance of American sentiment on this question is that it goes far toward explaining the public's reaction to the four-power peace of Munich, which conceded Hitler's Sudeten demands. Despite talk of "peace in our time" as a result of the Munich parley, an overwhelmingly majority of American voters think the Munich settlement will lead to greater possibility of war rather than a lasting peace. This is evident from two institute surveys, one taken directly after the Munich conference and one just completed. The first showed that 40 per cent thought the parley would lead to peace in Europe while 60 per cent thought it would only encourage the possibility of war. Today the number who believe the Sudeten settlement will bring war has risen to 74 per cent.

"Hitler Breaks Promises"

This sentiment is not surprising in the light of today's survey on Hitler's territorial ambitions. It is clear from the comments expressed by voters that the majority believe Hitler's Sudenten triumph to be not the end of his territorial demands but just the beginning.

"His attitude shows he is out to get all he can," declares a Pennsylvania housewife in the institute survey.

"His lust for power won't let him stop now," adds a woman voter in Phoenix, Ariz.

"Hitler has broken every promise," says a salesman in Ohio. "Why should we believe him now?"

Another typical comment was from a porter in Brooklyn: "Hitler isn't finished now that he's got land from Czechoslovakia. He's looking around for something else to grab."

3 From D. C. Enter Submarine Class

By the Associated Press.

The Navy announced yesterday the personnel of the next class in submarine training, to be convened at the New London, Conn., submarine school January 3.

Among the 24 young officers selected for training in undersea warfare were Ensigns Thomas K. Kimmel, of Washington, son of Rear Admiral H. E. Kimmel, commander of Cruiser Division 7; and Chester W. Nimitz, jr., Wellfleet, Mass., son of Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of Battleship Division 1. Others named were Lieutenants, junior grade, James D. Fulp, Columbia, S. C.; Leslie K. Taylor, Phoebus, Va.; John H. Maurer, Washington; Richard M. Ferrell, Washington, and Ensigns George H. Whiting, Lumberton, N. C.; Charles S. Manning, Cheraw, S. C.; William H. Wright, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; and Robert H. Caldwell, Atlanta.

Cruiser Repulse To Bring British Monarchs to U. S.

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—King George and Queen Elizabeth will make their visit to Canada and the United States next summer on the 32,000-ton Repulse, one of Britain's largest battle cruisers.

An official announcement from Buckingham Palace said the Repulse would be escorted by "two of his majesty's ships of the second cruiser squadron."

The date of departure had not been set, the announcement said, but the monarchs expected to arrive in Canada "about the middle of May."

A semiofficial announcement said the King and Queen would travel from Canada to Washington overland, and return to Canada before starting the homeward voyage.

Science Finds Mechanism of Virgin Birth

Human Ovum Observed Pierced by Needle Begins to Divide

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—The first scientific evidence that human beings have the mechanism of a form of virgin birth known as parthenogenesis was reported to the Philadelphia Therapeutic Society here tonight.

Parthenogenesis is reproduction by unmated mothers. It is common among some insects, worms and crustaceans. For example, virgin aphids, or plant lice, give birth to several successive generations of young, which grow in their bodies without any fertilization.

The human experiment happened in July this year at the Lankensu Hospital Research Institue, Philadelphia. There, during a regular surgical operation, an ovum was obtained from a colored woman.

Ovum Closely Observed

Stanley P. Reimann, M. D., and Bernard Miller, of the institute, took it to their laboratory. In their report tonight they showed this human "egg" not only had not been fertilized but had been freshly produced.

They placed it in a drop of clear, water-white serum extracted from human blood. This drop was allowed to hang from a glass plate so the ovum within could be clearly seen under a microscope.

The tiny "egg" had a transparent covering through which was visible the vitellus, or yolk, certain yellowish granules and a colored object, or "body" near the edge.

The hanging drop was placed on a micro-dissecting table where, under a microscope, two fine pointed needles could be mechanically manipulated.

One needle point was pushed lightly against the transparent covering of the ovum. The needle made a dent, but did not penetrate, which the experimentors said showed the ovum covering is slightly elastic but quite tough.

It is through this covering that a sperm enters an ovum in fertilization. A second, harder pressure caused the needle to penetrate. It was immediately withdrawn.

Begins to Divide

Twenty minutes later, the report declared, this ovum began to show the very first steps that occur when a really fertilized ovum is ready to divide.

This division is the beginning of an embryo. Division in the Philadelphia case was only partial. But other spontaneous changes were described which the experimentors said proved parthenogenetic activity had really started.

"It is concluded," their report stated, "that the human ovum is capable of being artificially stimulated to parthenogenetic activity."

The discovery was of immediate scientific medical value for, the report stated, if even the start of parthenogenesis is possible in human beings, it may explain certain ovarian cysts, some tumors and some questions asked by cancer experts. Some of these growths could be from ova which had started spontaneously to divide in the parthenogenetic way.

Pearl Buck Wins Nobel Prize For '38 With 'The Good Earth'.

When Pearl Buck was told yesterday she had won the 1938 Nobel Prize for literature she said she "just couldn't believe it." She is shown in the office of her publisher-husband, Richard Walsh, who said his wife probably won the prize for her famous book, "The Good Earth," and other works, including "This Proud Heart."

Award Surprise, Since Book Appeared in '31 She's Third American Writer to Get Honor Italian Scientist Also Is Rewarded

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Nov. 10.—An American, Pearl Buck, author of "The Good Earth," and an Italian, Enrico Fermi, of the University of Rome, discoverer of a new element, today won the 1938 Nobel prizes for literature and physics—$37,975 each.

The literature award went to Mrs. Buck for her novel dealing with the China she came to know as the daughter of missionary parents.

Observers commented on the fact "The Good Earth" was published in 1931 and Nobel prizes usually are restricted to works published in the year preceding each award. "The Good Earth" also won the 1932 Pulitzer prize.

Third American Honored

Mrs. Buck, who now lives at Great Neck, N. Y., was born in 1892 at Hillsboro, W. Va. She is the third American to win the Nobel literature award. The others were Sinclair Lewis in 1930 and Eugene O'Neill in 1936.

It was announced Fermi, who is 37 years old, won the physics prize "as a reward for his discovery of new elementary radioactive substances engendered by irradiation of neutrons" and for other research on reactions created by neutrons.

The Swedish Academy of Science, which awards the physics and chemistry prizes, decided to reserve the 1938 chemistry prize for next year.

Author Grateful

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Miss Buck sent the following message to the Swedish Academy in Stockholm:

"I cannot but be deeply appreciative of this honor, which I gratefully accept. I value it the more because of my admiration for Sweden and her people."

Garment Union Finds Lewis Blocks Peace

Efforts Called 'Fruitless' May Shun C. I. O. Parley Green's Stand Recalled

John L. Lewis' unyielding stand in the C. I. O.-A. F. of L. split makes further peace efforts "fruitless" at present, the special peace committee of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union reported yesterday to the union's executive board here.

Acceptance of the report by the board indicated to observers there was great likelihood the board would decide against sending delegates to the convention opening in Pittsburgh today for the purpose of creating a permanent C. I. O. organization, with a constitution.

The garment workers' union now is a member of the C. I. O. as a temporary organization, and as the result of that action stands suspended by the American Federation of Labor. It has been known for some time that David Dubinsky, president of the garment workers' union, has held the view that his organization should proceed alone if some settlement cannot be reached between th A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

Peace Effort Failed

Signed by three vice presidents of the union constituting the peace committee, Luigi Antonini, Isadore Nagler and Julius Hochman, the report detailed the effort of the group last August through conference with William Green, A. F. of L. president, and Lewis to evolve some plan for reconciliation.

"The committee deeply regrets that it has failed in its mission," the report concluded. "Despite the fact that the leaders of the American Federation of Labor and of the C. I. O. both expressed a desire and a need for peace in the labor movement, the position held by John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O., and the conditions outlined by him to your committee as the basis for the resumption of peace negotiations, make our effort for peace at this moment fruitless."

In discussing the conferences, the report said Green declared that although the situation has become more complicated since negotiations were broken off last December, he felt, nevertheless, that the executive council would be ready to resume conferences with the C. I. O. at the point where they were interrupted.

Lewis' Stand Given

The report added that on the following day "Chairman Lewis informed your committee that the C. I. O. was eager for peace, but he maintained that resumption of conferences would be futile unless the A. F. of L. was ready to accept all of the existing C. I. O. organizations and issue charters to them. In cases where jurisdictional or organizational disputes exist, he stated, such disputes should be dealt with only after charters will have been granted by the A. F. of L. and these organizations will be inside the A. F. of L. If this proposal is not acceptable to the A. F. of L., Chairman Lewis offered an alternate proposal to accept all A. F. of L. unions into the C. I. O. on the same basis as outlined above.

"The committee wishes to point out that the proposals made by Chairman Lewis to your committee were identical with the terms he announced as a basis for peace at the convention of the United Mine Workers held shortly after the collapse of the peace conferences last December.

"The members of the committee and President Dubinsky, in the discussion which followed, made every effort to impress upon Chairman Lewis that his proposals were not feasible, that they do not constitute a basis for setlement in so far as they would merely carry over the present conflict into A. F. of L. and would therefore not serve the best interests of peace and a united labor movement. If a stable peace is to be effected, your committee further pointed out, it is essential that all major differences between the unions that function within the C. I. O. and those that function within the A. F. of L., be adjusted in advance of a final reconciliation."

Six Convicts, Keeper Shot In Prison Break

Felons Beat Guards Flee in Truck Battle Police in Street

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 10.—Six desperate convicts broke from the Tennessee penitentiary today amid a bloody gun battle that raged along a thickly-populated Nashville street and ended with five fugitives back in custody, wounded, the sixth dead and Deputy Warden C. C. Woods, of the penitentiary, in grave condition.

Two aides of Woods, Assistant Deputy Warden Hub Sampson and Guard Elmo Green, who, like him, were forced to ride in a prison truck as hostages during the prisoners' wild dash, were less seriously injured. Four other guards were slightly hurt.

Guard John T. Strickland said he and Guards Ed Taylor, Dick Smith and Luis Tollett were lured separately into the prison band room by the convicts on the ruse that some prisoners were drinking shellac. The guards, he said, were seized, their guns taken and they were slashed with homemade knives and beaten. The convicts, then dashed to the deputy warden's office.

The armed prisoners took the officials captive, rushed outside, seized a truck being driven by a trusty and made for the gate. There, officials said, the gatekeeper was held up and disarmed and forced to open the portal under threat of death to the hostages.

As the truck passed out of the prison yard, guards began firing and set up a pursuit which was speedily joined by State and city police in squad cars with sirens screaming.

M. A. Warren, assistant chief of the State highway patrol, said about 20 officers discovered the fugitives in their truck about a mile from the prison on a mixed business and residential street in the city. The pursuers poured pistol, shotgun and machine gun fire into the fleeing vehicle.

"We shot it out with them," Warren said, "and they stopped only when we shot them all down. I think their guns were emptied by that time."

$3,100 Gems Gone, Natty, Dark, Pudgy Man, 35, Is Sought

A well-dressed man asked at the Ayre jewelry store in the Mayflower Hotel for pigskin wrist watch straps yesterday noon. After his departure it was found that two pieces of jewelry valued at $3,100 had also departed from the show window.

Edward E. Ayre, owner of the store, told police that no one but the 35-year-old dark, pudgy man with piercing eyes could have taken the jewels.

He said the items missing were a 13-inch marquise diamond necklace valued at $850, and an emerald and diamond bracelet with five quarter-inch emeralds and rows of diamonds valued at $2,300.

Boyd, Tax Official, Listed as Suicide

A certificate of suicide in the death of William H. Boyd, local attorney, was issued yesterday by Coroner B. F. Redman of Leonardtown, Md.

Coroner Redman held that Boyd, 55, hanged himself in his summer cottage on Wednesday. Boyd, who lived at 2623 Monroe street, northeast, was an attorney in the tax division of the Department of Justice.

Boyd's body was found by state police. He disappeared from his home Wednesday morning.

Outstripping police in an automobile chase through the northeast section of the city on October 27 did Ollie Timberlake, colored, 30, of the 100 block Randolph street northwest, no good yesterday.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe and other members of the vice squad found him yesterday. Last night he was in jail charged with operation of a lottery, possession of numbers slips, and fast driving.

October 27 Sergt. Deyoe chased Timberlake from the vicinity of North Capitol and R streets to the Northeast Market before the colored man escaped afoot. In his abandoned automobile were found 10,000 numbers slips and a small amount of money.

Alert Taxi Driver Scores Twice as Amateur Sleuth

The alertness of a taxi driver, who in the last year has brought about the capture of three robbers, resulted last night in the arrest of four more suspects.

Last week Herbert McAllister, 31, of 1734 M street northwest, witnessed a purse snatching in the 1700 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest. He chased the robber, a young colored man, in his cab and trapped him in an alley.

Last night the purse snatcher and three colored men were identified in 21 purse snatchings.

Quins Recovering, Back on Solid Diet

Callander, Ontario, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The Dionne quintuplets today had their first solid food in 48 hours and although they told Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe their throats were "sore," all were recovering rapidly from the effects of mass operations for infected tonsils and adenoids.

Dr. Dafoe said their conditions were "simply excellent" and they were accepting the inconvenience of sore throats philosophically.

At the same time, the quints' father, Oliva Dionne, revealed that Marie, the largest of the five children, had been so ill from the throat infection last August that she was unconscious and delirious for 48 hours, and it was feared she was dying.

Miss Perkins Sees Co-operative Era In Labor Policies

Bryn Mawr, Pa., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Secretary of Labor Perkins said tonight that the Nation's labor policy has passed the "rudimentary stage" and points toward greater co-operation between workers and their employers to the benefit of the entire country.

Speaking at Bryn Mawr College with Margaret Bondfield, former British Labor minister, Secretary Perkins said that despite legislation designed to improve the American worker's lot, "labor problems cannot be solved by laws."

"If the right balance is to be preserved, if lasting progress is to be made, there must be a spirit of give and take, of compromise now on one side, now on the other, always in the interest of the country as a whole," she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt Pleads For Jobs for Youth

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Mrs. Roosevelt tonight pleaded for help and work "above everything else for the future of youth, who are going to carry this country to success."

Addressing a New York State conference of National Youth Administration Advisory Committees, Mrs. Roosevelt asserted that "some of our young people feel that they don't receive the education that they need, and some employers feel that they don't know enough to do the work they want done."

Ataturk Dies; Builder of Modern Turkey

Nation's Only President Abolished Sultanate Liver Illness Fatal

Istanbul, Nov. 10.—Kemal Ataturk, who built and ruled modern Turkey with a clenched fist, died today at 58.

The president of the National Assembly, Abdul Halik Renda, assumed the interim presidency upon the passing of the ashen-faced "gray wolf." A government proclamation announced convocation of the Assembly to elect a new chief executive, probably tomorrow.

Gen. Ismet Inonu, known as the "Military Bookkeeper," premier for 13 of the 15 years that Ataturk headed the state, was the most likely choice. A parliamentary group of the majority party decided to support Inonu, apparently assuring his election.

Ataturk once said of Inonu, "He is my conscience—he is always on the alert and finds out what is wrong and criticizes me."

Day and night eight physicians had helped Ataturk fight his last illness since mid-October in the great Alabaster Palace of Dolma Bagtche, on the Bosphorus, from which Ataturk had ejected the last Sultan of the old Ottoman Empire.

But the rugged spirit of this man who had always lived as he liked—hard and fast—failed him in the second crisis of two months. He died after 12 hours of coma at 9.05 a. m. (2:05 a. m., E. S. T.) of cirrhosis of the liver.

Same Policy Expected

There were unconfirmed reports the Turkish President whom Parliament named Ataturk—"Father of the Turks"—had left a political testament to guide his successor in his own rigid doctrine of westernization and nationalism.

No one expected Turkey's new leadership to turn in the immediate future from the domestic and foreign balance which Ataturk achieved for this nation, strategically situated between the East and the West.

Before Ataturk became gravely ill in mid-October, he was borrowing money for Turkey with little discrimination from both Britain and Germany, although his early struggle for power was tinged with bitter hatred for the influence of both.

The British and German foreign offices were known to have been interested in his successor and the future course of Turkey.

The body of the one-time Salonika farm boy will lie in a mausoleum in Ankara which Ataturk had turned from a bleak village into the capital of his rebuilt nation. The funeral also will be in Ankara, but the date had not been set.

Constitution to Remain

The death of Kemal Ataturk will not affect the constitutional form of government which he established and maintained in Turkey, Ambassador Mehmet Munir Ertegun told The Post last night.

In an embassy plunged into deep mourning, the Turkish envoy solemnly declared the modern state which Ataturk strove successfully to build out of the old Ottoman Empire will continue along the lines laid out by its creator.

Secretary of State Hull was among the first of many Federal officials and foreign diplomats to offer condolences to Ambassador Ertegun yesterday. The Rumanian and Greek legations, nearby, had their flags at half staff.

The Ambassador pointed out that the constitution provides that, upon the president's death, a new chief executive shall be elected "immediately" by the National Assembly. The choice probably will be made today, he said.

He declined to speculate on Ataturk's successor but noted that Field Marshal Fevzi Cakmak and Fethi Okyar, who are mentioned in reports from Istanbul, are not members of the National Assembly. The constitution says the president must come from the ranks of that body.

But whoever is elected, Turkey's foreign policy will not be changed, it was indicated here. Ambassador Ertegun stressed the warm friendship which his late chieftain evinced toward the United States.

He said the embassy has not yet received instructions on the length of the mourning period.

Night Life Led To Espionage, Fraulein Says

Beautician Testifies Tells of Threat Names Schlueter

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—A doe-eyed German fraulein, on trial as a spy for Hitler's Third Reich, swore in Federal Court today that she had unwittingly become involved in espionage through a desire to taste New York night life.

The witness, Johanna (Jenni) Hofmann, 26, red-haired former beauty salon operator on a German liner, is on trial with two co-defendants, Erich Glaser, 28, one-time United States Army Air Corps private, and Otto Hermann Voss, 38, an airplane mechanic.

All face maximum sentences of 20 years in prison.

Miss Hofmann testified she became friendly with Karl Schlueter, scar-faced "Fuehrer" of the liner Europa's crew and alleged contact man of a spy ring, only because he promised to take her to a cabaret here while her ship was in port.

But invariably he defaulted on his promise, she said, after using her as a decoy accomplice on visits to other members of the ring.

She said they visited Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, former German bund leader, now a fugitive in Germany, and Guenther Gustav Rumrich, 32, United States Army deserter, who has confessed his espionage activities and testified for the Government.

She acknowledged she carried letters and other documents when she went on Schlueter's rounds with him, and said when her suspicions were finally aroused and she pleaded with him to let her alone, he threatened her.

Court adjourned until Monday.

French Bar Parades, Fear Veteran Riots

Only 1 Scheduled Nazi 'Peace' Attacked Want New Cabinet

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Fearful of Armistice Day disorders the French government tonight banned any parades except the annual march of war veterans to the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier.

Mobile guards were concentrated in Paris as precaution against disorders which might result from war veterans' demands for formation of a new "public safety" cabinet.

Should the veterans demonstrate with a march on the Elysee Palace, which was one of the forbidden places, to present their demands to President Lebrun or seek similar means of bringing their ideas to the nation's attention, the government's main fear was that history might repeat itself.

Premier Daladier was head of the cabinet which was forced to resign after riots in 1934, when troops killed 32 veterans in march to the Chamber of Deputies.

Behind the holiday enthusiasm many of the former soldiers saw France's negotiations in the "peace of Munich" as an open admission that France had failed to prevent her former enemy from regaining its pre-war strength and snatching the leadership of continental Europe.

Japanese Ring Strategic City in Hunan 'Triangle'

Shanghai (Friday), Nov. 11 (U.P.).—The great nut-cracker campaign of the Japanese army to crush Gen. Chiang's nationalist Chinese forces in the Henyang triangle of Hunan province neared the end of its first phase otday.

The Japanese northern army, carrying the brunt of the attack, had surrounded Yoghow, strategic Chinese center on the Hankow-Canton Railway on the west bank of Lake Tung-Ting, on three sides, and Japanese warships, advancing up the Yangtze, were bombarding Chinese fortified positions guarding the entrance to the lake from the river.

Once the Yochow-Lake Tung-Ting area is cleared, an operation the Japanese hope to complete within a fortnight, Japanese columns will be in position to finak Changsha, the Hunan capital, and begin the final phase of the battle—an atack on Henyang.

Siamese Prince Arrives in U. S.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 10.—Prince Chalermbol of Siam, first cousin of 13-year-old King Ananda Mahibol of Siam and nephew of former King Prajadhipok, who abdicated, arrived in New York today to study law enforcement in the United States. The prince, 26, is district crime inspector in Siam. He recently observed police work in England, France and Germany, and from the United States will go to Japan.

His comparative study has led Prince Chalermbol to the conclusion there are fewer major criminals in Siam than anywhere else.

Britain Rejects Plan to Invite U.S. Delegates To Arab-Jewish Parley on Palestine

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 10.—The British government today turned aside suggestions the United States should be invited to send delegates to the round table conference of Arabs, Jews and British, which is scheduled to assemble at London next month to seek a peaceful settlement of the Palestine trouble.

While the colonial and dominion secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, was on the floor of the House of Commons, answering questions about Britain's policy or lack of policy in Palestine, a Labor member, Tom Williams, urged the government to consider the advisability of inviting representatives of the United States and Poland, both of which he said were "very concerned" about the problem, having large Jewish populations.

MacDonald replied his government recognized other countries were concerned and their interests should be kept fully in mind. However, he objected that if Britain were to start asking additional representatives it would be "very difficult to know where to draw the lines." He added there are many American Jews represented in the official Jewish agency for Palestine, which has been invited to represent the Zionist world at the conference.

MacDonald said if any treaty rights of the United States were involved, Britain would enter into discussion with the United States immediately.

In addition to the Palestine Arabs, MacDonald disclosed the governments of Egypt, Arak, Saudi Arabia, the Yemen and Transjordan have been invited to be represented at the London talks. The Arabs of Syria and the Lebanon will not be directly represented, as they are under French mandatory control, but Britain promises to inform the French of any developments affecting Syria and the Lebanon.

Plans for the addition of between 5,000 and 6,000 planes to the British air force by 1941, in order to increase its first-line strength 30 per cent above existing production schedules, were announced in Commons by Sir Kingsley Wood, air minister.

Expansion of the air force constitutes Britain's first step toward speeding up its five-year permanent program, as a direct consequence of the Munich "peace with honor."

On the basis of the current production scheme, which calls for 2,370 first line planes by March, 1940, the increase should provide a first line strength of approximately 3100 machines by 1941. Assuming two warplanes would be held in reserve for every one sent to the front lines, the British may have a total of nearly 10,000 aircraft two years from now. The German air force was reported to have attained this figure in September.

Nazis Seize Americans as Nation Riots

Nazi

because he tried to take motion pictures of smashed Jewish shops.

[Anton Celler, of Hampden, Conn., was arrested by a plainclothes storm trooper on Unter den Linden and was taken to a police station where he resisted efforts to confiscate his camera, with which he had taken several pictures. The American consulate finally obtained his release and he retained his camera.

[Carter Royston Bryan, of Peoria, Ill., a correspondent of the London Times, was arrested by Nazi police in Vienna near the scene of a burning synagogue in the second district, set on fire by a Nazi mob. Police later released him with an apology and a reprimand to storm troopers who had seized him.

[He returned to the synagogue and was arrested again by another group, but was released en route to the police station when he was recognized by the men who had arrested him the first time.

[Berlin stores of three naturalized Americans, all of whom are in the United States at present, were entered and damaged, according to reports reaching the American consulate. The consulate immediately demanded, and obtained, promises of police protection for the three properties.—Editor's Note.]

Few Police Seen

At the height of the demonstration few police were seen. One detachment of police in the heart of Berlin was charged by a mob which pushed them aside and began plundering.

After more than 12 hours of violence Goebbels appealed to the people to refrain from further demonstrations.

The appeal was issued at 4 p. m., but at first apparently had no effect in the West End of Berlin. Three hours later it was repeated by radio. Then police appeared on Koenigstrasse, where a number of Jewish shops are situated, arrested 21 looters and cleared the street.

"The justifiable and understandable indignation of the German people over the cowardly Jewish murder of a German diplomat in Paris has resulted during the past night in extensive demonstrations," Goebbels' appeal said.

"In numerous cities and communities of the Reich, acts of violence were committed against Jewish buildings and businesses.

"The entire population is now, however, strictly requested to desist immediately from all further demonstrations and actions of whatever nature against Jewdom. "The final answer to Jewry will be given in the form of laws or decrees."

All Jews in Munich were told that they must leave the country within 48 hours, and many Jews feared Goebbel's concluding statement was a threat the Munich order would be made nation-wide.

All of Vienna's 21 synagogues were reported burned, wrecked or damaged. Seven of Berlin's 20 synagogues were burned.

In Vienna, 22 Jews were said to have committed suicide. A number of Jews were arrested while they waited outside the British consulate seeking visas to England. A dispatch from Vienna said truckloads of Jews were taken by storm troopers to Doliner street and put them to work tearing down a synagogue.

Munich Bank Raided

In Munich, Aufhaeusers, the only remaining Jewish bank, was raided. One director and his wife committed suicide and another was taken to a concentration camp.

Private houses of Jews were entered at Nurnberg. Children were thrown out of their beds. Furniture was smashed.

Cologne crowds broke windows in nearly every Jewish shop, forced entrance into a synagogue, overturned its seats and smashed the windows.

The Salzburg synagogue was destroyed and shops of Jewish tradesmen there were looted.

Potsdam, Treutlinge, Bamberg, Bayreuth, Everswalde, Brandenburg and Cottbus all reported synagogues raided, demolished or burned.

In Friedrichstrasse, in downtown Berlin, crowds pushed police aside in their hunt for plunder. Late in the afternoon fire broke out in Israel's department store near Alexanderplatz, but firemen soon extinguished the blaze.

Rome, Nov. 10 (AP).—A Vatican news service said tonight the Holy See would protest a marriage restriction decreed today by the Italian cabinet to further the new Fascist policy of "Aryanism."

The service said the restriction would be protested as "a violation of the concordat"—the accord between the Italian government and the Vatican.

The Vatican objected, this source said, to article 1 of the new law prohibiting "marriage of an Italian citizen of the Aryan race with a person belonging to another race." The law says a marriage "in violation of this prohibition is null."

Italian sources said Mgr. Francesco Borgongini Duca, papal nuncio to the Italian government, had made futile approaches to foreign minister Ciano.

Father Tacchi-Venturi, who often has served as a conciliatory emissary between Pope Pius and Premier Mussolini, was understood to have made direct approaches to Il Duce.

Both churchmen were understood to have advised that the Vatican could not accept such a law.

Today's decree laws restricted occupations and property ownership of Italy's 57,425 Jews, aside from the marriage prohibition.

The property restrictions were expected particularly to affect the holdings of insurance companies with which Jews have been prominently associated. The decree prohibit Jewish ownership of urban buildings of taxable value exceeding 20,000 lire ($1,052.)

Jews and other non-Aryans were forbidden to marry Aryan Italians, and in cases where children of Jewish fathers are regarded as Christians they may be taken away from parental control if the father is found educating them in the Hebrew faith or anti-fascism.

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP)—The young Polish Jew who assassinated the secretary of the German Embassy, examined today by alienists, was reported to have wept when he learned his act brought new mob vengeance against Jews in Germany.

Seventeen-year-old Herschel Grynszpan had said he shot Ernst Rath at the embassy Monday to protest anti-Semitism in Germany. Vom Rath died yesterday.

Vom Rath's body lay in state at the embassy and thousands of Germans, diplomats and others called early today to pay their respects.

There were private services this afternoon around the coffin and Ambassador Count Johannes von Welczeck read a eulogy before the embassy staff.

The embassy announced a public funeral for noon Saturday in the German Protestant Church, of Paris, with representatives of the French government and the Paris diplomatic corps in attendance.

After the services the body will be sent to Dusseldorf, Germany.

Cuba's 'Strong Man' Meets U. S. Army Chief of Staff

Franco Flanks Loyalists in Fog, Traps Hundreds

Hendaye, France, Nov. 10 (U.P.)—Taking advantage of a heavy fog, Gen. Franco today staged a surprise turning movement which trapped hundreds of loyalists on the Ebro front.

Loyalists were evacuating stocks of food and munitions across to the east bank of the river, it was reported, leaving behind entrenched machine-gunners to hold the slopes down to the river. The pontoon and stationary bridges were bombed heavily by insurgent planes.

In a desperate effort to turn Franco's attention from the Ebro sector—on which casualties have been more than 75,000 in four months—loyalists poured men across the Segre River to menace Lerida.

'Strong Man' Of Cuba Here On First Visit

Batista

States, Cuba and other Allied nations to mark the twentieth anniversary of the conclusion of their struggle "to make the world safe for democracy," the latter phrase being supplied by the Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, Cuban Ambassador. Reporters surrounding the swarthy dictator smiled at the last words, but Dr. Fraga told them, "It's nothing to laugh about."

Smartly attired in olive drab uniform and polished boots and spurs, the former sergeant who rose to power after leading Cuba's "enlisted man's revolt" of 1933 was met at the Union Station yesterday morning by top-ranking officers of the U. S. Army, including Gen. Craig and Col. John A. Crane, head of the military attache and foreign liaison branch of the Military Intelligence Division. Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, was present with the military and diplomatic officials.

Greeted by Welles

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, American Ambassador to Cuba when Batista staged his coup five years ago, was first to greet the soldier as he stepped vigorously from the train. Responding in Spanish to Welles' greeting, Col. Batista said "it is a great pleasure to be here." This is his first journey outside Cuba.

Col. Batista and his party traveled by special train from Miami, Fla., to the Capital, after flying from Havana Wednesday. He told reporters he finds Washington "extraordinarily magnificent."

Smiling broadly throughout the proceedings, he was led through the state entrance of the station to be greeted by strains of the Cuban national anthem, played by the U. S. Army Band, and a general's salute from trumpeters. Cavalry from Fort Myer cleared the way for Col. Batista's car, which moved off to the Cuban Embassy with a heavy police escort, accompanied by the cheers of Cuban citizens who had gathered at the station.

Later in the day he paid courtesy calls to Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of War Woodring.

Col. Batista will occupy a place of honor in Arlington Amphitheater this morning at the exercises following laying of a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by President Roosevelt. The day will be climaxed by President Roosevelt's reception of Col. Batista at tea in the White House. Tomorrow morning the Cuban will make his own tribute at the tomb and then place a wreath at the mast of the U. S. S. Maine, commemorating the incident which brought America into war with Spain 40 years ago and led to liberation of Cuba.

The visitor will review troops at Fort Myer before motoring to Mount Vernon.

Motorcycle police and plainclothesmen are guarding all the Cuban chief's movements in Washington. He leaves Sunday for a one-day visit in New York before returning to Havana.

Ammunition Isle Blows Up Off Havana

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Nov. 10.—A series of explosions lasting more than an hour and a half occurred today at ammunition dumps on an artificial island off the shore of Luyano, a suburb of Havana.

At 3:20 p. m. officials said the situation was under control and the explosions appeared to have ended. All persons living on the island were reported safe, and officials said it was believed there were no casualties. Military control had been established over the area soon after the blasts began.

The first blast occurred at 1:35 p. m., and the explosions were continuing at 3 p. m.

Three houses on White Point Island, near the shore of Luyano, were destroyed by the explosion.

Army authorities said the dumps consisted of warehouses for commercial explosives and were not used for army supplies.

While the explosions could be heard in Havana officials emphasized that there was no danger to the city.

[Lieut. Gonzales, commanding the small force stationed on the island, said there were no casualties among his detachment or neighbors of the magazines, the United Press said.

[The magazines were set afire following the blasts which occurred shortly after noon.

[Ambulances and fire-fighting apparatus were sent to the scene from Havana.—Editor's note.]

A. M. A. Urges Court to Void U. S. Subpena

Decision Reserved Likely on Monday
'Poaching' Assailed

Denouncing Government tactics as oppressive and unreasonable, the American Medical Association yesterday urged District Court to halt a "fishing expedition" for evidence in its records that its campaign against group health methods violated the Sherman antitrust act.

After nearly two hours of argument, Justice Proctor reserved decision on the A. M. A. motion to quash a subpena to bring its files before the extraordinary grand jury which yesterday closed its fourth week of investigating the A. M. A. and the District Medical Society.

Seth Richardson, A. M. A. counsel, told the court that to comply with the order his clients would have to examine every paper preserved in their nine-story office building. "If there ever was a subpena that was oppressive and unreasonable, this is it," he said. "It is improper from first to last. This is not mere fishing, it is poaching. And it is a question of the poacher making the owner do the fishing for him."

Richardson read from the summons one of the three sections of which commanded:

"Bring with you:

"All minutes (of meetings of the board of trustees), letters, telegrams, correspondence, messages, memoranda, reports, notes or other documents, made, written, sent, or received . . . from January 1, 1935, to October 15, 1938, referring or relating to any individual, group, or organization, or member of the medical staffs of such groups or organizations, or members of such groups or organizations, engaged in providing or proposing or attempting to provide prepaid medical care . . . or attempting to engage in low cost 'group practice' of medicine."

One of the other sections was similar; the other ordered produced any such papers relating to Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington, and to several other such units, which were named.

Sutherland Quoted

John Lewin, a special assistant to the Attorney General, defended the subpena, saying the section which named G. H. A. followed exactly the form approved by Justice Sutherland in a Supreme Court decision in another case. Richardson retorted that Lewin said nothing about the other two sections, which followed exactly the forms denounced by the Supreme Court, in other cases, as so sweeping that it was unreasonable to expect anybody to comply with them.

The A. M. A. records were sought to support the Government's charge that the A. M. A. was a conspiracy in restraint of trade and that its efforts against G. H. A. were part of an unlawful, Nation-wide combination, which included harassment of group practice units by lawsuit, threats against their professional men, pressure on hospitals to exclude them and expulsion of their physicians from medical societies.

Except for occasional statements by its officials when they were called before the grand jury, the A. M. A. has watched the investigation in silence for four weeks. Not until yesterday did it make any effort to fight back.

Richardson said he would not press the point that the records sought were confidential, but he said it was too much to expect the A. M. A., upon a sudden order, to go through all its papers and scrutinize every one to see whether it was about a subject mentioned in the subpoena. One of the subjects, he pointed out, went back for 22 years.

Decision Due Monday

He added that much of the material was not legally relevant to the investigation and that any indictment returned because of it would be thrown out any way.

Lewis argued that a witness, which is all the A. M. A. is so far, cannot dispute the grand jury's powers and that the jury may make any investigation it pleases.

"Suppose the grand jury decides to find out who is right in the Spanish war," Richardson said. "That's as reasonable as what they are trying to do here. It would come under this doctrine that the grand jury may rove at will. The law knows no such doctrine."

Justice Proctor asked for the names of the cases to which the lawyers had referred. Lewin proffered him the books he had been reading. The judge explained that he had the law books in his own library and wanted only the page numbers of the pages and volumes.

The decision will probably be handed down Monday. The extraordinary grand jury is in adjournment until then.

Sales Association Banquet Tomorrow

The Washington Sales Representatives Association will hold its fifth annual banquet Saturday, beginning at 7 p. m., at the Willard Hotel. Executives of many of the country's leading food manufacturers are expected in the gathering of 250.

According to Ed K. Crone, chairman of the entertainment committee an elaborate entertainment program has been arranged. Guest speakers will be Representative Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and Jo V. Morgan, of the District Board of Tax Appeals.

In addition to Charles D. Wright, the association president, who will preside at the banquet, other officials are E. K. Crone, first vice president; J. M. Eader, second vice president; Walter Leaman, secretary; C. E. Schulz, recording secretary, and O. W. Shumate, treasurer. The association was formed five years ago to promote closer relationship between buyer and seller in Washington's food business, which is estimated to be $70,000,000 annually.

seem to be about at rock bottom levels, and increased workers' buying is bringing immediate reorders of goods from manufacturers."

The A. F. L. cited Standard Statistics forecasts of a continuing business rise in November and said that "if this occurs it will lift business volumes above those of November, 1937."

A summary of business gains said:

"Because the automobile and building industries are leading the recovery, the demand for heavy goods, such as steel and lumber, is increasing along with the demand for consumers' goods, making this a well-balanced and general recovery."

Roper, in Houston, Tex., for a meeting of the Business Advisory Council, told the Associated Press:

"Greater progress for all can be translated into reality only in proportion to the amount of courage and foresight that is directed to existing opportunities.

"Significant of the soundness of our economic system is the success that resulted from the recent period of taking hold under difficulties that included foreign war tension."

Commissioner Isador Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said yesterday that weakening prices for farm products and foods largely accounted for a decrease of .4 per cent in the bureau's wholesale commodity price index for the week ended November 5.

"The decline offset the gain of the preceding week," he said, "and placed the all-commodity index at 77.3 per cent of the 1926 average. The combined index of over 800 price series is .6 per cent below a month ago and 7.8 per cent below a year ago."

Secretary Wallace Seeks Farm Plans From New Republican Representatives

tension" of surplus export subsidies.

Other developments:

The AAA announced the Government would make loans on this year's corn crop at the rate of 57 cents per bushel. The corn loan announcement followed AAA estimates of a 2,480,958,000-bushel corn crop—21,642,000 bushels in excess of last month's forecast.

Secretary Wallace conferred with a group of retail merchants on his "two-price" plan for subsidizing sale of surplus farm commodities to low income consumers. Wallace said "they had certain fears and I think I allayed some of them." He said in "a broad general way" they offered co-operation.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry Brown will confer today with representative cotton bedding manufacturers on proposals to supply surplus Government loan cotton at subsidy prices for manufacture of mattresses to be sold to low income consumers.

Wallace yesterday reiterated his belief that present farm legislation "furnishes the best framework for an enduring agricultural program" but said election results should be analyzed in terms of agricultural policy.

Asked what farm act changes he intended to recommend, he said:

"Let's have these folks offer something. Here they come, fresh from the people, and I hope they will confer with me. Let's see what they've got."

He said he reserved the right to oppose any program he believed would reduce the income of the farmers, work hardships to other groups, or break down after a short trial.

Democratic election reverses in the Middle West, he said, were votes against "unemployment and low farm prices" rather than the farm program and other Administration policies. But he added: "New Congressmen will probably be correct in concluding that they have a mandate from the people to do what is possible to bring about a greater income for farmers, less unemployment for labor and a higher standard of living for all of us."

Wallace told reporters he planned to recommend only "minor changes" in the 1938 farm act when Congress convenes, dealing mainly with administrative questions.

In analyzing election returns, he said there were now about 43 Republican House members from the corn belt (leaving out Chicago and Cleveland), as compared with 35 Democratic House members.

"It seems rather clear," he said, "that the election in the corn and wheat region does mean that the voters want something positive done to help the income of the corn and wheat farmers. The only question is how it can be done most constructively. It would, of course, be better to do nothing than to do the wrong thing."

Questioned on plans for marketing farm surpluses in South America, Wallace said he would "do whatever best promotes unity in this hemisphere."

When pressed for information on the Brazilian mission of Frank Theis (grain dealer, formerly connected with the department), Wallace asked reporters to stop questioning on this tangent. He agreed to answer one question as a "bargain" in return. The answer was that he has conferred with State Department officials in the past week.

Ambassador Espil yesterday had conferred with Hull on directions from President Roberto M. Ortiz of Argentine that he investigate persistent reports that the United States is studying possibility of bartering 50,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat for Brazilian coffee.

Brazil imports about 30,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, and Argentina is its largest supplier.

The AAA has been attempting to subsidize exports of wheat abroad to insure foreign sales of about 100,000,000 bushels, but the program is moving slowly. Wallace told reporters subsidized exports were being attempted "only on a temporary basis, to insure our fair share of the world market."

"Excessive use," he said, "would only promote discord among nations."

He said his "two-price" plan of subsidizing surplus sales to poorer domestic consumers was still in the experimental stage, and no additional legislation would be needed in the trial stages.

From Rio de Janeiro, Theis was quoted last night by the Associated Press as describing himself as a "Yankee trader" studying the possibilities of selling United States wheat in South America and saying there was "nothing to" reports of a barter of wheat for coffee.

During yesterday's meeting with the retailers, Wallace indicated that the Government is unwilling to take any steps which might disrupt business or cause increased unemployment.

The retailers told Wallace that it would be necessary to maintain retail employment as one important means to recovery and warned that the "two-price" plan might serve to diminish employment in that field.

Those attending, in addition to Department officials, were:

Saul Cohn, president, National Retail Dry Goods Association; Maj. Benjamin H. Hamm, vice president; Lew Hahn, general manager of the former organization; David R. Craig, president, American Retail Federation, and Paul Kelly, vice president of the federation; Roscoe R. Rau, president of the Retailers' National Council and Executive vice president of the National Retail Furniture Association, and Harold R. Young, Washington secretary of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Who Wins This Argument?

Mr. Lindley States His Case In Monday's Washington Post

Mr. Lippmann Replies in His Column in Tuesday's Post

Significant Silence

By Ernest K. Lindley

Looking Back at Results

1933-38

The significant silences of the campaign, rather than the oratory, measure the distance we have traveled.

WHAT IS LEFT unsaid in a campaign may be as revealing as what is said.

In this campaign there has been no important criticism of the President's handling of our affairs during the recent European crisis. Yet that crisis occurred when it might have created campaign issues of the greatest moment.

LINDLEY.

There has been no important dissent from the President's thesis that the national defense must be strengthened. As the details of the program are worked out and presented there will be debate, perhaps sharp differences, but on the general aim there seems to be substantial agreement.

ON THE DOMESTIC front the silences of the opposition are most significant. Among the creations of the Roosevelt Administration which have come through this campaign free of major criticism are:

The Civilian Conservation Corps.

The National Youth Administration.

The slum-clearance program of the United States Housing Authority.

The Securities and Exchange Commission and the three major laws which it administers—including the Public Utility Holding Company act.

The Soil Conservation Service.

PWA.

The banking legislation of the last four years.

The Tennessee Valley Authority—which was earmarked for a major attack until the TVA investigation blew up last summer.

THE LIST could be extended.

The Fair Labor Standards act has become law without a national uproar.

There has been no attack on the principle of social insurance. Criticism is addressed to certain of its fiscal features, but the main demand is for the application of the principle on a greater scale.

If all the avowals could be taken at face value, nearly everybody now acknowledges that the protection of the right to bargain collectively is a proper function of Government. Here one is entitled to doubt that real accord has been reached. Some of the amendments proposed to the national labor relations act would come near to destroying it. But the area in which unionism is a reality and collective bargaining is the practice has rapidly expanded. It is significant that even the diehard opposition has turned from the sledge-hammer to the monkey-wrench.

WPA IS under fire, but the campaign for the cash dole, in preference to work for the unemployed, has gone underground. Even the clamor for an immediate balancing of the budget has become less strident: to many businessmen have seen with their own eyes how the 1938 spending program stopped a recession and started the present enjoyable upswing.

Less than six years ago none of these laws and agencies existed. Most of them came into being only after hard legislative struggles and in the face of an hysterical opposition. Two years ago many of them were still solemnly asserted to be unconstitutional—and these judgments were in harmony with the doctrine of a majority of the Supreme Court as it was then constituted. Some of the veterans of the fight against the Supreme Court bill still like to hash over their days of glory. But those have gone. After all the President won. The Supreme Court now has a liberal majority and the issue of 1937 is dead.

EVERY ONE of those reforms has involved new or wider uses of the power of the Federal Government. A few orators and publicists still declaim against the danger of centralized power. They are against it in the abstract—and so is almost everyone else. But few politicians advocate openly the undoing of what has been done. Most of them have found that there is a big vein of practicality in the American people.

Significant also is the silence with which the opposition has observed the preparations that have been made in full view for still further reforms. First, there is the monopoly investigation. This investigation has not shown its hand, it is true. It is still in the preliminary stages and the first public hearings were postponed until after election. But only a few months ago it was openly charged that the main purpose of the inquiry was political in the narrow sense. The investigation certainly will cause many businessmen discomfort; but they seem wisely to have decided to wait and see what happens.

IN PLAIN SIGHT the Social Security Board has been preparing amendments which will greatly broaden the scope of the social security act. There has been no outcry. Indeed, the official proposals are sensibly mild beside those with which several candidates of both parties are flirting.

A big national health program is in the making. Its content was advertised to the country in July. Government administrators and experts have been conferring with representatives of the American Medical Association and other professional groups. There have been few cries of alarm; in fact, in this field, public opinion seems to have run well ahead of the New Deal.

The election Tuesday may register a few small changes in the political weather; but you have to look back only a few years to realize how the political climate has changed.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Opposition

IN THIS INTERVAL when the election speeches have all been delivered and the votes have not yet been counted, I have been remembering some remarks made many years ago by George Santayana. The practice of liberty as we understand it in America presupposes two things, said he. "That all concerned are fundamentally unanimous, and that each has a plastic nature, which he is willing to modify." Translated into the words that we now use, this would mean that a democratic order will work when all concerned are agreed on ultimate objectives, when no sizable number of voters are revolutionary and irreconcilable, and when men are willing to change their minds and modify their actions as a result of debate with their opponents.

LIPPMANN.

Thinking about Mr. Santayana's remark, I read an article by my colleague, Mr. Ernest K. Lindley, in which he printed a list of New Deal measures "that have come through this campaign free of major criticism." It is an impressive list, extending from the Civilian Conservation Corps through the banking laws and the laws administered by the Securities and Exchange Commission to the TVA. Mr. Lindley says that these measures came into being in the face of an "hysterical struggle" but that now there is no avowed or important opposition. And then, though he does not say so in so many words, Mr. Lindley leaves the reader with the impression that the opposition has been as ineffective as it has been stupid and reactionary, and that in the working out of the New Deal opposition and criticism have been a nuisance rather than a benefit.

MR. LINDLEY is, I think, very much mistaken about the historical facts and in his reasoning from the facts. It is in the main true that at the end of six years of excited controversy a great many of the major measures of the New Deal are generally accepted. I think, as he does, that this is a good thing. But it is not true that the measures that are now accepted are the same measures we should have had if there had been no opposition. It has been opposition, both from the outside of the New Deal and from the inside, which has modified the initial proposals and their subsequent administration. And it has been in this process of give and take that the measures which are now acceptable have been made acceptable to the great majority. The result which Mr. Lindley approves could not have been achieved without the opposition which he scorns.

Had opposition been ineffective in the past six years, there would be no such general agreement on so many principles and measures as there is today. For the measures would have been in many ways different and their administration would have been very different. In this very struggle, which Mr. Lindley dismisses as "hysterical," the New Dealers and their opponents have learned from each other, and if they now are able to agree on so many things, it is precisely because they have had to modify their principles and their practice.

FOR A SPECIFIC example, Mr. Lindley cites the Supreme Court bill, saying "after all, the President won. The Supreme Court now has a liberal majority and the issue of 1937 is dead." No doubt the issue is dead. But suppose there had been no opposition, and suppose the bill had passed. Would the issue be dead? Would the American people feel the same way about a "liberalization" of the Court, achieved by destroying its independence and packing it, as they do about a change arrived at without such a subversive procedure? They would not. Had the bill passed because there was no opposition to prevent it, we should almost certainly find ourselves today in the midst of a bitter constitutional struggle.

"What is left unsaid in a campaign," writes Mr. Lindley, "may be as revealing as what is said." That is quite true, and among the significant things left unsaid have been all the things that were said in 1937 when the Supreme Court bill was introduced.

THE ONLY REASON for dwelling on all this is that if we are to preserve democracy, we must understand its principles. And the principle which distinguishes it from all other forms of government is that in a democracy the opposition is not only tolerated as constitutional but must be maintained because it is in fact indispensable.

The democratic system cannot be operated without effective opposition. For in making the great experiment of governing people by consent rather than by coercion, it is not sufficient that the party in power should have a majority. It is just as necessary that it should never outrage the minority. That means that it must listen to the minority and be moved by the criticisms of the minority. That means that its measures must take account of the minority's objections and that in administering measures it must remember that the minority may become the majority. But political human nature being what it is, men dislike opposition and will not listen to it unless the opposition is too strong to be ignored. That is why democracies pay a salary to the leader of the opposition instead of putting him in jail.

The opposition is indispensable. A good statesman always learns more from his opponents than from his fervent supporters. For his supporters will push him to disaster unless his opponents show him where the dangers are. So if he is wise, he will often pray to be delivered from his friends because they will ruin him. But, though it hurts, he ought also to pray never to be left without opponents. For they keep him on the path of reason and good sense.

THE NATIONAL UNITY of a free people depends upon a sufficiently even balance of political power to make it impracticable for the administration to be arbitrary and for the opposition to be revolutionary and irreconcilable. Where that balance no longer exists, democracy perishes. For unless all the citizens of a state are forced by circumstances to compromise, unless they feel that they can affect policy but that no one can wholly dominate it, unless by habit and necessity they have to give and take, freedom cannot be maintained.

Freedom is a way of life for moderate men, not for willful and fanatic men. For the conflicts of irreconcilables lead to a chaotic disorder that only a tyrant can deal with.

Court Stiffens Sentences of Policy Runners

the court gave his warning to the racketeers that they could expect no mercy from him in the future.

Assistant District Attorney Murray prosecuted the men sentenced by Justice Proctor yesterday. They were James D. Smith, 29, colored, who was jailed for 6 to 24 months, and Samuel Myers, colored, whose term was 7 to 24 months.

"Heretofore," Justice Proctor explained, "I have been inclined to leniency for these writers and other numbers workers. I have felt that the head men ought to be reached."

But, he said, the racket has continued to operate, and something must be done. So his policy was going to be stiff sentences in numbers cases.

Drive Launched To Help Hospice

A drive to raise funds for remodeling, furnishing and operating the Girls' Club and Hospice of the Volunteers of America was launched last night at a meeting of the campaign committee at the hospice, 1525 Sixteenth street northwest.

Two-score men and women enlisted in the campaign under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, executive director of the District Tuberculosis Association. Mrs. Walter N. Fry, president of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, former president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, were announced as vice chairmen.

Speeches were made by Raymond Crist, Dr. M. Burtrum Crabill, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, Mrs. Esther Bair, Mrs. Irene Johnson, Miss Sibyl Baker and Maj. H. Mills Eroh.

home without comment on the results. An aide said, however, that "he feels grand."

Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said yesterday, before leaving on a Texas hunting trip, that "the reason the Republicans won in Pennsylvania is that they got more votes than the Democrats."

Senator James J. Davis, his Republican colleague, who won a smashing victory over Gov. George H. Earle Tuesday, announced he would sail Sunday for England to make a study of British labor legislation.

Davis would not state his position on amendment of the Wagner labor relations act. He will make his study in that connection.

Davis, personally indorsed by William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was opposed by both the State federation and the Committee for Industrial Organization. Green is asking sharp revision of the Wagner act, and has charged C.I.O. favoritism by the National Labor Relations Board.

Davis said he thought any amendments to the act should be proposed by "friends of labor." He said he thought Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, should take the lead in any revision of the act.

The new power of the Republicans in the House could best be illustrated by the fact that with their strength of 171 they would need but 47 anti-New Deal Democratic votes to give them a majority. There are more conservative Democrats in the House than that, and they could operate effectively in coalition to defeat any extension of the New Deal.

In the Senate the Republicans' strength will be more meager, although probably more vocal. Their total of 23 seats would need the aid of 26 anti-New Deal Democrats to function as an insuperable obstacle to reform measures. But here too their strength cannot be underestimated, observers said, since the dramatic object lesson of the elections was that the 100 per cent, outright followers of the President, were most vividly ousted by the voters.

Ickes, in talking to the press, said:

"Many Republicans outpromised the Democrats on liberal policies. How many Republicans for instance, favored the Townsend plan?——

People didn't swing conservative in the election—it was the reaching out for economic security, and in doing it voters frequently followed false gods.

"Liberal sentiment is as strong as ever if not even stronger. If President Roosevelt had run for re-election on Tuesday he would have been victorious.

"I have always seen the possibility that he might be drafted for a third term."

Ickes said he didn't believe it necessary for the Democrats to start immediate rally of the liberals, although he promised to assist Mayor LaGuardia of New York in his forthcoming trip to Washington to discuss liberal strategy.

"It is not necessary to rush out and start building a liberal party, because President Roosevelt is still the leader of all liberals."

Gallup Poll Wins Plaudits Of Both Sides

Gallup

Gallup polls of those dates demonstrated."

"You are to be congratulated on being among the first to perceive the merit of the scientific method applied by the Gallup poll which has again demonstrated its remarkable accuracy in sampling public opinion throughout the country and in forecasting elections." Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, said in a telegram to Mr. Meyer. "The mere counting of votes becomes almost an anticlimax."

The following comment was made by John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in a letter to Meyer:

Hamilton's Comment

"In view of the outcome of yesterday's elections, I cannot refrain from writing you a word of congratulations regarding the Gallup Poll.

"Again Dr. George Gallup has demonstrated the soundness of the principles he follows in ascertaining the trend of public opinion. In forecasting this year's Congressional elections, Dr. Gallup not only accurately reported the national trend made apparent to all by Tuesday's election, but he came strikingly close to putting his finger exactly on the number of House seats which Republicans would capture. Most amazing, however, was the hair-line accuracy of his forecast on the New York Governorship race. Dr. Gallup's fine record of achievement in this largely unexplored field, merits the continued confidence of the country. He and The Washington Post are to be congratulated on this latest evidence of accurate forecasting."

Hurja Lauds Honesty

Emil Hurja, a student of public opinion and national trends, said: "Politicians, constitutionally and habitually, are not guilty of much objective thinking. The best handy guide devised for them to date is embraced in the Gallup poll. The Gallup record in Tuesday's elections is an excellent example of clear, honest analysis of political trends.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the Veterans' Administration, said that "the remarkable closeness between the Gallup poll and the final returns attests to the soundness of the sampling methods used."

"I have been very much interested in the various Gallup polls and especially in the polls carried during the recent campaign," wired Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas. "I think the Gallup organization is to be congratulated upon its almost uncanny accuracy in recording public opinion as reflected in the results of the election."

Whiling Away Minutes in Death Cell at Dog Pound

Skippy, 2-year-old mixture of airedale and German shepherd, doesn't understand why he was taken yesterday to the pound from his old playgrounds near 3977 First street southwest and his three favorite playmates, the teenage children of Evart R. Rice.

But Police Judge Edward Curran has ruled that Skippy must die in the gas chamber, and the order will be carried out as soon as received at the pound.

Neighbors complained that the canine companion of the Rice children continually snaps at passers-by. The dog's life was spared last summer after Rice agreed to keep it on leash.

D. C. Restaurants Called Example Of Cleanliness

Washington's restaurants have one of the best records for cleanliness in the Nation, Health Officer George C. Ruhland said yesterday on the first anniversary of his department's "clean-up" campaign.

Inaugurated one year ago by Dr. R. R. Ashworth, head of the food inspection service, the campaign has resulted in a reduction of the bacterial count on untensils from a figure as high as 520,000 per utensil to a general maximum count of 500 or less.

Deputy Marshal Placed on Leave

The Department of Justice yesterday placed Thomas E. Ott, chief deputy United States marshal, on indefinite leave without pay.

Ott, the department said, will be off duty pending an examination of the marshal's office which is now being made by the department's regular examiners.

United States Marshal Colpoys appointed C. Michael Kearney to act as chief deputy in Ott's absence.

HOW 25 WOMEN LOST UGLY FAT
In Special N. Y. Test
Ask Your Doctor If It Isn't Good Way. Read EVERY Word

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a test by a prominent N. Y. Physician and nationally known newspaperwoman—25 women lost a total of 286 6lbs. in 40 days. YOU, too, can follow this SAME SENSIBLE plan right at home and here it is:

First of all, so light on fatty meats and sweets. Eat plentiful of lean meats, fish, fowl, fresh fruits and vegetables. And for proper functioning—take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in hot water every morning. DON'T MISS A MORNING! And this is important!

Kruschen is NOT harmful. It is not just one salt as some people ignorantly believe. Rather it's a blend of 6 active mineral salts (formula right on box) which when dissolved in water make a healthful mineral drink similar to Famous European Spa waters where wealthy fat women have gone for years. A jar of Kruschen costs only a few cents and makes 5 gallons of a most highly efficient mineral drink.

So fat ladies—get some gumption! MAKE UP YOUR MIND YOU'LL STICK to the above Plan for 28 days—and just see if you don't lose fat and feel healthier and younger. (Note: You can get Kruschen at druggists everywhere).

day reported by Parker for the special assignments or "big gifts" unit.

Results obtained from business firms and offices by the group solicitation unit, as reported by Thornton W. Owen, vice chairman of the unit, amounted to 933 pledges, totaling $14,412. Several establishments have come well over 100 per cent of their quota, Owen said, among them being five Community Chest agencies—Council of Social Agencies, Florence Crittenton Home, Boy Scouts of America, Instructive Visiting Nurse Society and the Boys' Club. The Boys' Club reached 225 per cent of its quota.

"Although we have just completed the second day of the campaign, results so far indicate that the business employes of Washington are increasing their gifts, so that the average pledge so far is two or three times the size of last year," Owen pointed out.

U. S. Agencies Over Top

The governmental unit's record for the day, as reported by Unit Vice Chairman Frank Birgfeld, chief clerk of the Treasury, was 3,456 pledges totaling $53,346. Fourteen Government departments have far exceeded the quota set for them, Birgfeld said. They are:

Dairy Industry, Agriculture, Dr. J. F. Kendrick, 135 per cent; National advisory committee aeronautics, John F. Victory, 208 per cent; National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Frederic A. Delano, 185 per cent; international exchanges, Smithsonian, F. E. Gass, 117 per cent; chief clerk's office, Treasury, S. H. Marks, 137 per cent; technical staff, Internal Revenue, Charles E. Wolfe, 103 per cent; commissioner's office, Public Debt Service, Miss S. O. C. Doolittle, 129 per cent; Division IV, Coast Guard, Treasury, Mildred Kested, 218 per cent; administrative, United States Tariff Commission, Serge Benson, 186 per cent; classification committee, Veterans Administration, J. H. Webb, 201 per cent; chief of chaplains, War Department, A. S. Goodyear, 103 per cent; probation system, Executive Offices, Joseph Y. Reeves, 120 per cent; M. M. Washington Vocational School, Miss L. C. Randolph, 150 per cent; Federal Trade Commission, radio and periodical division, Miss Virginia Howse, over 100 per cent.

Mrs. Frederick Altemus, chairman of the Christ Child division for the Metropolitan unit, and an active campaign leader for many years, made the day's report for her unit, of 1,150 pledges totaling $21,168.

The invocation which opened the luncheon was given by the Rev. Thomas B. Dade, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Others at the speaker's table besides the day's speaker, W. W. Wheeler, and Father Dade were Frederick M. Bradly, chairman of the special assignments unit; Coleman Jennings, president of the Community Chest; Mrs. Frederick Altemus, division chairman, Christ Child Society group of the Metropolitan unit; Arthur Hellen, first vice president of the Community Chest; Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest; William J. Flather, jr., campaign chairman; Mrs. Robert Oleson, president of the American Association of University Women; Thornton W. Owen, vice chairman, group solicitation unit; Alvin W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and chairman of the group solicitation unit, and Morris Cafritz, campaign vice chairman, and Charles E. Smoot, volunteer chairman of the Speakers' Bureau.

Meanwhile, Chest headquarters warned contributors to refrain from attaching restrictive stickers to their pledge cards.

An effort apparently is being made, it was said, to force the Chest to abandon its neutrality in the Hospital-Group Health Association controversy. The stickers would prevent allocation of funds to the hospitals until doctors employed by G. H. A. were allowed to practice in them.

Chest headquarters emphasized that the stickers were being disseminated without the sanction of the G. H. A.

joining Virginia, which has no "waiting period" law, expressed doubt that the Maryland law would greatly increase the marriage business in their jurisdiction.

Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the Circuit Court of Montgomery County at Rockville, estimated that the law would cut in half the number of marriage licenses which he issues.

Elkton residents explained that the town's marriage business has been recently handled in large part by five parsons. Others, besides the three named, are the Rev. P. K. Lambert and the Rev. Joel Sturgill.

John Thomas Brown, son-in-law of Cope, who was reported to be out of town, said his father-in-law had made up his mind to return to his farm in North Carolina.

Cope prepared once before to go back to the farm. That was last year when the Maryland Legislature passed a 48-hour waiting period law to go into effect June 1. The taxi drivers of Elkton, who have worked on a fee-splitting basis with some of the pastors, forced a referendum and a consequent postponement of the law, however, by obtaining 10,000 signatures to a petition.

The majority piled up for the law was the answer of Maryland voters to the referendum demand.

Except for what decline publicity may cause, the traffic in hasty marriages will continue until the law goes into effect. In October the clerk of the circuit court in Elkton issued 2,308 licenses, a new record.

Cope was out in front with 668 marriages during the month. Baker was runner-up with 464 ceremonies.

Cope, according to the Associated Press, admitted that he was working "for the taxicab people." Asked if he likewise was connected with the cab drivers, Baker refused to comment.

"The taxicab have been running this town," Pippin declared. "They are the people responsible for the whole thing, since they have brought pastors here to handle the marriage business for them. They have killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

"It is a wonder somebody has not been killed. These cab drivers—many of them just kids—have been parking out on the roadway and following cars containing couples as they came into town. Sometimes they have crowded cars off the road. Several fights have occurred in the last three weeks as a result.

"This law is going to help Elkton instead of hurting it. Business here will benefit, except for the taxicab operators and the pastors. Elkton has been given such a reputation that it has been difficult to induce industry to come here."

Explaining that local citizens had lost out in the State courts in an effort to force the pastors to take down signs advertising their marriage trade, Pippin said, "I think we have gotten something as last that will hold water—and I hope it holds plenty."

Hopkins said he took up marrying people as a specialty following a nervous breakdown in 1936. "Doctors told me," he declared, "that I would have to undertake something less strenuous. Friends suggested that I put up a sign, which I did."

"Make mine with Gilbey's Gin"

THE INTERNATIONAL GIN PRODUCED BY GILBEY IN ENGLAND . . . CANADA . . . AUSTRALIA . . . AND THE U. S. A.

It will only take one taste of a Martini for a Rickey or Collins made with Gilbey's Gin to show you why the whole wide world has been saying for over 80 years . . . "make mine with Gilbey's". Take that taste TODAY!

YOUR GUIDE TO GOOD LIQUORS

Copr. 1938 National Distillers Products Corp., N. Y. C. Gilbey's Distilled London Dry Gin is made from 100% grain neutral spirits. 90 proof.

GRIPPED BY MISERY OF A SORE THROAT! (DUE TO A COLD)

Do This NOW—go after it with direct treatment. Melt a small lump of Vicks VapoRub on the tongue. Feel the comfort as VapoRub slowly trickles down—bathing the irritated membranes . . . bringing blessed relief—where you want it—when you want it.

Then TONIGHT—massage throat, chest and back with VapoRub. Its poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—eases coughing—relieves local congestion.

This 2-STEP METHOD is one of the proved ways of using VapoRub that have made it a family standby in more homes than all other medications of its kind.

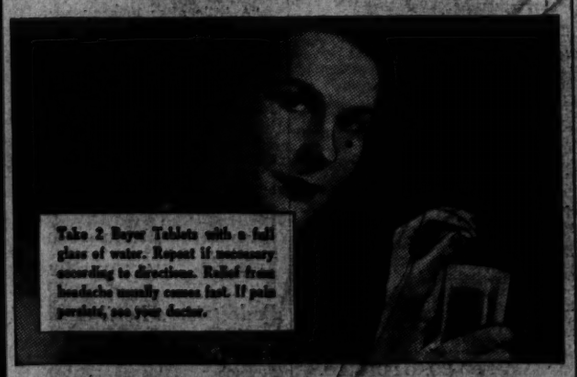
VICKS VAPORUB

Worry of FALSE TEETH Slipping or Irritating

Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, talk or laugh. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This pleasant powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gummy, sour, pasty taste or feeling. It's alkaline (non-acid). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

HEADACHE Eased Quickly

Simple Method Shown Here Often Brings Relief in Few Minutes Time



Take 2 Bayer Tablets with a full glass of water. Repeat if necessary according to directions. Relief from headache usually comes fast. If pain persists, see your doctor.

Many Doctors Advise This Easy Way to Relieve Pains of Headache, Neuritis and Rheumatism

Here is how to get speedy relief from common pains — rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia — in the very way advised by thousands of doctors—at the cost of only a few cents.

Just follow the simple method pictured above. It's so easy to do—and you'll be amazed to find this Bayer Aspirin way often brings relief from pain within a few minutes. Perhaps the fastest, most effective way known.

You can now get Genuine BAYER Aspirin — the same as that advised by doctors — for virtually 1¢ a tablet. But — one word of advice. Always ask for "Bayer Aspirin" when you buy — not just for "aspirin" alone. Try it — thousands find it helps wonderfully.

COLDS—One of the fastest ways millions know to relieve pain and discomfort of a cold and raw throat due to colds is with Bayer Aspirin. Full directions in every package.

While You're Brightening your Teeth You're Sweetening your Kisses

. . . with the new Open Formula Pebeco Tooth Paste

YOUR tooth paste should be the greatest possible aid to your tooth brush.

And to give you modern dental home care, Pebeco's chemists created a different type of tooth paste—an advanced type—in Open Formula Pebeco.

Open Formula Pebeco contains a new ingredient that helps to give your mouth an efficient cleansing. It is called "miraclene". And it gently emulsifies the food particles that cling to the teeth . . . loosens them before they ferment and become offensive. It is a real aid in keeping the mouth fresh and wholesome. In addition, Open Formula Pebeco is satin-smooth, bland, and comforting to delicate mouths. It is gritless, soapless, and non-abrasive. It contains no irritants. It contains nothing that could injure your teeth, gums, or general health, in any way.

Try this new step in advanced dental home care. Let Open Formula Pebeco begin—now—to help sweeten your kisses and brighten your teeth. You'll enjoy its taste, its freshness—and the results that follow its use.

IF YOU PREFER—Pebeco Tooth Powder is made to the same high standards of purity and non-abrasiveness as Open Formula Pebeco Tooth Paste. Both guarantee use at 25¢ and 10¢.

HERE IS PEBECO'S OPEN FORMULA

1. Polishing ingredient . . . trimagnesium phosphate octohydrate—combined with finest non-abrasive precipitated calcium carbonate of U.S.P. purity. Soft; smooth; gritless.

2. Detergent ingredient . . . "miraclene"—an emulsifying detergent (sodium sulfonate of an organic ester)—foaming, but soapless; gritless.

3. Antacid ingredient . . . magnesium hydroxide—active acid-neutralizing agent.

4. Vitamins . . . 40 U.S.P. XI units of Vitamin A and 10 units of Vitamin D per gram of paste, when packed. (Not intended as a substitute for or supplement to vitamins in the normal diet.)

5. Flavoring ingredients . . . oils of peppermint, spearmint, (terpeneless), anise, wintergreen; salt; saccharine. All of strictly tested purity and quality, Contains no sugar.

6. Binding ingredients . . . glycerine and gum tragacanth of U.S.P. purity, to bind all ingredients; sodium benzoate to preserve their qualities until used.

Contains No Potassium Chlorate

No dentifrice known to modern science can safely do more to help keep the teeth brilliantly clean and in good condition.

Try Open Formula Pebeco at NO COST to yourself—on this

MONEY-BACK OFFER!

You pay for the 25¢ tube only . . . you get the 10¢ tube free. Try the 10¢ tube. If you are not more than satisfied, return the 25¢ tube for money back in full.

The Nobel Award

No doubt there is cause for gratification in the fact that for the third time in a decade the Nobel prize for literature has been given to an American. But all the same, the news that this year it is Pearl Buck who is honored will be received by a good many critics with amazement, if not, indeed, shock.

The Nobel prize has been given to only one other woman writer, Sigrid Undset, of Norway. That so great an American novelist as Mrs. Wharton should have lived and died without any such recognition, that such a superb prose artist as Miss Cather, or so gifted a poet as Miss Millay, should have been passed over in favor of Mrs. Buck cannot but seem strange.

Even stranger is the fact that, whereas each of the other writers mentioned has given us a considerable body of distinguished work, Mrs. Buck's reputation rests upon a single book, "The Good Earth," which the author herself described as "my only pot boiler." Writers, of course, are notoriously bad judges of the relative merits of their own books. Pot boiler or not, "The Good Earth" is a respectable achievement.

But it would be a very rash critic that would pronounce it a greater novel than "Ethan Frome" or than "Death Comes to the Archbishop" or greater as literature than the sonnets in "The Harp Weaver." Few would be likely to say that, even within its own genre, "The Good Earth" is of comparable quality with "Growth of the Soil," which won the Nobel prize in 1920 for Knut Hamsun.

But it is well to remember that in the long run it is not the opinions of critics, nor the verdicts of prize committees, nor the a posteriori rationalizations of literary philosophers, that lift books into the rank of greatness. A book becomes great when, generation after generation, people are eager to read it. A great book and a great best seller, not of a year nor a decade but of centuries, are indeed one and the same. While we may guess and even guess shrewdly, we shall never really know whether the 1938 Novel award was well or badly advised.

The Passing Of Ataturk

The Turkey of today is the lengthened shadow of one man—Kemal Ataturk.

For 20 years he was the dynamo behind Turkey's remarkable transformation from a hopelessly weak and backward Oriental state into a strong, self-confident and progressive nation.

His was no easy task. For a century and a half Turkey had been the "sick man of Europe." One bit after another of the once vast Ottoman empire was alienated from the control of the sultans at Istanbul. Like vultures the great powers of Europe waited for the moment of final collapse to complete the job of partition.

In 1920 that moment appeared to have come. Turkey was one of the losers in the World War. She lost what remained of her outlying regions, most notably the whole of the Arabian peninsula. Smyrna and its hinterland had been promised to Greece, Adalia to Italy, Cilicia to France. The Straits had been demilitarized and placed under foreign supervision. But it was at this dark moment in her history that Turkey's rejuvenation began. The man responsible for it was Gen. Mustapha Kemal.

Gathering an army in the interior of Anatolia, he defied both the powers and the sultan. By 1922 he had driven out the French from Cilicia on the borders of Syria and the Greeks from Smyrna, and at the Lausanne conference of 1923 Turkey's new status was recognized by the powers.

From then on Kemal drove his nation and people to modernize their institutions, their language, even their clothes. He abolished the fez and the veil, wiped out the seraglios and the Caliphate. He made a successful assault on illiteracy. He fostered industries and helped improve the nation's agriculture.

Unlike his fellow dictators, he did not extend his ambitions to encompass territorial gains outside the national frontiers. He was content to keep Turkey's boundaries as they were. He made no effort to restore the Ottoman empire. And the quality of his statemanship was made clear in the circumstance that in due course the violent bitterness that had existed between Turkey and Greece was replaced by a regime of friendship.

For Kemal Ataturk knew that what Turkey needed most was peace. Yet in such matters as the re-establishment of Turkey's right to fortify the Straits or on the Alexandretta problem, Kemal knew when to choose the moment to make demands and to get them with the least amount of friction.

He was in a true sense Ataturk, "the Father of the Turks." Moreover, he was the only one of the dictators whose record the world could view with pride and satisfaction.

One Ballot-Box Demand

Remarkable as are the gains made by the Republican Party in Tuesday's elections, they can scarcely be regarded as an index to national legislative policy during the next two years. The G. O. P. is still in the minority. While the range within which the President's leadership may be exercised has been narrowed, he has a good opportunity to consolidate the real achievements of the New Deal.

In his campaign address at Hyde Park the President acknowledged a previous mistake of judgment in supposing that the problems of government are similar to those of building a house for permanent use. Even before this week's ballots were cast he had come to realize that "a social or economic gain made by one administration may, and often does, evaporate into thin air under the next one." That unpleasant truth must now be deeply impressed upon the President's mind.

Mr. Roosevelt left no doubt in the minds of his listeners that he considers the attainments of the New Deal incomplete. His plea was for the election of "liberal" candidates to insure continuation of his policies. The voters responded by defeating many of the candidates indorsed by the President. In most cases they have been replaced by Republicans with more conservative attitudes toward current national problems.

So the opportunity for completion of the New Deal appears to have passed. Even in the last Congress extreme measures proposed by the White House met with vigorous opposition and, in several cases, with defeat. Now the opposition has been greatly strengthened, not only by the Republican gains in the Senate and House, but also by the return of independent Democratic legislators who had been marked by the Administration for defeat in the primaries.

Further New Deal experiments which lack the support of conservative Democrats will thus have very little chance of enactment. The balance of power has not shifted to the Republican Party, but it has very definitely shifted from the White House to Congress. The legislative and not the executive branch will be the controlling factor during the next two years.

In these circumstances, there seems to be only one reasonable course for the President to follow. His first responsibility is to consolidate his gains where genuine progress has been made and to eliminate legislative or administrative weaknesses in his program wherever they have been exposed. Congress will doubtless undertake such a program in any event. If the President's leadership is to be effective, he also must work toward this end.

The need for reform of many of the Administration's reforms is recognized by thoughtful leaders in both parties. The present rate of spending can not possibly be continued without exorbitant new taxes or bankruptcy. Re-examination of the national labor relations act and the establishment of a new relief policy seem to be imperative tasks for the new Congress. Presumably the revolt of the farm belt also presages an overhauling of the Administration's agricultural policy.

These are enormous tasks. Full cooperation between the President and Congress will be needed if the essential retrenchment is to be effected without impairment of various desirable objectives which the New Deal has pursued. An open split between the Executive and Congress would lead to confusion and probably strengthen the present conservative trend of public opinion. If, on the other hand, the President is willing to moderate his policies, the new Republican opposition may bring about far greater cohesion in the Democratic ranks than was manifested in the last Congress.

It is not necessary for the President to lead a retreat. But no realist can ignore the ballot-box demand for withdrawal of the New Deal's less defensible salients and consolidation of its main lines. So far as the immediate future is concerned, the President's reaction to this political trend will be equally as important as the election returns.

Far more than the success or failure of any political group is at stake. The real issues are whether desirable economic and social reforms can be adjusted to the actual resources of the Government without a political upheaval, and whether doubtful experiments can be overhauled or scrapped by orderly legislative action when they can no longer be justified by the results produced. These issues will probably afford the most severe test to which the President's powers of leadership have ever been subjected.

Amazing Accuracy

On numerous occasions the American Institute of Public Opinion has been able to test the accuracy of its polls by actual election returns. Since November, 1936, its reliability has not been seriously questioned. However, the attempt to forecast this week's election results provided a major challenge to the scientific sampling methods employed by Dr. Gallup to ascertain the trend of public opinion.

The accuracy with which the institute foretold the outcome of the New York gubernatorial contest is really amazing. Dr. Gallup came within one-half of one per cent of estimating the percentage of the vote that would be cast for Gov. Lehman. And the results of the Congressional poll were equally remarkable. The institute estimated that the Republicans would gain a minimum of 50 additional seats and "would be likely to gain about 75."

This close approximation to actual results was achieved by interrogating a cross-section of voters in all parts of the country with the aid of a staff of over 600 field investigators. Even Dr. Gallup betrayed nervousness in this formidable undertaking to "forecast a Congressional election with its hundreds of local issues and personalities." No doubt this experimental poll has, as he hoped, provided opportunity for even further refinement of present sampling methods.

Nevertheless, successful accomplishments to date show that the organization has already been improved until it is capable of providing an extraordinarily dependable analysis of political trends. Of course, the margin of error will sometimes be greater than on other occasions, but that does not detract from the value of the Gallup method of forecasting trends of public opinion.

The A. I. P. O. polls have certainly demonstrated that elections are not determined by sudden, irrational, unpredictable change in public sentiment. Consequently it may well be that the sport of betting on election results will be given a severe setback by the substitution of intelligent analysis of public opinion for mere surmise.

Twenty Years After

There is grim irony in the celebration today of the twentieth anniversary of the signing of the armistice which put an end to fighting on the western front.

The hope was that this great event would mark a turn in human destinies, that it would lead to a new world order consecrated to democracy and peace. That hope has gone a-glimmering. The democracies today represent a shrinking segment of the globe; despotisms far more aggressive than those overthrown in 1918 are on the march and peace rests on unstable foundations.

The fact of the matter is that the armistice of 1918 was never followed by a real regime of peace. The peace settlements negotiated at Paris and its suburbs only perpetuated the earlier truce. And now that the Versailles Treaty is in ruins there is nothing left but the armistice itself.

It was with a sure instinct, therefore, that mankind never paid much attention to June 28, the anniversary of the Versailles pact, but has annually celebrated November 11, the day the armistice was signed. And amid all the encircling gloom of the world racked by dictatorships, plagued by armaments, frightened by wars and the rumors of wars, there is reason to be thankful that the oft-threatened world conflict has not broken out.

But as long as the armistice remains an armistice and not the prelude to permanent peace November 11 will remain a grim anniversary of lost opportunities and shattered hopes, as it is today.

Equine Evolution

When automobiles were first introduced everybody prophesied the end of the horse. The stock farms, however, are still doing business.

Changes in transportation methods have proved to be greater than anybody ever imagined; but on the road to oblivion the cart went before the horse. Or, at least, the buggy did. The buggy whip business was shot to pieces years ago. And good roads have rung the knell on sleigh bells.

Now the Department of Agriculture announces that there are only a few more than eleven million horses and mules on the farms of the United States, which is less than half the number at work in 1915. Still and all, eleven million is quite a lot of horse and mule. And for some years to come the conservative agriculturist will point out that though the tractor can cover a lot of territory its by-products never stir the hungry earth to activity as do those of the homely old hay-burner.

Nevertheless the day will come when the old farm horse will plough his last row. But is the proud lover of the horse dismayed? Neigh, neigh! The horse will survive. To cut it off from lowly pursuits is simply to spur it to greater social activity. The years to come will see the horse-loving jinnys manipulate the genes and the breed will be changed to suit the times.

So, cheerio. Dobbin may yet sire a Seabiscuit.

If Roosevelt Heeds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is perhaps a little too early to forecast the full significance of the Republican trend resulting from yesterday's elections, but one fact is certain: the ascendancy of the New Deal has been checked. Even Dewey, in view of the small margin by which the Democrats won in New York State, without the heavy Democratic vote below the Westchester line, would have obtained a majority.

In spite of labor's indorsement, the defeat of Gov. Murphy in Michigan, coupled with the Republican double victory in Ohio, puts a wedge in the highly industrialized Middle West that the Democratic National Committee will find it hard to dislodge. The rural section, however, of that part of the country, cannot afford to vote the party in power out.

There is no doubt that the G. O. P. gain of at least 80 Congressional seats, although insufficient to neutralize the policies of the Administration, will furnish a more vital opposition. The Gallup poll estimated that about 75 votes in Congress would change sides, showing the accuracy of this method for anticipating political results.

Your editorial of November 9, while frankly partisan in flavor, clinches the argument, saying: "Mr. Roosevelt will still be the popular leader of the last six years if he heeds the warning which came yesterday from so many and varying communities." But one must be blind not to see that the President cannot exercise his leadership without harmonizing it with the will of the people. FIDES.

Courtesy And Traffic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because of the parking situation in Washington, I seldom drive downtown. I use the public conveyances and walk the rest of my trip.

From observation and experience, I quite agree with "Not Killed Yet," whose letter was published November 8 in The Post. He said something when he said that it was safer to cross in the block rather than at the crossings on the green light at some of the downtown crossings.

Regarding the proposals of "H. S." also published November 8 in The Post, I agree with him on traffic islands, but I would say make them truly "islands" and not merely a space inclosed by painted lines and a few bumps in the road which do not discourage motorists in the least. I have had to duck many times while waiting for a streetcar in the so-called safety zones.

The only solution lies in courtesy and a knowledge of regulations. Until both motorists and pedestrians learn and use courtesy, we will still have the same old problem. Too many courteous people (while on foot), leave their manners behind them when they get behind the wheels of their cars.

Until courtesy is learned, I believe the best solution lies in elevated safety islands, special lights, and an adequate police supervision of both groups. EDGAR C. PAUL.

Licensing Pedestrians

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The police are strongly thinking of arresting pedestrians walking against red lights. This is entirely too mild.

Pedestrians should be given an examination and, upon passing it successfully, should be given a license. They should be sworn to uphold the red light—come what may—and to protect the innocent car drivers, worried motorists and virtuous chauffeurs. Any one walking without a permit should be sentenced to 30 days in jail for a first offense. They would be inspected every six months, tagged according to age and walking condition, cold feet, weak knees, and heartbreaks. No excuse should be acceptable to any judge—especially in the case of those over 70.

In case of accident, pedestrians should be liable and be made to pay the cost of repairing damages to the car.

Their eye-glasses should be inspected by a reliable optometrist and replaced when deemed necessary. The habit of some pedestrians of filling their tanks with alcohol when contemplating the pleasure of walking home should be strongly discouraged and reproved.

Children would not be licensed until 12 years of age and not allowed to use the streets of our fair city—except in the company of a licensed pedestrian. Parking of pedestrians should be summarily dealt with: no more than five minutes in crowded districts.

In that way and in that way alone shall our streets be made safe for the automobiles and the automobile industry.

The Radio Panic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Alexander Sidney Lanier's letter in The Post November 4 points the finger of reproach at what he calls the "cowardly and degenerate race" of the United States. Obsessed with the idea that our national life is in its decadence (witness his letter of October 19 to the editor of the New York Times), he assumes that because certain groups become panic-stricken at the thought of an aerial attack upon our territory, the people of the United States "could not survive and would not deserve to survive a real attack upon our country."

Surely not every person who heard the Orson Welles broadcast unaware that it was a play cast his rationality to the winds. We do not know how many people heard the broadcast, but certainly those who became infected with panic and hysteria represent only a fraction of the vast audience which listens to radio programs. Mr. Lanier is obviously proceeding upon a false premise: he has arrived at a general conclusion from particular instances. His reasoning is, therefore, fallacious.

Our 'Scolding' Diplomacy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To a plain, unsophisticated citizen like myself, Secretary Hull's recent utterances are simply those of a scold. The Secretary surely has no "mandate" from the people to instruct the whole world how to behave. He has already enraged Hitler, Mussolini, Japan and Mexico.

The futility of scolding pirates is hardly debatable. Obviously Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese military party intend to seize the land and property of any and all people who can't defend themselves. They already look upon us as a second- or third-rate Nation, "too proud to fight" but prone to lecture and scold every other nation. Secretary Hull's sermons about proper behavior merely elicit their derisive cachination. They repeatedly told us very bluntly that as soon as Europe and Asia are in the Fascist bag, our turn for their attention will come next.

The policy of the State Department seems to be the childish one of having a finger in everything but a strong hand on nothing. Why look for trouble in Europe or Asia? Wouldn't it be wiser to be less garrulous and more industriously prepare to defend ourselves on American soil, if we are forced to do so?

Brickbats For Britain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent "strafing" that America and all things American came in for at the hands of the state-controlled Fascist and Nazi press ought to warn us that if we are going to continue to be a tail to the British kite, as we have in the past, we too will have to do as Britain is doing.

We will have to have Government regulations prohibiting criticism of the dictators for fear of incurring their displeasure. What amounts to a virtual suppression of freedom of the press and state censorship of news movie films is in full force in the British Isles.

With every incident daily the British lion gets more tangled up with the Nazi hyena and the Fascist wolf. There is no need for the United States to try to help the lion because such animals have no sense of gratitude, despite Aesop's story of the prince who pulled the thorn out of the lion's paw. The lion repaid him later by saving his life.

America went into the World War to save the pelt of the British lion under the noble Wilsonian fiction that it was a war "to save democracy." It was a war to save British imperialism. What did we get out of it in gratitude? A kick in the pants!

By the "peace of Munich" Great Britain has alienated herself from the possibility of "being saved" by any right-minded democracy. A decided reaction has set in and the attitude of the average American is to let Britain pull herself out of the mess she is now in.

Certainly any attempt to generate sympathy at the twisting of the lion's tail in Canton and Hong Kong, to say nothing of Palestine troubles and possible African and India revolts, finds scant response in the hearts of liberty-loving Americans. Chamberlain and his advisers have muddled up things for the Britishers. We shall not help them out this time. ARISTOTLE.

Washington, Nov. 7.

The FCC Purge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of November 5 on Chairman McNinch's attempted "purge" of the chief examiner of the Communications Commission seems to overlook a most important point in this unsavory situation.

The vital point is that McNinch was appointed by President Roosevelt in June, 1937—17 months ago—"to clean house" in the FCC. If key employes, with long records of Government service, are incompetent now, they were incompetent then. And no efficient executive should have required more than a few weeks to determine whether they were competent.

Instead, McNinch dilly-dallied in his important assignment for more than a year and now, faced with the threat of a Congressional investigation, is attempting to shift to members of the staff, with long and honorable records, the responsibility for his own inactivity.

If the President wants to clean up the mess in the FCC he should start at the top.

"Now Watch Business"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No doubt that Roosevelt was the issue in the elections and that he has found his match in former President Hoover. In his Saturday night broadcast Mr. Hoover made the President look like a 10-cent piece. "Vote the Republican ticket and put men back to work" is his slogan.

Now watch business splurge. An ever-normal employment is the guarantee of an ever-normal supply of food. The cheaper the article the more sold, the more consumed and the more employed. There is no limit to production.

Finale On The Meuse

"YOU WANT to know about the Armistice, eh?" my cousin asked. "Well, forget all the ideas you've picked up at the movies and listen. When the war ended I didn't come climbing out of any nice, dry air-conditioned trench with only a foot of water in it. I climbed out of a damned river—the Meuse.

"I was in the Second Engineers, Second Division. When the war started I left Tech and enlisted in the Engineers to get a little practical experience; sort of a postgraduate course, you understand.

"Well, I got plenty of it.

"What I learned best was how to use a pick and shovel—fast. And it was the Germans that taught me. There's nothing like a little shell fire to make you forget that tired feeling.

"But you want to know about the Armistice? Well, from the first of November on, we kept hearing about peace, but so far as we could see from the number of shells that came our way, no one was doing much about it.

"About two days before the end we got orders to shove a couple of bridges across the Meuse. We'd already practiced putting a bridge down in sections, and hadn't done so well at it. It looked all right in practice, but it was pretty obvious, if we ever tried the system under fire, there wouldn't be any engineers left when the bridge was done.

"Someone had an idea. Why not build the bridges on the bank and then shove the finished products across the river? We went to work along that line.

"From the lumber of an old German barracks we made a bunch of rafts, or bridge sections. Imagine fastening a series of 6-foot railroad ties together with three 12-inch planks instead of rails. Cut these off 12 feet long and you have a good idea of our sections.

"The afternoon and evening of November 10 we hauled those oversized barn doors down to the river. We rushed the sections down to the water's edge, tied them together perpendicular to the current, and then with a mighty heave lifted the bridge up and started shoving it across the Meuse.

"The front men waded out into the river as far as they could go, let go the bridge, and then went to the right and the left. The men following did the same. Then the Germans opened up on us.

"The bridge was headed slightly upstream, with a rope around the first section to guide it against the current. The river was about 165 feet wide, and from first to last we threw a bridge across in 7 minutes, including the time it took to tie the sections together on the bank and carry them to the water.

"Downstream about 400 yards where they were building the other bridge, they didn't have so much luck. A shell made a direct hit on it, and delayed them a bit. They took about 11 minutes, I think.

"Plans were made to put two more bridges across on down a mile, but they were never carried out.

"Now all this time the Germans were pumping a barrage into the river that kept the bridge tossing and bucking like a bronc. A shell would explode in the river and throw up a tremendous column of water that would fall, smack, on the bridge.

"The Marines started crossing first. Now don't get the idea it was a parade ground charge—those boys were running across wet, slippery and shaking boards, praying like hell that they wouldn't fall.

"A lot of them did fall, but most of those were able to scramble to their feet and keep going. They ran across by threes and fours and by dawn about a hundred had reached the other side and spread out, trying to establish a good bridgehead position.

"A few of us from the Second went across to see about anchoring the far end of the bridge, but it didn't really need anchoring. We'd made the bridge 180 feet long, so that it wedged itself tightly against the other side.

"We dug in and prepared to stay there for a while, just in case of a call for repairs. The morning came, foggy and smoky. We shivered up on the bank, cold, wet through and through, hungry, and yet too scared to go back for grub. We'd been in and out of the river all night, and the shells were splashing the water so it wasn't much drier on the bank.

"There was a heavy fog, and I guess that's what saved us. The Germans kept on shooting at the bridge but couldn't see to correct their range.

"A little after 10 a runner came across and yelled that the firing was to stop at 11. At that we all dug in a little deeper. This was no time to get hit. All the same a lot of the boys were hit as they fumbled around in the mist, battling for a fairly safe position.

"Sure enough, the shooting stopped at 11, and the fog lifted about the same time. When thoroughly convinced no more shells were coming, we stood up and stretched—then walked sort of slowly back across the bridge to see about chow.

Pedestrian's Peril

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter published in your issue of November 8, signed "Not Killed Yet," voices my anxiety each time I try to cross Connecticut avenue at Cathedral avenue after alighting from the bus coming from town.

For False Alarms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding the proposal of Charles E. Cross to install a device on fire alarm boxes to take care of automobile fires, which was outlined in The Washington Post of November 9, I would add the suggestion that another device be also installed to cover false alarms.

Thoughts On Marriage

MOST LADIES are more or less pretty or otherwise attractive when they are young, and most boys of marrying age are either too dumb or too badly confused by the sweet misery of love to realize that all ladies, even the prettiest of them, are not divine creatures but human beings. This means that they are likely to have faults.

PEGLER

Some of them have very bad tempers, some are whiners, naggers and bores, some are lazy and untidy, suspicious, jealous, bossy, extravagant, stingy, unkind or dumb.

LADIES HAVE about the same faults that men have and about the same virtues. Their virtues, however, have been publicized by poets and masters of the other arts to the general neglect of their shortcomings, and they are very clever at covering up their flaws until after the wedding.

It is an instinct.

Mostly the males are able to endure or laugh off traits which manifest themselves after the glad chimes have died away. They balance the bad against the good—consider their own little imperfections and decide within themselves that mamma is not perfect, by any means, but all right and certainly a lot better than that terrible bag that George Spelvin is tied to.

NEIGHBOR SPELVIN, on the other hand, thinks his spitfire is the best on the block and has developed a defense against her blurts of temper which enables him to jog along with the anniversaries piling up behind them. It is a matter of temperaments and of adjustments, and a wife who is generally satisfactory, though by no means perfect, for one man would be a terrible plague to another. If it were possible to imagine a general reshuffle of the pairings in a given circle the result would be a terrible screech and clatter in a normally quiet neighborhood and probably a few murders.

But, of course, some people who marry find themselves simply unable to stick it out and after a while are able to agree on only one thing—divorce.

IN THAT CASE he has to pay her alimony even if there are no children, and if she is one of those smart ones, interested in nothing but a good living and independence, she is set for life, while he is stuck for life. He has to give her first chop at his pay and is unable to deduct this dead loss from his income for tax purposes, and if he gets married again the second one goes around grousing about what a dope he was to marry the first one, anyway.

She naturally feels sore because she figures that the first one is living on dough that should belong to her, and this makes for more misery in the poor guy's life. And all because, when he was young, he thought he knew it all and didn't interpret signs which should have been quite plain to him.

IT IS JUST PITIFUL the things some poor guys have to stand for from their old ladies. Some of them play bridge all the time and get into jams with other dolls who are married to important business associates. Some get tight at parties and start scraps or otherwise embarrass their husbands.

Some chisel on the family bank account, run up bills on the quiet and keep a man up to his eyes in debt all the time. Then, when they get bawled out, they squawk and cry or take the other tack, telling him he is a bum, unable to support a wife as he should, which is worse.

Some are always tearing fenders off the family car and getting tickets from the traffic cops and then sassing the cops and complicating things so that the husband has to go to the county chairman or someone to keep them out of jail.

THE DETERMINED WOMAN is another terrible type. This kind seems gentle as a kitten when young but after marriage reveals an iron will and compels the husband to go to restaurants or out to the neighbors' houses night after night when he is so damned tired he wishes he could get pneumonia or something so he could go to bed for a month.

But boys of marrying age are not of normal mind when they get in love. They just think how adorable she is and all like that, and nothing can snap them out of it. It certainly seems too bad, but that is the way it goes.

Jefferson Medal Is Awarded to Justice Black

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, in which 13 States are represented, announced today it had awarded Justice Hugo L. Black, Alabama's member of the Supreme Court, its Thomas Jefferson Medal for 1938.

Justice Black will come here to receive the award at a general session of the conference, November 23.

The medal will be awarded annually to the man chosen as "the South's most outstanding statesman in promoting human welfare along the lines of the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson."

Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, is chairman of the committee which selected Justice Black.

Consolation Prize

That was a pathetic bit of news from Ossining. Its village president, Howard Dunscomb, a loyal Republican these past 35 years, has severed connections with the party. The Republican fight on the League of Nations? Apparently he forgave his party that; at any rate it brought no rupture. The Harding Administration scandals and the Coolidge siestas? He stood them like a soldier in the ranks. The G. O. P.'s alliance with Volstead and the prohibitionists? However hard it may have been, he held fast. But there comes the breaking point in time. For three years he has been trying to obtain a low automobile license number, and each year the Republicans up the line gave him only "the usual song and dance." So that's that and the Democrats have another voter. It just goes to prove that Americans won't take the politicians' run-around indefinitely. Sooner or later they rise up in civic wrath.

Ataturk's Turkey

By William Gilman

(Note: In view of the death yesterday of Mustapha Kemal Ataturk, the following article excerpted from the November issue of Current History is of unusual interest.)

TODAY, TURKEY is not only master of her own house but a voice to be heard with respect concerning that part of the world where Europe and Asia meet, where the powerful five—Germany, Russia, England, France and Italy—constantly maneuver for access to raw materials of the Balkans, free passage through the Dardanelles, control of Iraq oil, allegiance of Arab tribes and control of the Suez Canal.

Repeatedly, Ataturk had lectured his people that the loss of their empire was "good riddance to bad rubbish." It was a nuisance, not a privilege, he says, to govern Albanians, Arabs and Egyptians. Because of them the true Turks went to their ruin—not only through bloody centuries of defending sprawling frontiers—but also through an inward rotting, through exotic influences such as the harem and the lazy faith in Kismet.

He has pillaged and purged. He has extirpated anything threatening the new nationalism, so that his name has been cursed by Christian Armenians and nomad Kurds, by devout Turkish Moslems, and by Turkish liberals who fought at Kemal's side in the war for independence but could stomach neither his personal excesses nor his relentless climb to power.

Now that "Turkey for the Turks!" has become a reality, the borders have been re-opened, but under Ataturk's terms. Christians and Moslems alike are welcome; so are foreign businessmen—but they must think and act like Turks.

When Moslem delegates came to Ataturk a few years ago, urging that his mighty arm protect them against English and French ambitions, he could rebuff them with the boast, "There are no oppressors and no oppressed, but only those who allow themselves to be oppressed."

INDEED, the record of Ataturk's Turkey is that of a nation that has saved itself. Just as no power can now invade Turkey on pretense of defending a minority population, so also are the Turks immune from invasion on the ground of protecting investments. In the latter has lain one virtue of Ataturk's pay-as-we-go budgets, hard as they have been on taxpayers.

That Kemal and a loyal band saved Turkey from partition by England, France and Italy is dramatic fact. Kemal defied the allies long before a Hitler arose to do the same. In desperate sorties, the Kemalists drove out each agent of Lloyd George and his Versailles strategists—Armenians, Greeks, Kurds, finally the Sultan himself. Not until 1923, at Lausanne, did Turkey agree to formal peace. Her present religious tolerance and freedom from pan-Islam ideas can be traced directly to those years of guerrilla warfare when Anatolian patriots saw their own Sultan proclaim a holy war against them and side with England against his own people.

That he later banished or hanged many of the patriots who had fought by his side is a matter for Ataturk to settle with his own conscience. That he accepted aid from Russia and, after the defeat of the Greeks at Sakkaria, from a practical-minded France who made a separate peace with the Kemalists, demonstrates Ataturk's opportunism. He has accepted much, given little.

Forgotten was the debt to Russia when she began propagandizing the Turks. Ataturk initiated some drastic Red-hunting which speedily made the Soviet seek friendship on another basis. Russia became useful again in 1934, when the Turks launched their first five-year-plan, lending nearly $9,000,000—Turkey's only foreign loan worthy of the name—and scores of Russian technicians to set up a cotton factory at Kayseri, which is the nucleus of Turkey's government-owned textile industry.

BUT LAST YEAR, when Russia sought Turkish protection against Italian submarines for Spain-bound shipping in the Aegean Sea, Ataturk declined to rescue Soviet chestnuts and obtained the resignation of his veteran prime minister, Ismet Inonu, for listening to Moscow's argument.

With the war for independence won, Kemal turned upon his people with shattering reforms. He abolished the caliphate, banned the harem and the fez, toured the country as a beetling-browed schoolmaster denouncing the corrupting influence of Arabic words, preaching the use of a phonetic Turkish alphabet. When diehards muttered against abolition of the harem, Kemal scorned them by giving political suffrage to women. When the people were slow to remove the fez, Ataturk threatened imprisonment or worse.

In all this, Ataturk headed toward his goal, a new Turkey. Having purged the Moslem priesthood and dethroned religion, he proceeded to bend it to his own ends. Turks are no longer astonished at sermons like those given at the Hadji Bairam Mosque in Ankara:

"In the word of God there are commands which are open, but there are secret remarks. So we Moslems should obey His commands and understand His remarks, and act accordingly. We should build the greatest docks of the world. We should build oil- and electricity-driven vessels. We should sell our goods throughout the world, and we should declare our independence by large warships."

ATATURK is ambitious and wily. As the hero of Gallipoli and later of Sakkaria, he proved his military worth—he was no mere corporal who seized upon post-war discontent to form a gangster political party. He was a general who took power and afterward, to expedite government, created his People's Party, which is the only party. In 1930 he tried the experiment of having a liberal opposition in Parliament—but banned it speedily when it took its job too seriously.

If dictatorship means a muzzled press, Turkey is that; but when dictatorship carries with it a crusade to convert others by means of propaganda, Turkey does not fit the picture. She preaches no part of her "ism" for the benefit of neighbors.

She has the "one party" but no goose-stepping, no symbolic salutes. She has a new industry, but neither capitalists nor labor unions. In her modernization, she has borrowed foreign brains for their actual worth, or for economic reasons, and not because of their ideological surroundings.

Thus, refugee German professors are now thick at the University of Istanbul, and the refugee German composer, Paul Hindemith, is teaching at the Ankara Music School. But at the army training schools and at the agricultural institute one finds very Nazi German teachers. To teach the peasant how to raise more and better cotton, Ataturk brought in American experts.

TURKEY HAS BEEN solely Turkish in her economic relations with other countries and has kept trade on a business, rather than an ideological, basis. She imported Russian capital and technique to build her textile industry. Germany's Krupp works have refortified the Dardanelles. British interests supplied nearly $20,000,000 for the Karabuk steel plant, and recently Turkey obtained another $80,000,000 in British credits—mostly for warships and other arms. From Germany, Turkey just last month received $60,000,000 in credits with which German industry has promised to erect new factories for heavy chemicals and synthetic gasoline, railroads in Eastern Anatolia, and new plants for manufacturing munitions and seaplanes. From her profitable tobacco sales to the United States last year she bought 20 Martin bombers.

In everything done in the past ten years she has considered her financial and natural resources as tools to be controlled vigorously, and thus was born her brand of state socialism. Not the least of Ataturk's success has been due to his willingness, as a soldier, to take advice from economists. It is no accident that Celal Bayar, the new prime minister, was formerly minister of economics.

THERE IS ALSO the ominous question facing all one-man governments. After Ataturk, what? This problem has come to the foreground as a result of the Gazi's ill-health during the past half-year. That there is a consequent maneuvering for power among his chief followers is obvious. But Ataturk has been ill before—and some of his greatest victories were won when his body was diseased but his will was raging.

On The Record

The Elections

THE RESULT of the elections could have been—and were—predicted months ago. The 1936 elections were misinterpreted by the Administration. Those elections, which gave Mr. Roosevelt so impressive a majority, already indicated that the people wished to go no further than the first and second New Deals had gone. They wiped out the extremists on the right and the left—the Communists, the Socialists, the Lemkeists.

DOROTHY THOMPSON.

Not one-tenth of the voters in New York State who supported the President did so, as they had the opportunity to do, under the banner of the American Labor Party. And, despite the extreme incompetence of the Republican campaign, 17,000,000 people voted for Mr. Landon.

ON THE DAY after those elections this column pointed out that the President and the Administration would have to represent not a party and not a class but the whole Nation, including the minority of 17,000,000, if they were not to come to grief.

We wrote, "Today the President stands at the crossroads. He can choose struggle, mobilizing toward coercion, or, backed by his tremendous majority, he can choose the widest possible measure of conciliation and collaboration in the liberal temper that exudes light."

The Administration chose, rather, to regard the victory as a "mandate." It instituted the third and most revolutionary phase of its life, and the amazing swing last Tuesday was a repudiation, not of liberalism but of this third New Deal.

A RELATIVELY new and extremely interesting democratic invention is the poll, such as those conducted by Dr. Gallup, and by Fortune and The Ladies Home Journal. They have been developed to an amazing accuracy. The Gallup poll in the Lehman-Dewey campaign was accurate to a fraction of 1 per cent.

If one examines the results of these polls over the last half-year it is not at all difficult to see what the American people voted against on Tuesday.

They voted against a punitive attitude toward business. Fortune's poll in July showed that only 3.7 per cent of everybody polled—including labor—approved of the Administration's attitude toward business in general.

They voted against the Administration's attitude toward trade unions; only one third of the voters, in the same poll, approved it, and it is notable that the two Governors most actively representative of the Administration's labor policy—Govs. Earle and Murphy—were both defeated.

THIS MUST NOT be interpreted as a vote against labor. It was a vote against violence and unfairness. It was a vote against the sit-down strike, and against throwing concessions to one form of labor organization as against another, for political and ideological reasons.

It was a vote of nonconfidence in the general condition of the economic system. Fortune's poll in July revealed that 60.2 per cent thought econonic conditions worsening rather than improving; 43.4 per cent thought people were less secure than they had been; only 22.4 per cent thought they were more secure.

It was a vote against the indiscriminate experimentation of the Department of Agriculture, as evidenced by the Republican victories in Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas and the Northwest.

It was a vote against the left-wing "progressives" of the Ickes type, as evidenced by the defeat of Phil La Follette in Wisconsin.

It was a vote against a farmer-labor alignment, as evidenced by the result in Minnesota.

IT WAS A VOTE against the tactics of smearing certain groups for past mistakes; against the whole policy of revenge; against the attitude that certain people are "no good" and their opinions can be disregarded. The total failure of the "purge" was an advance sign of widespread revolt against authoritarianism and personal government.

It was a vote against democracy by private armies—in this case by the private army of the WPA. If Mr. Krock correctly quoted Harry Hopkins yesterday morning—that the Administration's program was to "spend and spend and tax and tax and elect and elect"—then the practicality of this program has now been tested and found wanting.

THE POLLS preceding the elections revealed the public mind in many other ways. Seventy per cent of those polled by Dr. Gallup in June and July were opposed to a third term for Roosevelt; 64 per cent thought he would seek it, and 51 per cent thought, if he did, he would be elected. The polls showed, therefore, that the President's personal popularity has been over-rated, even by his opponents—for while an overwhelming majority thought he should not be re-elected, a bare majority thought he would be. In other words, each voter thought that he was more isolated in his opposition than he was.

The idea that nobody is irreplaceable in this democracy was registered by the elections and by the preceding polls. In Fortune's October polls only 19.8 per cent voted that "Roosevelt or a man like him is essential for the good of the country," . . . although in that same poll 42.4 per cent voted that the good outweighs the bad in the Roosevelt administration.

BOTH THE Administration and the opposition can draw false conclusions from this election. If the Administration draws no conclusions, or decides to press forward along the line of the last two years, then it will certainly be defeated in 1940, and it may become responsible for a catastrophic reaction.

If the opposition counts the victory as a triumph for old-fashioned Republicanism it will, in my belief, lose its gains or be responsible for deadlock and chaos.

The polls, so well supported by the elections, would indicate that the Administration would do well to reconsider the popularity of its present advisers. The July poll of Fortune indicated that only 28.3 per cent approved of the advisers.

And all the polls showed dissatisfaction with the Administration's methods of achieving its objectives.

THE ELECTIONS raise many issues which ought, it seems to me, to be considered with as much calmness and objectivity as possible. "Checking" the New Deal is not a policy. It is merely negation. What is needed is reconstruction in harmony with the indications of popular feeling.

If the Administration plays fair with the electorate, it will welcome and invite discussion.

It will remove once and for all its punitive attitude toward groups and toward individuals.

It will seek to find social and political inventions to rationalize the discretionary powers which have been granted to the administrative agencies.

It will gather that the labor relations act and the Labor Relations Board need amendment and reform. It will discourage the latter from squeezing the A. F. of L. for the benefit of the C. I. O.

It will stop witch hunts. It will reconsider the TVA set-up, paying attention to the recent decline in the proportion of the population voting in favor of public ownership of electricity in municipalities, which, despite constant Administration pressure and money grants, has fallen from two-thirds in 1933-34 to less than one-eighth in 1937.

AND IF THE opposition is wise it will collaborate with the Administration in seeking more reasonable and rational methods to achieve unity and justice. It will not think that these elections are a mandate to revive past abuses. It will take cognizance of the fact that Republicanism has received in proportion to its recognition of a changing world.

And it, too, will observe that the American people are capable of changing their minds.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

One A Minute

MR. HERBERT ASBURY, authority upon "The Gangs of New York," "The Barbary Coast" of San Francisco, and "The French Quarter" of New Orleans, has extended his researches into the gaudier and bawdier aspects of American life, and today presents his about-to-be-delighted public with "Sucker's Progress: An Informal History of Gambling in America From the Colonies to Canfield" (Dodd, Mead, $3.50).

Faro, poker, craps—they are all of foreign origin, Mr. Asbury insists, in opening his luscious narrative. The Yankee, he holds, has never invented a gambling game of the first rank. Three-card monte, he admits, was born in the Western Hemisphere, but south of the Rio Grande; thimble-rig, the creation of a certain Dr. Bennett, of Shreveport, La., is the only game which Mr. Asbury admits was born under the Stars and Stripes.

These are statements which might well be brought to the attention of the Dies committee investigating un-American activities. Mr. Asbury seems to have a definitely unpatriotic bias. He refuses to accept Mr. Edward Larocque Tinker's claim that New Orleans is the birthplace of craps—though I observe that he now admits the existence of the Rue de Chaps in the Southern city during the early 1800s, a fact which he learnedly disputed in this very column in August, 1937. He may be right about craps; the evidence is still inconclusive. But assuredly he is wrong about poker, on his own evidence.

WHAT CONSTITUTES the "invention" of a card game? All card games, obviously, are derived from other card games. How can Mr. Asbury hold that "poker was simply the ancient Persian game of 'As Nas,' under a new name and in a new setting," when As Nas was played with a pack of 20 cards and lacked the features of the ante, the draw, the raise before the draw, the freeze-out, table stakes, bluffing, straights and flushes and wild cards, all of which Mr. Asbury says were contributed to the Persian game by various other games of English, French or Italian origin (such as post and pair, brag, primero and poque)? The jackpot and stud, even the abject Mr. Asbury admits, were American inventions. He might as well claim that baseball, because some elements of it were derived from cricket, was not American!

Curiously enough, the word "poker" cannot be traced in print back of 1836, though it was then described as "a favorite game of cards at the South and West." Probably it reached much its present form among the Mississippi Valley flatboat men; but straights and flushes did not come into the game until after the Civil War, and well after that conflict bitter battles were still fought as to the relative value of a straight and of three of a kind. "Jackpot" does not appear in print until 1874.

As to the origin of stud poker—another hotly disputed point—Mr. Asbury's preferred version is that it originated in the Ohio backwoods soon after the Civil War. An excited player in this historic game is said to have drawn three kings as openers. There was so much raising before the draw that this player's cash was exhausted. He flung down his hand, dashed out and returned leading a spirited stallion, which he hitched to the back of his chair. Realizing that in his absence the other players had seen his hand, he suggested, "Since you fellows know damned well what I'm betting on, I propose that to make it fair each man turn three cards face up, discard two and draw two more, face down. Then I'll gamble this here studhorse on my chances." Stud poker was born.

I see no need for the exceptions. Gen. Schenck's fame rests largely upon the fact that when United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's he taught Queen Victoria and her family the great American game. And though Henry Clay played for high stakes, he seldom settled for them. His biographer, Glyndon Van Deusen, tells how the Great Compromiser, on winning $40,000 from John Bradford, "the Kentucky Franklin," was happy to accept a check for $500 in full payment, and, a week later, on losing $60,000 in a night, returned the identical check and paid no more. The custom of dividing by five or ten, common among penny-ante addicts today, has a noble tradition behind it.

SOME OF THE famous stories of poker as played by the late Uncle Joe Cannon, of Illinois, and "Czar" Reed, of Maine, might have larded Mr. Asbury's narrative; so might Alice Roosevelt Longworth's classic account of poker nights under the regency of the sainted Warren Gamaliel Harding. But Mr. Asbury is not concerned with poker alone, and his book is generously fat with good stories as it is. He includes the Texas version about a poker game began in 1853 and continued uninterruptedly to 1872. Jonathan Daniels tells it differently; he says the game was begun in Virginia and is still going on. Mr. Asbury also tells of the great game played in Santa Fe, N. Mex., in 1889, when Ike Jackson, of Colorado City, Tex., raised John Dougherty $100,000, and Dougherty, asking the Governor, a bystander, to sign an unseen paper for him, threw the paper into the pot, declaiming, "I raise you the Territory of New Mexico! There's the deed." Ike threw down his cards, saying, "Take the pot. But it's lucky for you that the Governor of Texas isn't here."

It is a learned and vastly entertaining work. But considering the vastness of the possible field of entertainment, it seems a bit sketchy. The narrative ceases all too soon, at page 469.

Revival of the G. O. P.

By Ernest K. Lindley

Two-Party System Restored

TWO RESULTS of the election are clear.

The first is that the two-party system has been re-established, thus ending an abnormal trend toward government in the name of a single party. The Republican Party has recaptured enough State and local offices to fatten a political organization. By overriding both the Progressives in Wisconsin and the Farmer-Laborites in Minnesota, it has further strengthened the two-party line.

LINDLEY.

The second is that the Republican wave was bigger than was expected by most forecasters. It washed too high to be passed off as a normal midterm windblown wave. Yet its dimensions can easily be exaggerated. It fell short of the tidal waves of 1910, 1918 and 1930, each of which was followed by a greater tidal wave at the next Presidential election. The Democratic Party is still the majority party of the Nation.

BEYOND THESE two points lies the realm of conjecture and wishful thinking. Mr. Hoover and other right-wing Republicans naturally wish the Republican resurgence to be regarded as a repudiation of the New Deal. Yet the outstanding feature of the campaign was the acceptance by Republican candidates of the objectives and most of the achievements of the New Deal. Some of them neutralized the New Deal as an issue, as Thomas E. Dewey did in New York.

Considering that he was running against a very able Governor in a State which the Democrats have controlled and governed well for 16 years, Mr. Dewey's race was, on the whole, the most remarkable of the campaign. Other Republicans concentrated their attack on the New Deal to two or three limited fronts. With a comely array of fresh faces, a few old guard Republicans were swept into power, but not enough to constitute a mandate to return to Mr. Hoover's kind of Republicanism.

SOME STANCH New Dealers would like to think that the Democrats who were most forthright in their liberalism made the best showing. For illustration they take Senator Wagner's easy victory and the election of James J. Mead, a 100 per cent New Dealer, as the short-term Senator from New York. The Democratic victory in California can be made to support the same argument. And so can the defeat or near-defeat of such lukewarm New Dealers as Senators Lonergan, of Connecticut; Gillette, of Iowa, and Van Nuys, of Indiana. But, beginning with the defeat of Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, as much evidence can be mustered to prove the opposite.

Few tears are being shed in New Deal circles over the defeat of such Democratic gubernatorial candidates as Curley, in Massachusetts, and Quinn, in Rhode Island. The Democratic tickets in Pennsylvania, Idaho, and two or three other States did not inspire enthusiasm among New Dealers. And, despite all the pre-election publicity about a "deal" with Frank Hague to elect a Democratic Senator from New Jersey, a good many highly placed New Dealers were pleased that the Republican won.

THE REVIVAL of the Republican Party automatically presses together the Democratic Party. The Democrats no longer can afford to quarrel so violently. In preparation for 1940 both the President and the more conservative Democrats become more important to each other. The question is whether the more conservative Democrats will move toward the President or whether the President will move toward the more conservative Democrats. The President could not move very far toward the old-line Democrats without cooling the enthusiasm of his progressive supporters. As between a middle-of-the-road Republican Party sprinkled with new faces and a middle-of-the-road Democratic Party, many of these progressive supporters would prefer the former.

The signals from the voters, as they are interpreted by several important New Dealers, counsel neither a plunge ahead nor a halt, but caution. Certainly the voters have not commanded that expansion of the social insurance system be postponed or abandoned. On the contrary, no small number of victorious Republicans are wreathed with the Townsend plan. The clamor from the farm belt cannot be read as a command to do nothing more for agriculture. It is rather a demand for better results.

THE DETAILED meaning of the election results is bound to remain a controversial subject. The President's full analysis is yet to be heard. But several of the top-ranking New Dealers subscribe to this general formula:

First, iron out the administrative kinks in the New Deal—especially in such agencies as the Federal Communications Commission, the Bituminous Coal Commission, the National Labor Relations Board and the WPA.

Second, keep the door open to the conservative Democrats who show a desire for reconciliation.

Third, keep the emphasis on economic recovery.

Fourth, make the most of the sense of national unity that has grown out of events in Europe and Asia.

There is a final point—upon which all informed persons are agreed—that whatever tactics he adopts, the President will not turn away from the major objectives of the New Deal.

By Harlan Miller

UNKNOWN HERO.

He lies on a hillside southwest of the Potomac . . . Below him airplanes rise from the drome in the lowlands and fly above the small boats in the river—a thrilling sight against the Washington backdrop, if he could but see.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

On the left, beyond the formal terrace, beyond the river, the gray stone buildings of the Government march from the Lincoln Memorial past the White House and the Washington Monument to the voluptuous dome of the Capitol.

* * * *

There the messages were written, the speeches uttered, the laws voted with the ayes and noes and signed; there the military commands went forth which sent him across the sea to die in a foreign war, the Unknown Soldier, this most singular enigmatic hero of our century, under the marble slab in Arlington.

"—a wreath from royalty"

Hundreds have stood here whose son he may have been, whose lover or husband or father perhaps he was . . . Did he leave a son behind? An eager, militant, warlike son? A son with a bitter hatred for war? His son is trench size now.

* * * *

What manner of man was he? Probably he was in his middle twenties, 24 or 26 . . . Was he a volunteer? Was he drafted? Did his heart leap or sink as he put on his uniform the first time? Was his blood racing with high adventure as he climbed the gangplank?

* * * *

Was he a tall, slim, silent, drawling son of the West? Was he short, husky, garrulous, passionate? Was he of Revolutionary stock or the son of an immigrant? Was he blond, dark-haired, red-haired with blue eyes? Was he shy and withdrawn, or was he the life of the party, always kidding? Was he an aristocrat like Quentin Roosevelt, or was he the obscure son of an obscure family, as unknown in life as in death? Was he a lieutenant or a poncom or a private?

* * * *

What was the way of his death? Did it stalk him and find him in his trench? Did he go forth to meet it crawling in the wet murky dawn through the stubble of some inauspicious yellow field? Did he go toward it with a rush, invincible, invulnerable, immortal?

* * * *

By what sudden quirk did his death overtake him? Did he swerve to left or right to tighten a gap in the line? Did he avoid one bursting shell and praise his lucky star, only to run into another? Did death come to him with merciful swiftness? Did it torture him for agonized hours seeming like eons? Did he lie for weeks in some thicket or shellhole, half buried?

Had he ever seen this Washington, his Capital, which now lies spread out below him? Had he wandered through its avenues as a tourist with a camera? Had he once looked down from the Monument toward this Virginia hillside where he would one day lie in enviable but anonymous glory?

* * * *

Had he ever strolled among these graves in Arlington, a little awed and depressed by the reminders of the illustrious dead, faintly troubled by the uneventful happiness of his own obscure, peaceful life, who is now honored for a multitude, beyond them all?

* * * *

Would he smile if he stood now on these broad stone steps, watching one of his 4,000,000 buddies pose uncomfortably but stubbornly against this marble slab while a proud fortyish wife snaps a camera and the sentry marches past eyes front toward the canvas sentry box and the green houses of the experimental farm in the valley below glisten in the westerly sun?

* * * *

His last hour . . . The top sergeant says we've got 'em on the run . . . Next week the war will be over . . . Anyhow, we're due to move out tomorrow . . . Damn this mud! . . . Maybe two weeks' leave in some dry, sunny place in the south of France . . . Haven't been dry for three days . . . Maybe a bottle of wine with a pretty French girl . . . Home before Christmas and a parade down Main street . . . The job and the girl . . . The hero's homecoming . . . So much to tell . . .

Prelude to Armistice Day Celebration 20 Years Afterward

600 Trees Here Must Give Way To Memorial

Cherries, Elms Will Go Some Transplanting Chopping Necessary

Parks officials reported yesterday that 600 Japanese cherry, elm and other trees would be "involved" in the Thomas Jefferson Memorial project, including 128 fully grown elms which must be chopped down.

On the basis of a tree census conducted recently under direction of C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, 328 Japanese cherry trees are affected, but some of these may be transplanted, it was said.

It was indicated that of the 600, about half can be moved to other soil and the other half must be destroyed. All are in the vicinity of the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park, on the south bank of which the Pantheonesque marble temple is to be built.

When the Fine Arts Commission and National Capital Park and Planning Commission approved architectural and ground use plans for the memorial last September, the office of John Russell Pope said that only a negligible number of trees would be affected by the project.

Bids for the foundation will be opened November 21. Congress has authorized $3,000,000 to be spent for the memorial, though only $500,000 has been appropriated to date.

Arno B. Cammerer, who is director of the National Park Service, executive agent for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission and vice chairman of the park and planning body—all three of which are interested in the project—said:

"It is still impossible to say accurately what will be the final fate of all these trees.

"Many of them, no doubt, will be left undisturbed. There are a number of varieties that could be planted to add to the beauty of the site, and it is just as possible that a great many new cherry trees may be planted.

On the site proper of the memorial there are 58 Japanese cherry trees, 20 of which will have to be cut down, according to Finnan. Most of the 270 others line the south and east shorelines of the Tidal Basin, which is to be altered to make room for the monument.

Finnan said all the holly trees in the vicinity could be saved.

'Battle' Opens Events Here Marking Armistice Day

at wreath-laying exercises at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. His address will be broadcast over the Nation.

For the first time since it became a holiday by common consent, Armistice Day will be a legal holiday and crowds will be swelled by school children, Government employes and thousands of visitors.

Launching a surprise attack out of darkness, a wave of American infantry rolled across 600 yards of no man's land to victory in a dramatic reconstruction of the historic battle of Cantigny. Supported by tanks, the American troops followed a heavy artillery barrage into blinding machine gun and rifle fire from the enemy, and planted the Stars and Stripes in the climax of a two-hour show.

The pageant, staged as an Armistice Day celebration by the Cissel-Saxon Post of the American Legion, opened with tributes to departed comrades and Gold Star mothers and Red Cross nurses.

A moment later, 11 of the Army's newest high speed tanks raced up the field, turned up the hill away from the grand stand and then staged an obstacle exhibit, during which the Army drivers from Fort Red Cross nurses.
into the air from raised runways.

While the tanks performed, six planes of the Maryland National Guard raced overhead, dropping flares and bombs. From the south a searchlight and a pair of 3-inch antiaircraft guns, manned by the 260th Coast Artillery from the District National Guard, fought off the plane attack, under command of Col. Walter W. Burns.

Planes From Baltimore

Troops from all parts of Maryland, from the District and from Fort George G. Meade took part in last night's "battle" at Silver Spring.

Planes from the Twenty-ninth Division observation squadron, based at Logan Field, Baltimore, were under command of Maj. Charles Mason. Other Maryland units included Company H, Westminster; Company M, Annapolis; Company A and Headquarters Detachment, Frederick; Company B, Hagerstown; Howitzer Company, Kensington; Service Company, Silver Spring; Company F, Hyattsville, and Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, Laurel.

Then the searchlight went out, and darkness fell on the filed and with it the tenseness of the zero hour.

Brig. Gen. D. John Markey, directing operations from a hilltop radio tower, told the story of Cantigny — how in 45 terrible minutes the American First Division advanced 2,200 yards, took 250 prisoners, captured the height of Cantigny and held it against seven counter attacks.

Despite the crowds, officials said, the sale of grandstand seats was small, and a loss of more than $3,000 was expected.

Colorful ceremonies will mark a gathering of the District of Columbia Grande Voiture of the Forty and Eight at the District World War Monument in West Potomac Park today at 10 a. m. C. Cassard Schroth, the grand chef de gare, will be in command of the exercises.

Four members of the President's Cabinet and their wives will attend services to the memory of President Wilson at Washington Cathedral. These ceremonies are scheduled for 3 p. m.

Heading the distinguished list of those who will attend are the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson and Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper.

The services will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co. from 3 to 3:30 p. m., under auspices of the Woodrow Wilson Armistice Day committee, headed by Mrs. Kate Trenholm Abrams.

The principal address will be made by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, with prayers offered by the Rev. James H. Taylor, D. D., pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church where President Wilson worshipped during his eight years in the White House.

The cathedral choir of men and boys will sing three hymns during the service—the same hymns which were sung when Wilson was placed Chapel on February 6, 1924. Mrs. Wilson and other members of the in the crypt of the Bethlehem family will be present.

A wreath also will be placed on Wilson's tomb by George Washington Post No. 1, American Legion at 3:30 p. m. The war-time President was the only civilian eligible for membership in the American Legion and was a member of this post.

To Pay Tribute to Nurses

Under joint auspices of the Disabled American War Veterans of the World War and the Washington Cathedral staff, the fourth annual Armistice Day service in tribute to "nurses and other women who served their country in time of war" will be held at the Cathedral at 3:45 p. m.

Exercises also were held last night at the Jewish Community Center, at which Leo A. Rover, former District attorney here, spoke.

Denouncing communism as a "trojan horse policy designed to mislead the people," Rover declared that "Communists really intend to reorganize international society by force and violence and are continuing their attacks upon the family and religion."

Sponsored by Washington Post, No. 58, Jewish War Veterans of the United States, the affair was called to order by Myer S. Lips-Hitch, chairman of the arrangements committee. Others who participated were Rabbi Henry Segal, Joseph F. Barr, commander of the post; Mrs. Sidney B. Diamond, president of the Women's Auxiliary; Mrs. Falk Harmel, national vice president of the auxiliary, and Isador S. Worth, national commander of the Jewish War Veterans.

Col. Arnold to Speak

The Jewish veterans will hold Armistice ceremonies at 3 p. m. today. A wreath will be placed on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, with speeches by noted Jewish leaders. Also participating will be Col. William R. Arnold, Army chief of chaplains, who is scheduled to speak over a Nation-wide radio hookup of the Mutual Broadcasting System at 3:30.

These exercises will be preceded by the laying of a wreath by Mrs. Henry M. Roberts, president general, Daughters of American Revolution, at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in behalf of the national organization at 2:15 p. m.

At another meeting last night in the Masonic Auditorium, Rockwell Kent, noted artist, declared oppressed minorities and nations facing Fascist domination are looking to the United States for leadership and guidance.

Drawing attention to the futility of constant concessions to the totalitarian states, he declared that responsibility for adoption of a new policy in defense of democratic ideals and the rights of small nations rests clearly with this country.

Robert Norton, editor of the magazine China Today, and the Rev. Herman F. Beissig, executive secretary of the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, urged that "we remember that the democratic peoples of Spain, China and other parts of the world are not beaten."

The meeting was held under the joint sponsorship of the Committee for Aid to China; Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy and the American League for Peace and Democracy.

The Society of the Third Division, A. E. F., will open their ceremonies at 10 a. m. in Arlington. A wreath will be laid on the grave of Maj. Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, commander of the division. At 10:15 a. m. another wreath will be placed on the grave of Maj. Gen. U. G. McAlexander, regiment commander of the Thirty-eighth Infantry in France.

Services at the Second Division monument at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue will be held at 2 p. m.

Mothers to Participate.

Bishop Freeman will extend greetings of the church and will introduce Owen A. Galvin, national commander of the organization. Dr. Walter E. Hess, department commander, will present a wreath and it will be placed on Wilson's tomb by Mrs. Mary Holt, past department commander of the Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. George Gordon Seibold, founder and past national president of the American Gold Star Mothers, also will participate in the ceremonies.

At 9 a. m. in Memorial Chapel, Walter Reed Hospital, services will be conducted under auspices of Fort Stevens Post, No. 33, American Legion.

The Rev. Jerome L. Fritsche, World War chaplain with the A. E. F., will deliver the principal address. He will be assisted by Lieut. Col. A. C. Oliver, chief chaplain, Army Medical Center, and the chapel choir will furnish music.

The annual Armistice Day high mass and memorial services will be held in St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church, Eighth and L streets northwest, and will be broadcast by Radio Station WJSV.

On the lighter side of the day's events, hundreds of dances and balls will be held throughout the city tonight. An Armistice eve ball, sponsored by Grande Voiture 174, Forty and Eight, honor society of the American Legion, started things off at Wardman Park Hotel last night.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will head the list of patrons and patronesses for the annual Armistice Day ball of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the Willard Hotel. Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring will be among the distinguished guests.

Holdup Victim Shot as He Talks To Girl in Auto

Shot in the forehead, right knee and left arm by a holdup man he said accosted him on Beach Drive in Rock Creek Park last night, John G. Clements, 33, of 6100 Fourteenth street northwest, was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Clements, employed in the Government Printing Office, told police he was talking with a woman companion when the robber ordered them "not to move," then fired eight shots into their automobile. The woman, who refused to give her name, was held at Bethesda substation of Montgomery County police for questioning.

The wounded man was taken to the hospital by the Bethesda Rescue Squad after first aid by Dr. Leo Donovan of Bethesda, to whose office he was taken by Montgomery Policemen Leo Day and E. R. Jones. The policemen were attracted to Clements' automobile, they said, by persistent blowing of its horn.

Clements was taken from the machine in the 6400 block of Brookeville road, Chevy Chase, Md. He told police he drove there from the scene of the shooting.

Citizens Urge Underpasses As Traffic Aid

Congress Heights Meets Admit Plan Costly But Cite Advantages

Solution of pedestrian control problems by construction of underground passages at dangerous intersections was suggested to the Commissioners by a resolution adopted last night by the Congress Heights Citizens Association.

A majority of the group agreed that the subway solution, although more expensive than control by traffic lights, would prove more feasible.

The association advocated increase of the speed limit from 22 to 25 miles per hour. Other resolutions on traffic problems called for a 30-mile zone for northbound traffic on Nichols avenue southeast from Milwaukee street to Sheridan road and for southbound traffic from Howard road to Milwaukee street and prohibition of parking at the southeast entrance to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The organization went on record in favor of appointment to the vacancy on the Board of Commissioners of a citizen from the southeast side of the Anacostia River, submitting the name of Adelbert W. Lee, president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association.

J. Lewis Gelbman was elected to succeed Ernest J. Reed as president of the association. Other officers for the coming year, all re-elected, are Benson Taylor, first vice president; Earl Cooper, second vice president; Mrs. Edna G. Dulin, secretary; Miss Hazel C. Young, treasurer, and Mrs. Alma Allen, financial secretary. Taylor and Cooper will continue as delegates to the Federation of Citizen Associations.

Woman, 66, 75th Auto Victim Here

Black Flag Will Fly Motorcyclist Hurt 3d Safe Driver Found She Gets Certificate

The black flag will fly before the District Building today for Washington's seventy-fifth traffic victim of the year, while police reflect that in four days only three drivers have been found eligible for the Post-Metropolitan Police safety award.

Miss Mary Given, 66, of 4700 Connecticut avenue northwest, died in Garfield Hospital of injuries received in a collision two weeks ago. Ruth Ross, 47, of Arlington, Va., who was driving the automobile with which Miss Given's was in collision October 26 at Chesapeake and Forty-sixth streets, was held for the coroner.

Five persons riding a motorcycle last night started a police chase that sent the operator to Gallinger Hospital with a fractured skull, while he was charged with 12 traffic violations. Motorcycle Patrolman Anthony Ritchie noticed John Manthos, 20, of 420 Second street northwest, with four passengers on his motorcycle at Sixth and D streets northwest.

Skull and Leg Broken

Ignoring an order to stop, Ritchie said, Manthos sped west on D street throwing one passenger to the pavement within a block. At Eighth and D streets, the remaining three passengers got off and Manthos continued through traffic lights to Pennsylvania avenue until he crashed on the Ellipse into an automobile operated by John Walsh, of the 600 block of Nineteenth street northwest.

Monthos suffered a fractured skull and leg. Among charges placed against him were passing red lights, speeding, colliding and driving with four persons on a motorcycle unequipped with tandem.

Rina Lavezzo, 38, of 1432 Wisconsin avenue northwest, passenger in an automobile operated by Gus C. Lavezzo, 17, of 2918 M street northwest, was seriously injured when the machine failed to make a turn at Beach drive and Military road northwest, striking a large boulder. At Georgetown Hospital, she was said to be suffering from a possible skull fracture and severe lacerations of the face.

Woman Wins Prize

The safety award went to a woman driver, Mrs. Margaret E. Trusheim, of 804 Massachusetts avenue northwest. She traveled the length of Constitution avenue without leaving her own traffic lane or violating a single regulation.

Mrs. Trusheim, unaware she was being followed by Policeman George M. Patton, the city's "safety officer," carefully signaled for a turn as she swung into the dangerous crossing at Pennsylvania avenue and halted momentarily to yield the right-of-way to several pedestrians and another motorist.

When presented with the Life Underwriters Association "certificate of service to public safety," Mrs. Trusheim said she had driven ten years without serious mishap.

She was the only driver observed in a cruise of several hours who qualified for the award.

If I Were King, I'd Go To See 'If I Were King!'

Colman Stars in New Version at Palace
Holiday Matinees Scheduled Today
Notes of the Current Theater

It would not be so surprising if "If I Were King" should turn out to be Paramount's most notable production of the current season.

In fashioning his new screen version of the famous old Justin Huntly McCarthy romantic melodrama, Frank Lloyd has contrived a fast-moving interesting and exciting "modernized" treatment of a legendary tale that has survived the years as a standard work on both stage and screen. There is action, color and pictorial pageantry in the filmed fable, revealed yesterday for the first time on a local screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

BELL

In the first place, it is doubtful if the picture could have been better cast than it is. Ronald Colman, in the role of Francois Villon, the vagabond "gutter poet," made ruler of France through an odd quirk of circumstance, may have been accused of "merely playing himself again," but Mr. Colman at his best is decidedly good. He is dangerously close to his excellent best in his present flamboyant role. Frances Dee, as Katherine de Vaucelles, is both competent and decorative and Basil Rathbone, in the slyly deceptive role of Louis XI, presents a remarkable revelation of the skill with which he is able to personify an harassed monarch not above the promptings of expediency in solving his problems of state. In roles of only slightly lesser importance, Ellen Drew, a rapidly rising newcomer to roles of prominence; C. V. France, a veteran English actor, making his first appearance in American films; Stanley Ridges, former member of the National Theater Players; Alma Lloyd, daughter of the producer-director, and the veteran William Farnum, Francis McDonald, Walter Kingsford, Henry Wilcoxon, Ralph Forbes, Sidney Toler and a host of others contribute to the creation and maintenance of the high spirit in which the rousing romance is played.

Changes have been made in the structure of the present edition of the drama that are all to its advantage. For instance, Mr. France impersonates a new character in the action—the father of Francois Villon, who replaces the traditional mother, a sympathetic sop to the sentimentalists, who thus is transmogrified into a vital factor in breathing new vigor into a favorite play. And while Villon's penchant for tossing off pleasing cadences has not been ignored in the present version, neither has it been made a cloyingly saccharine element of the turbulent developments of a romance that here is disclosed as a narrative that well may enlist the enthusiasm of all ages, all classes and all members of any family.

The movement of the picturesque events with which "If I Were King" is so thickly peppered is inaugurated by some of Villon's most impertinent roguery. The constabulary is hot on his heels for major depredations for which the penalties are heavy. He evades them with uncanny cleverness and even dares to risk capture by following the object of his ardent admiration to worship in the cathedral, where he weaves silvery words for her enchantment. It is this infatuation that eventually leads to his apprehension, trial and the peculiarly happy sentence of assuming the rule of the populace. His adventures then, in swinging allegiance away from the oppressive Burgundians to the cause of the tottering king, are such as to stir the blood of any audience.

The atmospheric embellishments of the florid tale range from the squalor of the Court of Miracles, in the sullen heart of Paris, to the luxurious chambers of the king's palace. Whatever the background or the temper of the pictured scene, it is admirably matched by the engrossing behavior of its chief actors.

It is no dull, heavy, cumbrous story that is unfolded in "If I Were King." There is a flash, sparkle and delightful quality of humor about it all, in addition to the limpid passages of its primary romance, that compiles an entertainment of superlative and unusual fascination and merit. Preston Sturges is entitled to no little credit for the excellence of his adaption and rejuvenation of a play that is not so time-worn as you might think, and Richard Hageman's musical setting adds stil further to its enlivement.

Little, if anything, in the way of disappointment awaits those who plan to view this picture—and that should include a large preponderance of Washington's theater-goers.

The supplementary features of the new bill at the Palace have been judiciously chosen. A FitzPatrick travelogue, in natural color, is devoted to "Cairo, City of Contrasts" and may be rated among the leaders in this popular series. Of entirely different nature is "Timber Toppers," a short-reel subject devoted to the training of jumping horses for show competition. Jumpers, it seems, are not born; they are made—by the skill, patience and kindliness of the trainer and the inherent sagacity and "heart" of the noblest animals of their species.. The new issue of the "News of the Day" completes the program.

Continuing yesterday's incomplete forecast of film bills a week or so away, it is worth pointing out that the major screen attraction at the Earle Theater for Thanksgiving week, beginning a week from today, will be the Warner Brothers' production of "The Sisters," filmization of the novel by Myron Brinig, with Bette Davis and Errol Flynn in the co-stellar roles. This is the story of three girls who pursued divergent careers that began back in the days of the Administration of Theodore Roosevelt. Jane Bryan and Anita Louise, with Miss Davis, make up the trio. "The Sisters" recently was hailed as the "Picture of the Week" by Life. The stage bill will be headlined by those two incomparable dancers, Chaney and Fox.

"Men With Wings," Paramount's so-called "cavalcade of aviation," will move into the Metropolitan on November 18, for the roast turkey and fixin's period.

Incidentally, holiday matinees will be presented in all Warner theaters in Washington today in celebration of Armistice Day. Special attractions have been booked in all houses, which will present their first shows at 1 p. m., with the single exception of the Tivoli, Fourteenth street and Park road, where festivities, if that is what they are, will get under way at 12:30. Five de luxe performances are scheduled for today and tomorrow at the Earle, as per "Time Table" appearing elsewhere on this page—I hope.

Now, if it is a different kind of film bill you are looking for, this might be it.

Tomorrow night at the Jewish Community Center a program of old-time "movies" will be presented under the title of "Flicker Frolics." The items listed for projection include Mary Pickford's ancient classic of tempestuous romance, "Savage Love;" William S. Hart's jerky thriller, "The Fugitive, or the Taking of Luke McVane," with Enid Markey (remember her?) as the heroine; "The Love Affairs of the Inventor of the Areial Torpedo"—a short title prize winner!—and a fashion parade of bathing beauties of 1898.

Following the showing of the fillums, there will be community singing of "Daisy," "After the Ball," and other antique ballads—and modern dancing to a "hot" swing orchestra. More fun!

Beery Tests

Wallace Beery made costume tests for the first time in his life for his role in "Stand Up and Fight." He had always insisted previously that his type of clothes needed no testing.

Boulton Cast

Matthew Boulton, British stage actor who was brought to this country for the detective role in "Night Must Fall," which he created in London, appears in "A Christmas Carol" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He plays Mr. Twill, kind-hearted business man who figures in the regeneration of Scrooge, enacted by Reginald Owen.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 10.

SUCCESS: Last spring George Graves, veteran British comic, emerged from retirement to join the cast of "Me and My Girl," for $100 a week . . . After two weeks, because of the lack of customers, Graves was placed upon a percentage basis—and for months thereafter he netted less than $20 a week . . . One Saturday night the BBC needed a last-minute substitute for a canceled broadcast, and some of the cast of "Me and My Girl" volunteered . . . As a result of that broadcast, Graves' percentage has been netting him over $1,000 a week—for that one broadcast popularized the hit tune of "Me and My Girl"—"The Lambeth Walk."

ENTERPRISE: Hollywood now is planning to screen the Stanley-Dr. Livingstone episode in Africa . . . George Arliss has been invited to play either role—and the producers fear that in the famed meeting scene both Livingstone and Stanley may greet each other with "George Arliss, I believe."

SUIT: George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart are being sued by the Chock-Full-o'-Nuts Co., because one of the firm's stores is mentioned in the play, "The Fabulous Invalid" . . . The playwrights will take the stand and testify that in their plays they've mentioned all the Roosevelts, King George, the Rockefellers, Hoover, the Supreme Court, Gandhi—and none of these ever objected.

SWANK: Debutantes Althea Pardee and Natalie Heide will debate over Radio Station WMCA . . . The subject of the debate is "Night Clubs and Cafe Society" . . . Miss Pardee is taking the affirmative side. Miss Heide, who will argue against night clubs, completed her speech last night—while she was being entertained at the Kit Kat Klub.

WARNING: Some of the Broadway night clubs have had their licenses suspended because the show girls were permitted to mingle with the customers, etc. . . . At the Roseland Dance Hall now it is against the rules to speak to a Roseland hostess—without a formal introduction.

DRUNK: Bea Lillie has brought this British yarn back to America: A drunk and his companion staggered from a night club and started walking home. The first drunk stopped at a tree, looked up and pointed: "Do you see that fish up there in the tree?" . . . The second drunk stared into the branches above him and said: "Yes, I see it. It must be mad."

NAME: Evelyn Waugh, the British novelist whose "A Handful of Dust" was included in Woollcott's Second Reader, received a cable from Viking Press requesting him to cable the correct pronunciation of his name. They told the novelist that they had been beseiged with letters asking if his name is pronounced "Waw" or "Woof" or "Wawf" or what . . . "Correct pronunciation," was Waugh's reply, "is Cholmondoley."

YOUTH: George Jessel broadcast for Jimmy Walker's program from New York hospitals last Sunday . . . One youngster, bedridden at Bellevue, started singing before the broadcast. "Remember," Jessel warned, "don't sing too well" . . . "Why not?" the boy asked . . . "Because—Boo!" Jessel cautioned, "Eddie Cantor might adopt you."

PACT: A number of playwrights and scenario writers organized last week in connection with the proposal to reduce the traditional 10 per cent which theatrical agents receive from all clients . . . "If only a concentrated attempt were made by us," the chairman pleaded, "we could cut that 10 per cent to 5 per cent" . . . Ben Hecht objected to this. "You can't attack robbery," he stated, "with half-way measures."

Columbia

For those who cannot get to the races on Armistice Day, a trip to Loew's Columbia Theater will be the next best thing.

Getting off to an early start for the new week, the Columbia yesterday broke out the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Stablemates" for a repeat F street engagement. This is the Sam Wood picture in which Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney have the costellar roles, spiritedly aided and abetted by Lady Q, a thoroughbred bang-tail that supplies the motivation for the deep affection that springs up between a discredited veterinary, a fugitive from the law, and a stable boy, who comes into possession of the nag one leap ahead of the glue factory.

During the action of the comedy-melodrama, exciting race scenes at some of the most famous tracks in the country supply all the thrills of the real thing. Primarily, however the story is one of devotion between the man and the boy and in its emotional tug runs a close second to "The Champ," in which Beery and Jackie Cooper scored so decisively. Marojie Gateson, Minor Watson, Margaret Hamilton and a long list of others do their individual and collective bits for the glory of the turf and a great love.

The usual short reels and "News of the Day," preserved in gelatin, complete the entertainment.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

THOUGHTS on Facts: The enlarged number of Republicans in the next Congress should stiffen the opposition to any future reorganization bill which would set up a one-man Civil Service Commission or alter too much the General Accounting Office functions. Opposition to the last bill came from many quarters on the grounds that these two moves would place two highly important agencies under the Administration's right thumb, and the incoming Republicans aren't expected to give aid or a smell of comfort in this direction . . . It is recalled that Representative Robert Ramspeck had some form or another of opposition, but : obody heard much of it.

Ramspeck is the one prophet who is honored in his own country and among his own people . . . Through some grapevine or another, word has reached the Georgia voters that Ramspeck is the greatest single advocate of a good personnel system in the Federal Government . . . And whether the Georgia voters appreciate the merit system is something else; happily the appreciate Aamspeck's efforts in this direction—and as long as they send him up here their own pocketbooks and the fiscal affairs of the Government will be the gainer.

So they give him a dinner Saturday night at an Atlanta hotel under auspices of the American Federation of Government Employes and Federal workers of his District.

CONCERNING the ups and downs of Agriculture's elevator operators, some bother is being felt by operators of elevators 44 and 45, at the C street end of the fourth wing. It's the overcrowding during the lunch hours. The operators say they are being overworked and want the demand on these two cars reduced . . . Also, the Agriculture telephone number has been changed from the long, familiar District 6350 to Republic 4142. This event is a cue for Superintendent of Telegraph and Telephone Koehl to remark on the confusion caused in the department by the failure of employes properly to hang up the receivers after use. The receivers are left dangling on a filing case or otherwise propped on a stack of papers on books near the phone's base. That important thing called the time element is involved, he says, as such practices sends trouble shooters all over the building looking for the trouble.

In the Agriculture Exchange is this note: "Welfare Appeal. A pair of shoes, size 8-D, is needed for a man employed in this department. Anyone having a pair of the size mentioned, should send them to Mrs. Winfree, room 1041, South Building." The note is reprinted here to help the man get the needed shoes, and, also in wonderment, that someone employed by the great Agriculture Department is in such condition.

AMONG newcomers to town is Russell A. Welch, whose new job is assistant head to the Unjust Enrichment Division of Internal Revenue. He has a good background in the service. Born in Bushnell, N. C., he entered the Sale Tax Unit on February 26, 1919; was transferred to the Income Tax Unit on September 1, 1920, and to the field at Greensboro as income tax inspector on May 16, 1922. At Greensboro, he worked to the position of internal revenue agent in charge, October 16, 1930, and was transferred to the Nashville office on November 1, 1933. He is here now in his new capacity.

CARRIE JOHNSON, recent winner of a drug store talent award, and an employe of the GAO, will participate in the floor show to be given at the GAO check section dinner and dance to be held in the Continental Hotel on Friday evening, November 18 . . .

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 10.—When I went up the hill to see what Paulette Goddard was up to after her success in "Young in Heart," I found her busy reading Edgar Selwyn's new play, "One Never Knows," dealing with the anti-Semitic situation and he wants her to do it. Bing Crosby would like her for his picture, Metro has another for her, and this before "Dramatic School" has been previewed.

HEDDA HOPPER

She was curled up in an easy chair in the pavilion at the end of the garden, which overlooks the swimming pool and tennis court. That's practically her headquarters since Charlie Chaplin's working 20 hours a day on his new story with Danny James, who's a direct descendant of Jesse's.

"Isn't it funny," Paulette said, "that Charlie worked for two years on a story for me and it wouldn't jell. But the minute he got an idea for himself it's pouring forth like sap out of a tree."

She was wearing Charlie's newest present, a star ruby ring, the weight of which nearly broke her arm. She talked a lot about the new Ski Club she's forming at Lake Tahoe. Wallace Neff is busy drawing up designs for it. It's to have a main clubhouse, and each member will have his own cabin. So far 30 people have applied for membership. They expect to have some of it finished by Christmas. Charlie smiles in a benevolent sort of way at her shrewdness, and it's a chuckle watching him take bows on his little girl's success.

Paulette's lost the life and death intensity she had before making this picture.

"You can work till you're blue in the face," said she, "but until you hear that camera grind it doesn't mean a thing. All your enterprise, lessons and study won't make you an actress."

The fright she got after seeing those first rushes . . . "Why, I was so heavy I could have changed places with Jimmy Cagney in his last picture. Thank goodness the studio let me do them over after I'd seen them.

"I know now that making 'Modern Times' was like doing a home movie. Now actors don't fight for fame but for good parts and directors."

"But how did you get started, Paulette?" I asked.

"From watching all you people, which I did since I was 5. Do you remember the Charlie Goddards at Great Neck?"

"Do I—he was head of the American Drug Co."

"Well, I'm his niece," continued Paulette. "And for many years I was brought up in his home with his children. We were kept out of sight, but that never prevented our peeping through windows every time Uncle Charlie gave a party, which was practically every day.

"As you know, he was president of the Great Neck Golf Club, and our home was the nineteenth hole, also the home of nearly every actor on Broadway. I met Flo Ziegfield there and he gave me my first chance in 'Palm Beach Nights,' and believe it or not, I got $500 a week. So you see I was a spoiled brat from the beginning. The opening night in Palm Beach I went to Flo's party afterwards, but Uncle Charlie, who was always about, happened in—gave me a spanking and sent me home to bed.

"I'll never forget the night I went to Bradley's. I was pretty puffed up and having a wonderful time with the male heartbeat of the season, who said: 'You're 18, aren't you?' Sap that I was, I replied: 'No, I'll be 15 my next birthday.'

"Then I was sent home again! Didn't have any luck in Palm Beach. Nor was it fun doing the show at night and going to school in the daytime. But I married Edgar James at 17 and we had a happy year together in North Carolina, where I learned to hunt and caught a fox, but saw no point in getting another one—and longed to go back on the stage, which he was dead set against. But I went, and our marriage went with it."

When I found out her birthday was June 3 I knew she couldn't help herself. Those people are eaten up with ambition. They're restless, long for a change. When they're most successful they want something else and vice versa. No matter how much money they have they still want to work. Gemini people are like that. Paulette thinks too many parties are a waste of time. For three years she went to U. C. L. A., taking rhetoric and English history.

Wife, 12, Ordered Home to Parents

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Jennie Rota, 12, married to Frank Rota, 24, in Valparaiso, Ind., August 30, and an expectant mother, was ordered today by Juvenile Court to live with her parents until she is 16. If before that time she wishes the marriage dissolved, the court authorized institution of annulment proceedings.

With $14,257 in Bank, He Dies Clad in Sacks

Vancouver, British Columbia, Nov. 10, (Canadian Press).—Elderly J. Sartor, clad in potato sacks, was found dead on his bed today in a tumbledown shack.

In his clothing were four pennies, a cheap watch and a bank book, showing he had $14,257 account in a bank here.

Marine's Body Found in Potomac

The body of Private Robert Grant Rawlinson, 19, United States Marine Corps, of North Hampton, Long Island who was drowned when his canoe overturned off Bellevue Magazine November 2, was recovered yesterday by Harbor Police.

The body was identified by Dr. O. D. Yarborough, of the Navy Medical Corps.

Bluefield Editor To Head WPA Project

The Works Progress Administration announced yesterday the appointment of Bruce Crawford, Bluefield (W. Va.) editor, as State director of the West Virginia writers' project.

Henry G. Alsberg, national director of the project, said Crawford's first task would be to complete the West Virginia Guide, one volume in the American Guide series.

Attorney Files $50,000 Balm Suit

Carlton Sard, a lawyer, of 1717 K street northwest, sued in District Court yesterday for $50,000 damages from Edwin Ronsaville, a clerk in the Woodward Building (with National Surety Co), whom he charged with alienating the affections of Mrs. Mildred Sard.

Ronsaville declined to comment on the action.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Say, it—with a Clear Skin

OUR SKIN frequently reflects how we feel. In business and social contacts we like our friends to tell us how well we look.

The laity now recognizes—as physicians and scientists have for years—the vital importance of rich, red blood, as the foundation of strength, energy, and a clear healthy skin.

for that tired-let-down feeling

It is well known how worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll of the precious red cells of the blood.

S.S.S. Tonic brings you new strength and vitality by restoring your blood to a healthy state, and its benefits are cumulative and enduring in the absence of an organic trouble.

Improves the appetite

Further, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite . . . foods taste better . . . natural digestive juices are stimulated, and finally, the food you eat is of more value . . . a very important step back to health.

Buy and use with complete confidence, and we believe you, like thousands of others, will be enthusiastic in your praise of S.S.S. Tonic for its part in making "you feel like yourself again."

At all drug stores in two sizes. You will find the larger size more economical.

S.S.S. Tonic stimulates the appetite and helps change weak blood cells to strong ones.

Recipes for Rice Pour In on Judges Of Post Contest; Winners Listed

Used in Pancakes Makes Good Desserts Gay Middle Course

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

ALL THE RICE in China seemed to have descended on the recipe contest judges last week. Avalanches of formulas tumbled into judicial laps, each one as inviting and appetizing as the next. One rice dish came from a resourceful Asiatic chef, another from George J. Dobfey, who seemed not at all dismayed by competition with dozens of seasoned housewives, or, as he said, "My rice pudding has been often proved acceptable to not only my family but my friends."

This rice contest brought forth many enlightening facts about the food page followers. One of the most subtly flavored rice desserts consisting of powdered sugar, angelica garnish and orange flower water) was submitted by the creator, Annie Rice, in person. Several rice recipes were so desirable in Washington homes that their duplications in many cases forced them out of competition. These popular offerings included many similar versions of rice and liver or fish baked into loaves, rice muffins, rolls or cookies, rice snow-and cheese, meat or nut filled rice casseroles. There were frothy rice and pineapple supremes "which bore' such names as Glorified Rice, Angel Pudding, Heavenly Hash, Rice Delight, Delicious Rice, Golden Rice and Paramount Pudding.

Used in Pancakes

First award of $3.00 has been won by Mrs. Alice Flaherty, 5520 Fourth street northwest, for her ingenious conception of rice rolled up into griddle cakes and then stuffed. What an unusual and conversation getting dish Mrs. Flaherty's rice pancakes would prove if served, piping hot from the oven, at a surprise buffet or a noon-day Sunday breakfast. This is one of those delicately flavored entrees which possesses such distinction of taste and appearance that all other servings are soon forgotten.

Rice Chicken Rolls

Measure 1 cup of rice, boiled, add 1 teaspoon of butter and mix lightly. Add 2-3 cup of milk and 2 beaten egg yolks and 1-3 cup of thick sour cream. Add the following dry ingredients mixed together: 1¼ cups of flour, ½ teaspoon of salt, 3 teaspoons of baking powder and 1-16 teaspoon of soda. Mix well, fold in the 2 egg whites beaten stiff. Drop by spoonfuls on a hot griddle and bake until puffy and light. Make a sauce by blending 1 tablespoon of flour and 1 of butter and slowly adding ½ cup of cream. Cook for a few minutes and add 3 cups of sautee mushrooms, a dash of salt and pepper and 1 cup cooked chopped chicken, or fresh dry pork or 1 cup of tuna fish which has been thoroughly rinsed in hot water to drain off any grease. Drop a tablespoon of this mixture on each pancake and roll up. Place in a buttered pan, top each roll with a teaspoon of sour cream, sprinkle with grated cheese, dot with butter and bake in a moderate oven, 375 F., for 15 minutes. Serve piping hot with currant jam.

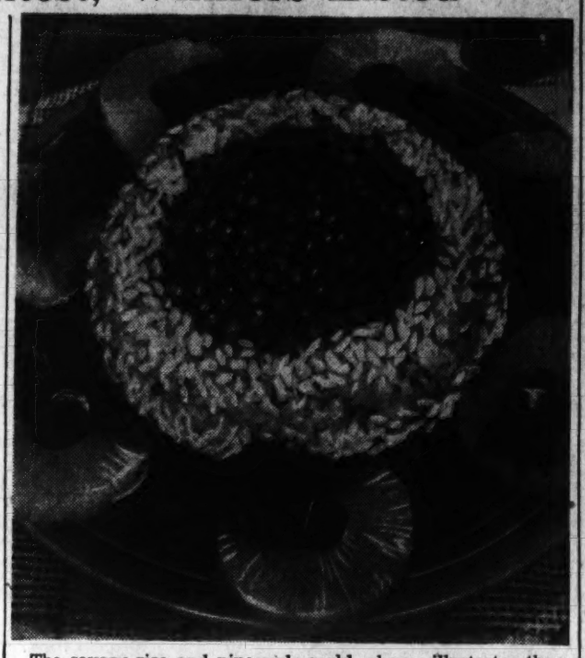
Gay Middle Course

Second award of $2.00 has been won by Mrs. Verna Kretzmann, 645 L street southwest, for a rice recipe which she unearthed recently in southern Florida. As Mrs. Kretzmann points out, her rice dish is very pleasant to eat and equally gay and festive to look at. More than a look, however, should be accorded this middle course serving, for it is one of the few rice recipes existant which is better cold than hot. The combination of chopped ham, olives and a smack of relish produces a salad of interest for left-over-food addicts.

Mrs. Kretzmann

Spicy Rice Salad

Combine the following ingredients, mixing well: 1½ cups of cold steamed rice, 2-3 cup of cooked chopped tender ham, 1 tablespoon of relish, 1 teaspoon of apple chutney, 1 cup of chopped crisp celery, ½ cup of diced firm tomatoes, 1 teaspoon of finely chopped onion, ½ teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of celery seed and 6 sliced stuffed olives. Blend in enough mayonnaise to enable mixture to adhere when molded into cups and turned out on crispy lettuce leaves. Garnish top of each serving with a twirl of mayonnaise, a dash of paprika and a sprig of parsley. Surround with deviled eggs and anchovy curls.



The savory rice and pineapple mold, above, illustrates the type of appetizing and festive looking entree entered in last week's rice contest. Dishes of this nutritious grain varied from soups to desserts. Many of them were identified by flavorings of spice, nuts and fruit juices

Seasonable Surprise

Mrs. B. B. Robinson, 5400 Allan road, Washington, D. C., has won a $1 prize for a rice recipe disguised as a holiday cake. For Thanksgiving hostesses who crave a final course which will prove a complete surprise to the palates of their guests, Mrs. Robinson's rice filled sponge cake might be the answer to their prayer. Few rice recipes could be as breathlessly snowy looking or dainty as this holiday cake.

Mrs. Robinson

Holiday Cake

Whip 1 pint of whipping cream. Add 1 cup of powdered sugar and 1 tablespoon of vanilla. Soak ½ box of gelatine in 2 tablespoons of cold water. Dissolve in ½ cup of pineapple juice, heated. Carefully fold in 1 cup of pineapple tidbits, ¼ cup of cut up maraschino cherries, ½ cup of cocoanut and ½ cup of dates. Add 1 cup of walnut meats or almonds, chopped and 1 cup of boiled rice. Carefully fold in the whipped cream. Gently tear out the center of 1 large angel food cake or use a hollowed-out sponge cake. Use a few pieces to fill in the hole at the bottom of the cake. When rice mixture is cold and has begun to congeal in the refrigerator, pour in the cake shell. Place in a freezing unit for 12 hours or more. When ready to serve, frost all over with additional whipped cream or serve plain. Decorate with sprigs of mint. For Thanksgiving, tint cream frosting a delicate yellow, garnish with apricot pumpkins. For Christmas, tint green, garnish with rubiettes or mint; for Valentine Day, pink, with red hearts.

Sino-American Dish

Mrs. Barbara Lipscomb, 934 New York avenue northwest, has been awarded a $1 prize for her rice contribution to the contest which, incidentally, she suggested for this week. Although her recipe is called a chicken and rice chop suey, it turns out to be a thoroughly American formula, just as do many of the Oriental dishes believed to be Chinese, which in reality prove themselves to be transcriptions of varied foreign dishes. This rice dish was considered the most flavorful one of the even dozen which Mrs. Lipscomb submitted.

Chicken and Rice Chop Suey

Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a skillet. Put in 1 finely shredded green pepper and 1 cup of shredded onion. Cook for a few minutes. Do not brown. Add 2 cups of shredded chicken. Cook for 5 minutes. Add 2 cups of celery, 2 cups of bean sprouts and 1½ cups of chicken broth. Add 1 teaspoon of salt and ½ teaspoon of pepper. Thicken with a paste made of 1 tablespoon of corn starch and water. Simmer for 10 minutes, stirring well. Stir in 1 cup of toasted almonds and 4 tablespoons of soy sauce. Serve on top of 3 cups of boiled, fluffy rice which has had a dash of cinnamon or nutmeg added just before being puffed up in the oven.

From Latin-America

Mrs. Ralph C. Keefer, Route 1, Alexandria, has also won a $1 prize for her rice with chicken dish. One of the most thoroughly satisfying full-course meals known to man is this Arroz con Pollo, which Mrs. Keefer has cribbed from the Latin countries. Complete unto itself, seasoned hauntingly with capers, dry wine and saffron, this dish alone should bring the Americas closer together. Mrs. Keefer further enlightens us by revealing that the average family of three in Spanish countries consumes about 50 pounds of rice a month.

Rice With Chicken

Cut 1 pound of chicken as for a fricasse. Dust it with salt and pepper. Pour 1 cup of dry white wine over it and place in refrigerator for 1 or 2 hours. Chop 2 large onions and brown them in butter. Place these in a large pot and add 2 cups of tomatoes and the chicken. Cook until chicken is almost tender. Then add 1 pound of rice with enough boiling water to cover it well. Dissolve a pinch of saffron in a little of this hot broth and add it with a little more salt. Then add 2 well chopped green peppers, 12 capers and 1 small bottle of stuffed olives which have been cut in half. Boiling water may be added from time to time as the rice is cooking to prevent it from sticking or becoming too dry. Try the rice grains between the fingers and as soon as they are tender, remove from fire. Don't let rice cook too soggy. Serve on a large platter garnished with green peas and cut strips of pimientos cut into peppers to resemble a poinsettia.

New Cucumber Recipe Called 'Heavenly Relish' How to Can Berries

A CUCUMBER RECIPE called Heavenly Relish, and suggestions as to the canning and preparation of berries are featured in today's Consumers' Counsel.

Questions and answers concerning removal of disfiguring textile stains are also printed here, as well as hints offered by readers on the culinary values of rice. Anything puzzling you about the daily routine and kitchen problems of your household will be answered in this column. Mail all suggestions and home-making hints to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor, care of The Consumers' Counsel.

Executive Request

The vice-president of a large fruit association has requested information on the preparation of fall fruits. This west Virginia industrialist writes: "Our organization would be appreciative of any practical home-use recipes for gooseberries, currants and blueberries." Here are the ones which the Counsel believes would be of greatest interest to local homemakers, as well as to this executive.

Currant or Gooseberry Jelly

Select firm, ripe gooseberries and currants. Inspect them carefully; remove bits of leaves but not their stems. Wash, drain, put into a kettle, then mash. Extract juice by boiling in a shallow flat-bottomed vessel for 15 minutes for every cup of water and pound of fruit. After stirring occasionally, let fruit stand for 15 minutes and extract the maximum of coloring matter from fruit pulp. Clarify the juice by going through the usual cheese cloth straining process. Use ¾ or one cup of sugar to 1 cup of juice. Equal parts of raspberry and currant or gooseberry juice make an excellent jelly. If scales are not available the amount of water necessary for boiling can be approximated by counting 1½ pints of fruit as weighing 1 pound.

Currant Jelly Sauce

Stir ½ teaspoon of minced onion and ¼ cup of currant jelly into a basic brown sauce. Continue to stir until jelly has dissolved. Serve as garnish for roast.

Deep Dish Blueberry Pie

Mix two to 2½ cups of washed and inspected berries with ½ cup of sugar, two tablespoons of flour and ⅛ teaspoon of salt. Fill a medium-sized baking dish and cover with a plain pastry and bake according to the usual directions for a deep dish pie.

Heavenly Relish Recipe

A trained food expert, Belle Rounds Kunz, of Linden Lane, Md., has submitted this simple relish. She recommends her original formula as most effective when combined with slices of cold fowl or any hot meat.

"Slice, cube, strip or grate desired number of cucumbers which have been peeled and crisped. Sprinkle a dash of paprika on this and pile on relish dish. Squeeze the juice of a lemon lightly over this. Very simple but zestful! An alternate for this relish might be green pepper strips cut and arranged over the cucumbers on top of watercress, chicory or endive, served with Roquefort or Russian dressing."

Rice Rituals

For those who wish additional rice recipes, other than those printed under today's contest column, Mrs. Edith K. Levin, 1010 Twenty-fifth street northwest, has contributed a few appetizing hints. Her gay rice deceivers follow.

"Here's a little suggestion for those who have hard water to contend with. Use 1 teaspoon of lemon juice, ½ teaspoon of cream of tartar or 1 teaspoon of vinegar in the hard water in which rice is to be cooked. This will insure a snowy white cooked rice. To vary the taste of plain cooked rice one can sprinkle grated sweet chocolate over fluffy boiled rice and set it in an oven for a minute before serving."

Dissolving Cod Liver Oil Stains

Among the daily queries about dissolving and solving of stains and spots, one of the most frequent is the cod liver oil drip problem. To forever down the unctious persistency of the cod and his oily brethren, the query of Mrs. George Schwartz is being answered. She says she will be forced to discard several perfectly good suits unless cod liver oil stains on woolens and broadcloths can be removed. Here is a solution:

Organic Solvents Used

Common grease or cedar oils can be removed from suits by the application of the following organic solvents suggested. The best agents recommended for cod liver oil or other more virulent spots is carbon tetra chloride, chloroform, benzol, gasoline and ether. If the spot has grown old and dry, a bleaching agent may be used, in addition, to lessen the color of vegetable of oil stains. Javel water, hydrogen peroxide or clear chlorine waters are indorsed.

Currant Jelly Easy Blueberry Pie Dish Chocolate Helps Rice

Puddings Motif Of This Week's Recipe Contest

Thanksgiving puddings will be the theme of The Post's new recipe contest. With holiday celebrations already being scheduled several local housewives have been checking up on novel ways of making their turkey-day dinners this year into memorable affairs. Among others, Mrs. Rupert Kyle, 63 Bates street northwest, and Mrs. Louise Richards, 902 Quincy Street northwest, have requested that the Thanksgiving pudding be made the subject of the new recipe contest.

Have you any original and appetizing pudding recipes, especially adapted for holiday deserts? Are you one of those fortunate persons who has had fine old steamed pudding formulas handed down from generation to generation? Do you own a secret recipe for the real old English plum pudding, borne blazing to the table? If so, or if you know of festive ways of preparing puddings made of nuts, dates, Indian meal, apricots or Tipsy sherry, then mail your recipe at once to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor. All kitchen-tested formulas must be received not later than November 19. Cash awards include: First prize, $3.00, second, $2.00, and three additional prizes of $1.00 each.

Meat Saver.

Here's a suggestion for leftover cooked meat: Chop it and season it with leftover seasoned, mashed potatoes. Then roll each ball in crumbs. Spread with melted fat and brown ten minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with a savory sauce or any creamed vegetable to which a little catsup or chili sauce has been added.

Return of Spices Enlivens Holiday Foods

Spartan Cuisine Fading Health Cult Overdone Palate Guide Now

By Clementine Paddleford.

SPICE is the heady subject in every good cook's mind this fall. Spice is enjoying a renaissance, a return to high favor after 20 years ill use at the hands of the food faddists.

Since the war it has been made a virtue to eat dull food. To enjoy a lusty, tasty dish was considered a little indelicate, as if denying ourselves the pleasures of the table would win some spiritual goal—a throwback to the worship of plainness that feared beauty as the devil's handmaiden. We ate to build muscle, to keep the blood red; we ate for everything but pleasure. We neglected the sense of taste. Our cooking lacked joy.

They Return to Flavor

Now spice returns to the kitchen shelf to impart to food its nose-tickling vapors. Lazy Susan, holding shaker jars of spices, is coming down from the high pantry shelf to turn again in leisurely fashion on smart dinner tables.

From lack of practice, the spicing subject is pretty confusing until you get used to it. Which spices, which herbs to try first? How to know quality? How often must spices be replaced? Just a few of the questions that bother home cooks. In search of the answers, we visited one of the oldest spice houses in the city—where thousands of pounds of spices, herbs and seeds are ground and packaged daily.

There is no special trick to handling spices in cookery. Spices are simply a flavoring, one of the few ingredients that can be varied to suit personal taste. However, experts advise beginners to spice moderately. With most herbs and seeds a pinch is enough for a dish of four. When you want a strong flavor of a particular herb double the quanity. The longer the cooking the more intense the spice flavor. The covered dish tends to hold flavors in.

Twenty seasoners on the shelf and you have made a good spice beginning. Spices to consider first are black pepper, white pepper, red pepper, paprika, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, mace, allspice and cloves. Among the herbs choose sage, savory, marjoram, basil and thyme, and for your spice seed assortment choose caraway, poppy, celery, coriander, cardamon, dill and fennel.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Humiliated by Middle-Aged Wife's Gaudy Striving After Youthful Chic, Husband Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife is making herself (and, incidentally, myself) ridiculous by the way she dresses and uses make-up. She is middle aged, rather stout and a really charming woman when dressed to suit her type and age. But recently she made a visit to New York and came back with her once gray hair transformed to a golden color and piled on top of her head in ringlets, under an absurd little misplaced pancake of a hat which suggests nothing so much as a freak headdress for a costume party.

Strangers giggle when they pass her on the street and I don't blame them. Even our young children look at her with amazement. When she first came back I said nothing, as I thought she would soon realize how silly she looked and go back to a rational dress. But instead, she takes the position that every woman who doesn't scramble her hair on top of her head is old fashioned. Her mother has told her she is a fool, but this has only made her more obstinate, as they never agree on anything.

I have kept absolutely quiet, but I feel as if I wanted to shriek every time I see her step out, coiffed, tinted and hatted like a 16-year-old milliner's model. The situation is wearing on my nerves. Can you suggest any method of bringing my wife to her senses, please? Yours truly,
BAFFLED HUSBAND.

Remedial Measures

DEAR CORRESPONDENT: The choice of language and general tempo of this letter distinctly lacks the masculine flavor. It is far more the kind of letter that one woman might write about another woman, or about a classification of womankind, than it is the sort of letter a husband would compose in stating a dissatisfaction of this sort. However, that doesn't alter the essential nature of the dilemma.

Obviously, the happy solution of this problem, from the husband's point of view, is not to be achieved by his suffering in silence. What he should have done, of course, the first moment he caught sight of his wife's tragi-comic, psuede-chorine transformation was to have emitted loud bellows of heartbroken protest at what she had done to herself. It seems to me (although, as someone has said, hindsight is the most elementary form of wisdom) that he would have won the battle on the first skirmish by saying spontaneously just what has already been said in the foregoing letter, namely: That she is a really charming looking woman when dressed to suit her age and type.

He could have embellished the point by saying that the essence of her appeal for him, of even date, had to do with her erstwhile easy and graceful acceptance of maturity in all its aspects; that since his marriage to her, at least, he had had no particular interest in dizzy blondes of doubtful vintage and uncertain age, and that he certainly didn't want any such for wife today. He would have told her, more in sorrow than in anger, that in her present get-up she looked like nothing on earth but an aging burlesque queen of the cheapest variety, and wouldn't she for heaven's sake burn that hat, wash her face and do something human with her hair? He could have pledged himself—and meant and firmly kept that pledge—not to be seen with her in public until she had done so.

For a husband so meekly to hold his tongue when confronted by such a spectacle, naturally would lead his wife to suppose she had him bowled over in speechless admiration of her glittering surface rejuvenation. As the situation has been permitted to run on, it has become progressively more difficult to correct. However, it is never too late to attempt the thing that should be done; and in this instance, the lady sorely needs to have her perspective restored.

I suggest, as a first remedial effort, that the husband make some such speech as has been outlined above, giving voice to his attitude with passionate sincerity. If that fails of effect, then I suggest that he invest in an outfit that matches her own, for exaggerated and tasteless inappropriateness. Let him go to a men's wear shop that specializes in the gaudiest and jauntiest of college-age, campus sartorial fads. Shirt, tie, coat, trousers, socks and shoes of the most extravagantly sophomoric variety should be pieced together into one knockout, eyesore costume. To this he might add a blond wig or toupee, and dawn on his wife's vision clad in the tout ensemble. If that fails to drive home the lesson he has in mind, her case is hopeless, for it will mean that she lacks that sense of humor which is synonymous with a sense of proportion.

Gold Trimmed China Needs Mild Water

Gold-trimmed china needs special care if the beauty of the gold is to be preserved. Wash the plates in water less hot than for ordinary dishes and always use a mild soap. Strong soap powders harm gold trim. Wash only a few dishes at a time, using a soft cloth or mop. Do not rub at gold trim more than is absolutely necessary. Rinse well and drain on rubber-covered rack or on towels. This will prevent chipping of gold-trimmed edges.

To store away between uses, place between each dish a circle of paper toweling or paper parchment to prevent scratching or abrasion of the design. Or store, without stacking, on special racks in china cabinet.

Your Figure

Buxom Figures Can Look Slim With Care

Tight Clothes Banned
Stick to Vertical Lines
Skirts Must Be Long

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE USED to look on "Designing Women" with some misgivings, but the new book by that title goes a long way toward convincing us that we should all be a bit more designing. For the first time someone has come out and told us exactly what to wear to make the buxom figure look slimmer and the short figure taller, and the tricks that cut the too tall girl down to size.

Margaretta Byers and Consuelo Kamholz are the authors of this fascinating but thoroughly practical handbook. They have taken all the guesswork out of shopping for the clothes designed to bring out your best lines and to minimize your bad points . . . And that, incidentally, seems to be the secret of having your ready-made clothes look as if they had been made to your order.

Flattering the Figure

Since Ma Nature prefers her children stocky—there are so many of them—we'll take this type first in relaying the rules for buying to flatter the figure. Here are the tips which make you look taller, and, at the same time, thinner:

Never wear anything that is tight or clinging. You should stick to unbroken, vertical lines. No skirts or jackets for you—particularly if they are of a different color. Skirts should be on the longish order, to give you a longer line. Indicate the waist by nipping it in. If your belt contrasts, it should be darker than the dress, and you should never wear a complete belt, a wide belt or a colored belt. And, no matter what your husband says about the new high hats, you should never wear one with a turned-down brim.

There are plenty of ways in which the tall, angular girl can make herself seem the right size. If you are in this class, you can take inches off your height with lines and colors. You look best with wide, colored belts, a blouse of one color and a skirt of another. Your waistline should be as low as possible and the skirt quite short. If you are extremely tall you should avoid vertical lines, tuxedo effects, V-necklines, the buttons and trimming that run from neck to hem, and up-swept hair and hats!

Hide Your Hips

These designers even tell you how to hide your hips. To do this, raise the waistline, flare the skirt straight from the hips, and have the skirt about one inch longer than the prevailing fashions.

Hair to Go Forward and Out Is Prediction of Guillaume

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

BEING practical, as well as creative, about up-hair is an extraordinary combination in these days of coiffure eccentricity. One hair modiste, however, seems to have mastered both these attributes, which is one reason for the cordial reception accorded Guillaume here yesterday upon his arrival from Paris. Like the venerated Napoleon, whom he passionately admires, Guillaume springs from Corsican soil but swings his campaigns in sophisticated Parisian salons rather than the battlefield.

Napoleonic scope of vision has been bestowed on the diminutive Guillaume who has created prophetic hair styles with a little corporal influence. A student of Napoleon's life, Guillaume has evolved an up-and on-swept coiffure in memoriam of the Corsican general's son, L'Aiglon. This forward and outward swoop of hair will replace the extreme silhouette still being experimented with today. He has named versions of this exquisite casual style Roi de Rome; also Schoenbrun, after L'Aiglon's Austrian palace, and Austerlitz to recall Napoleon's celebrated battles there. This mode features shorter, more boyish curls, a backward and sideward swirl and more flattery for those who still cling to random felts and tweeds.

When asked how the Parisians are taking to up-hair these days, Guillaume showed pardonable pride. "More than half of the chic Parisians are piling the hair high," he said. "From now on Americans may also take a bit more kindly to this mode for I have brought over a little invention that may make the high-hair doubters think twice. I have designed a snood of crocheted webbing which is placed over unruly back hair and tied over front curls by a coy ribbon bow. This beguin, or notion as you would call it here, makes the training of stubborn tendrils a pleasure." It is practical for use of busy women here because it trains hair roots to grow upward. Chic Parisians wear a beguin for an hour or so in the morning before dressing. I am told that they look charming over their coffee cups, somewhat in the boudoir tradition of the French court on a holiday at Versailles.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 10.

SINCE THIS is Armistice Day, I have asked that obscure old soldier, Leonard Hall, my ten-year spouse and sparring partner, to take over the journalistic arm chair for the morning. He settles himself and pecks away.

ALICE HUGHES.

Twenty years ago the guns stopped banging—for a few minutes. At 11 on that memorable morning we stopped thinking of imminent mutilation and dared resume thoughts of the girls we had left behind us. And now, with a deep sigh and a shudder of horror, we realize that it is all to do again.

For the peace was no peace, and for ten years we have watched the world marching and drifting into fresh agonies. It is a heart-breaking thought, but there is no mite of use blinking it—especially by women, for you are the supreme realists. Strange but heartening things have happened in our beloved country in the past year or two. The heartfelt but superficial sentimentalities of the '20s have been replaced by the clear-thinking realities of the '30s. I remember thinking, as a troop train carried my regiment to its port of embarkation in the lovely spring of 1918, "This is a country worth fighting for." And I believe it today, and so do all the men and women who truly love their country. It is even more worth defending without using the arms in our hands.

It is for us to prove that "liberty" and "freedom" are not the dead words many would have us believe. And since women have never failed our country in its times of stress, they will not fail it in the days to come, realizing that the blessings of peace are not preserved by the feeble, but by the strong and worthily proud. In a world where seeming madmen have their way, there is no other course before us.

MAIN STREET JOTTINGS—So much has been written here this fall about Brenda D. D. (Ducky darling) Frazier and the rest of the glam crop, it might be masculine to point out that a small handful of young lads about town seem to get the stares and sighs from your sex, too. Scanning the field, the leader at the moment here is young John Wanamaker, great-grandson of the Philly merchant prince, who has been spending considerable time in New York this fall. Johnny has youth, good looks, pots of dough and social position—and many a local lass is stalking him. So far—no hits . . . Forty-eight hours before Orson Welles, the 23-year-old theatrical genius, scared the curl out of the Nation's hair with his imaginary Martian invasion on the radio, Alice and I saw him dining alone at the snooty restaurant, The Elbow Room.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Housewife's Travelogue

Manhattan

Whenever life seems to be pretty much the same old sixes and sevens, and when the green brocaded living room suite will drive her mad if she looks at it another minute, she runs up to New York for a gay week-end. She walks along Fifth Avenue, her heart surging to the challenge of autumn's bustle and rush, or she rides up Riverside Drive and sees the shafts of silver sunlight on the Hudson, or she drops in on some of the new shows, her spirit reveling in the tinsel and excitement of Broadway, or she goes down to the harbor and finds life diminishing to a speck behind her and reaching out mysteriously and infinitely before her.

Motor Tour

After a crowded week of committee meetings and cocktail parties, of neighbors who "run in," of telephone calls, of guests and relatives and in-laws, of people and more people, she steps into a motor car and rides away toward the Blue Ridge Mountains, climbing higher and higher into the healing quiet of the November forests. She rides along the crest of a mountain, clouds floating like a lake of vapor below her, the sun a flaming ball above. And then perhaps she wends leisurely down into the Carolinas and partakes of the peace of Charleston and recaptures the leisurely tempo of a century that has passed.

Southern Cruise

When she is very, very tired, when someone seems always calling and wanting things done, when she has just gone through the siege of getting the house ready for winter and has gotten slightly jittery at the thought of planning the Thanksgiving dinner, and after that of going through the Christmas rush, she goes sailing. She gets on a lazily moving steamer and takes a deck chair and sits and sits and doesn't read or think, or plan ahead—even for ten minutes—but just gazes at the illimitable sheets of water. And then eventually she sees strange, lush countries rising out of the sea and feels seeping through her soul the comforting sedative philosophy of the tropics, "What will it all matter 100 years from now?"

World Tour

When she comes again to the conclusion that he doesn't appreciate all she does for him, that he is a big brat, a boor, an egotist and entirely out for himself, that he doesn't understand her, that he doesn't love her, and that he'd probably like to marry some high stepper who would lead him a merry chase, well then she just packs up and takes a world tour. She sees London Bridge, the green hills of Ireland, the boulevards of Paris the Riviera, Cairo, Constantinople, Bombay, Rio, Cape Town, all the familiar places in the geography and the encyclopedia, everything she had ever dreamed of seeing, and she sails on and on, all of her drab yesterdays far behind, every tomorrow one of excitement and adventure.

Return Journey

It always comes very unexpectedly, and instantaneously—at the end of the first act of a Broadway play, on the crest of a mountain just as the vista is stretching out ahead, on the deck of a ship just as it sails into a balmy harbor, at a great moment when she is getting her first view of the Midnight Sun or the blue stretches of the Mediterranean. It comes—as globe, atlas or travel folder—that sudden, piercing, reminder that she is seeing all these beautiful things—alone.

Corned Beef Hint For Busy Cooks

Here's a first cousin to the familiar corned beef and cabbage. You can use canned beef and this meal is easier to prepare: Make a savory cream sauce and add cooked chopped cabbage. Mix in a little catsup or chili sauce and pour over sliced or cubed corned beef placed in buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Tip: when using canned corned beef: Chill the can, and when opened you can easily loosen it with a spatula. It can then be cut into even slices, diced or chopped.

Gilding the Souffle

Did you ever add a few chopped ripe olives to cheese souffle? Try it. The flavors combine perfectly and it gives something to "bite on" in the souffle. Tomato sauce, too, is delicious when poured over a souffle.

Cuba's 'Strong Man' Greeted Like Royalty

Dr. Fraga Holds Supper for Batista
White House to Receive Suite at Tea
Sir Percy Bates Quietly Slips Out of Town

By Hope Ridings Miller
The Post Society Editor.

CUBA'S "STRONG MAN," Col. Fulgéncio Batista, is wielding a strong influence on the Capital's partying calendar. Arriving yesterday, he and his suite already have been launched into a whirl of festivities that would do honor to royalty, and they will continue at high speed right up until time for his departure on Sunday.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Last evening the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, feted Col. Batista at a buffet supper, the guest list being limited for the most part to members of the visiting party and the Embassy staff. Tonight, Col. Bastita will be guest of honor at a dinner at the Embassy.

Four social events arranged for him will enliven tomorrow's schedule. At noon, he will be honored at a luncheon given by Majj. Felipe Munilla, military attache of the Cuban Embassy, and Senora de Munilla. The party will take place at Hotel Twenty-Four Hundred.

President Roosevelt will receive Col. Batista and members of his staff at tea time. As a prelude to the swanky reception to be given at the Cuban Embassy tomorrow night, the Under Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, will give a dinner for the distinguished visitor at the Sulgrave Club. The 30 notables attending that event will go on later to the Cuban Embassy for the party that is expected to be one of the highlights of the season.

YESTERDAY WHILE Colonel Batista was rolling into town with a maximum of fanfare, another distinguished visitor quietly slipped away. He is Sir Percy Bates, Baronet of Bellefield, who has been a guest at the British Embassy. He attended Winchester College with the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and has visited him several times.

Arriving late Wednesday, he went directly to the Embassy where he spent the night. Yesterday morning he drove down to Annapolis to have lunch with Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, and went on from there to New York.

SIR PERCY is widely known in this country. Three decades ago he was operating a fleet of freighters out of Galveston, Texas, and he has visited here frequently in recent years. He was in Washington for a brief stay immediately following the maiden trip of the Queen Mary and at that time was received by President Roosevelt at the White House.

Formerly a newspaper man, Sir Percy still is part owner of the London Daily Telegraph and the London Morning Post. Descended from a distinguished line, long been identified with shipping, he also has devoted much attention to that field; and in 1934, he was elected chairman of the board of directors of the Cunard White Star Steamship Lines. During his stay in Washington this time he visited local offices of his company, and George N. Mathews, local manager of the Cunard office, accompanied him to Annapolis.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON'S forthcoming book, which will appear serially in the Saturday Evening Post, is said to include some enlightening material on the Peace Conference in which the late President Wilson played such an important part.

Rumors are going the rounds, also, that it deals with the famous courtship, as well as events that transpired during President Wilson's last days, and that Mrs. Wilson decided to write it to correct the mass of misconceptions widely circulated about her husband.

Latest reports have it that while Mrs. Wilson wrote every word of her book—and, incidentally, the original draft was done entirely in long-hand—she called in an expert, Pulitzer prize-winning Marquis James, author of "Sam Houston" and "Andrew Jackson," to edit her material.

Anyway, it is scheduled to be published in the spring, and will begin appearing in the magazine early in December.

Wed at St. Alban's
Rev. Warner Officiates
Bride Wore Cream Satin

St. Alban's Episcopal Church was the scene of the weding yesterday of Miss Ruth Kreiter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. P. Kreiter, of Washington, and Charles Hollyday Berry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meigs Berry, of Graden, Landover, Md.. The Rev. Charles T. Warner officiated at the evening ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of cream satin fashioned on princess lines with a long train. Her veil fell from a tricorner headpiece and she carried a prayer book topped with white orchids. A gold cross, which was a gift from her father, was her only ornament.

Four Bridesmaids In Wedding Party

Miss Mildred L. Berry was maid of honor, and wore a gown of chartreuse green slipper satin with a large hat of matching velvet. She carried Queen Anne and token roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Janet Weidemann, Miss Ethel Litz, Miss Jean Dulin and June Barnsley. Miss Weidemann and Miss Litz wore gowns of gold slipper satin and carried arm bouquets of Queen Anne roses, and the latter two wore rose satin and carried token roses. All wore large velvet hats to match their frocks.

John Bourke, of New York City, was best man and the ushers were Emory Kreiter, John Fisher, Fred Cutting, Don Hammerbend, William Bowie and A. J. Benjamin.

There was a reception following the ceremony at the home of the bride. The bride's mother was gowned in royal blue velvet with matching accessories, and Mrs. Berry wore plum-colored crepe with a matching hat.

To Live in North Carolina

When the couple left on their wedding cruise to Bermuda, the bride was wearing a black velveteen gown with matching hat and accessories and a leopard swagger coat. On their return they will make their home in Charlotte, N. C.

The bride is a graduate of Maryland University and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and the Mortar Board, honorary society. Mr. Berry graduated from the University of Maryland in 1934, is a member of Delta Sigma Phi and of Omicron Delta Kappa honorary fraternity.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sartell Prentice, of Greenwich, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roberts, Staten Island, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Murray, Harrisburg, Pa.; Mrs. Sam Schellinger, Cape May, N. J.; Mrs. Norman Hill and Mrs. Tilden Brice, of Baltimore, and A. J. Benjamin, of Parlin, N. J.

Plans Trip to Army-Navy Game

Harris & Ewing.

Miss Elizabeth McGill Ralston, daughter of Mrs. Robert R. Ralston, popular member of the young Army set, will leave the latter part of next week for Philadelphia to attend the No. 1 football classic of the season, the Army-Navy game. Pictured with her above is her Irish terrier, McGinty

Huneeuses Fete Rebeca Trucco

Half a hundred friends of Miss Rebeca Trucco and her fiance, Robert Knowlton, gathered yesterday at the home of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus to fete them at a cocktail party. Miss Trucco, who is the daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, will be married November 26 at the Embassy.

The party was held in the amusing bar of the Huneeus residence, which is on Waterside drive. The bar itself is painted black and gray, and the comfortable chairs placed around it are black.

Among those present were the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Zuberbuhler; Miss Caroline Cecil and Thomas Adams, whose names have been romantically linked in recent months; Miss Eleanor Meem, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Dolly Corbin, Prince del Drago and the Marquis Benedetto Capomazza of the Italian Embassy; debutante Peggy Townsend and Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy.

Others present were Jacques de Thiers, Secretary of the Belgian Embassy; Joao de Deus Ramos, of the Portuguese Legation; Henry Beall Gwynn and the Misses Anne Kiess and Jane Culbertson.

Mrs. Tyner to Visit N. Y.

Mrs. Elonzo Tyner will leave tomorrow for New York to join her daughter, Mrs. Tyner Dugdale, who went there several days ago. Mrs. Tyner and Mrs. Dugdale will remain there for about a week before returning to Washington. Mrs. Dugdale moved recently to an apartment at 2116 Kalorama road.

Give Tea for Cousin

Benjamin D. Hill, jr., and his sister, Miss Cynthia Hill, entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon for their cousin, Miss Winona Hill Eubank, of Hendersonville, N. C.

Miss Humphrey Becomes Bride Of Kenneth Newton Hays

Ceremony at St. Paul's in Afternoon
Gloria Grosvenor Is Maid of Honor
Reception Follows at Parents' Home

The marriage of Miss Frances Humphrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Caskin Humphrey, of Washington, to Kenneth Newton Hays, of Washington and Wichita, Kans., son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Clifford Hays, took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. D. Butler Pratt officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin with a sweetheart neck, bouffant sleeves, and a long train. Her headdress was fashioned with orange blossoms which matched the two large clips at the neckline. Her veil was very long. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, orchids and lilies of the valley.

Gloria Grosvenor Is Maid of Honor

Miss Gloria Grosvenor was the maid of honor and wore a gown of emerald green satin, with long white gloves and a velvet and ostrich plumed doll hat in gold and green. She carried gold chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids were Miss Betty Mattingly, Miss Suzane Barrett and Miss Mariana Grogan. They wore gowns of wine, gold and rust slipper satin, respectively, with hats of feathers to match the dresses and green ribbon to match the dress of the maid of honor.

The flower girl, little Miss Sara Lee Douglass, wore a gown of ice green satin. All bridgesmaids carried arm bouquets of chrysanthemums, and their gowns were of the wide hoop-skirt style. Arlington Davis, jr., was the best man, and the ushers were James Wimsatt, jr., Jack Willis, John Taggert, Thomas Razor and William C. Humphrey, jr.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Crittenden street. The bride's mother wore a gown of sapphire blue cut velvet on chiffon and a matching hat and accessories. Mrs. William R. Garrett, who assisted at the reception, wore a gown of fuchsia and lavender. The bridegroom's mother was unable to attend because of illness.

To Make Home In Washington

After an extended trip south to Florida and Mexico, the couple will make their home at the Luzon apartments, Sixteenth and Somerset streets. When the couple left for their wedding journey the bride was wearing a tailored dress in dubonnet, with brown accessories, and a brown tailored coat trimmed in kolinsky.

Mrs. Hays is a graduate of Immaculata Seminary. Her husband is a graduate of the University of Wichita and George Washington University. He is a member of the Phi Epsilon Sigma and Delta Phi Epsilon fraternities and also Gamma Chi Fraternity.

The bride is a descendant of Jefferson Davis. Both of Mr. Hays' grandfathers, Isaac Newton Hays and Charles B. Hardy, were political leaders of Kansas and District attorneys in that State.

Author to Be Honored

Mrs. Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, has issued cards for an "at home" on Sunday, November 20, to celebrate the recent publication of Pendleton Hogan's new novel, "Mortal, Be Proud." The book is dedicated to Mrs. Vandenberg.

Nancy Wilson's Troth Announced

Dr. and Mrs. James Southall Wilson, of the University of Virginia, announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Tucker Wilson, to John Metcalf Drewry, of New York, son of Representative Patrick H. Drewry and Mrs. Drewry, of Petersburg and Washington.

Miss Wilson is a great-granddaughter of former President Tyler whose Virginia home was Sherwood Forest in Charles City County. Mr. Drewry is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College and of the University of Virginia Law School.

The date for the wedding has not been announced.

Debut Planned For Miss Proctor At Tea on Dec. 11

Miss Ashby Proctor, daughter of Mrs. William H. Goodacre, will be presented to society at a tea December 11. The event will take place at Salubria, the Oxon Hill, Md., estate of the debutante's mother.

Another party being planned for Miss Proctor will be given by her aunt, Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, of Washington, but the date has not yet been announced.

Miss Proctor, who was graduated last spring from Holton Arms School, spent part of the past summer on a cruise with Dr. and Mrs. Bayne on their yacht, which stopped for some time at Newport, R. I.

Tim B. Cantrell Fetes Sen. Guffey

Senator Joseph F. Guffey was among the guests of Tim B. Cantrell at dinner in the blue room at the Shoreham last evening.

Other guests included Judge and Mrs. William E. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Royal L. McKenna, Mrs. Newton Brewer, Miss Lela Stiles, Miss Elizabeth Trumbo and Thurlow G. Lewis.

English Speaking Union To Honor Maj. Barnes

Maj. James Strachey Barnes, writer and authority on international problems, will be guest of honor at a tea to be given by the English Speaking Union on Tuesday, November 15.

Visit Van Zandts

Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker Van Zandt, who live at the Wardman Park Hotel, have as their guests Mr. Van Zandt's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Van Zandt, of River Forest, Ill., and their son, Rollin. They will be here over the week-end.

Miss Youngkin Becomes Bride Of Mr. Smith

Sister Is Bridesmaid
Couple to Live Here

At a quiet ceremony in the rectory of the Church of the Nativity at 7 last evening, Miss Catherine Gertrude Youngkin, daughter of Lieut. Rodney J. Youngkin, U. S. N, retired, and Mrs. Youngkin, became the bride of Darrell Hevenor Smith, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell H. Smith. The Rev. Austin L. Healy officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin, fashioned on princess lines with a sweetheart neckline and a short train. Her fingertip veil was held to her head with a coronet of pearls and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Sister Serves As Bridesmaid

Miss Helen L. Youngkin, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a blue taffeta gown made on princess lines with a sweetheart neckline and a hat and sash of American Beauty velvet. She carried a bouquet of Topsy carnations and Joanna Hill roses.

Moorhead S. Smith, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Benjamin M. Chiswell, jr., of Washington, and Frederick L. Downs, of Worcester, Mass.

Reception Follows Wedding Ceremony

Immediately after the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother wore a gown of royal blue velvet with a hat to match, and Mrs. Smith was gowned in burgundy with silver lame, silver sequin jacket and hat.

When the couple left for their wedding trip the bride was wearing a green suit, a silver fox cape and black accessories. Following a Florida cruise they will be at home after January 1 at Blair Park Gardens, 805 Juniper street northwest.

The bride attended Lake Forest College and Mary Washington College, and Mr. Smith attended the University of Pennsylvania and the Graduate School of Yale University.

Mrs. Hull Hostess To Envoys From China, Colombia

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, will receive the new Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, and the new Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Lopez, at tea this afternoon.

Yesterday Mrs. Hull had as her guests at the tea hour the other cabinet hostesses. This annual get-together generally comes later in the season, but since Mrs. Hull will leave November 25 to accompany her husband to a conference at Lima, she arranged the gathering early.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Hull received the retiring Italian Ambassador, Signor Fulvio Suvich, who left Washington yesterday and will sail tomorrow on the Conte di Savoia for his homeland.

Warrens Slate Fete for Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren have issued invitations for a cocktail party on Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Warren's daughter, Mrs. Floyd Blair, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, who will arrive shortly to visit them.

Another cocktail party scheduled is that at which Miss Kitty DuBoise will entertain November 21 for Miss Rebeca Trucco and her fiance, Robert Knowlton.

Mrs. Torrey Griffith has cards out for a tea December 4 at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Prof. J. H. Rosen Artist, Honored

Prof. Jan Henry Rosen, who is staying with the Polish Ambassador Count Jerzy Potocki, has just been awarded by the Polish Minister of Education the decoration of golden laurel leaves of the Polish Academy of Literature.

Prof. Rosen is now painting murals at the Polish Embassy. Other work of his includes murals for the Castel Gondolfo, the Pope's residence, near Rome.

About The Town

With Dudley Harman

COUNTESS GUY DE BAILLET LATOUR, who disappointed many friends here by not coming to this country in the autumn, as she had planned, will arrive for Christmas instead. The former Marianna Dunn will spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, who will give a dinner for her. Since her marriage she has been living in Brussels, where her husband is in business.

DUDLEY HARMON.

COLOSSAL will be the word for the reception at the Cuban Embassy tomorrow evening in honor of Col. Batista and his wife. Hundreds are expected to attend what will probably be one of the largest and most lavish parties of the year. Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse are members of society who will entertain at dinners beforehand, besides those already announced.

The Caswells also have a party scheduled for Sunday afternoon, when they will fete Joao de Sousa Leao, the retiring Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy. Senhor de Leao will sail a week from tomorrow on the Ile de France for his new post in London, where he has been named Counselor.

The diplomat has been here a comparatively short time, having arrived last April with the Ambassador.

PARTIES continue to pile up. The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, will be honored at a dinner to be given on Thursday evening by the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor. Invitations have been issued for the tea dance which Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr., will give the day after Thanksgiving for their debutante daughter, Miss Nancy Jane Rust. The place is the 1925 F Street Club. That evening, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker will entertain at a dance in her honor at their home on Foxhall road . . . Mrs. Scudder Deeg has asked friends to dinner at he rhouse before the next meeting of the Friday Evening Supper Club a week from tonight.

MAXINE DAVIS, the writer, will sail tomorrow on the Normandie for a quick trip through Europe. She will spend several days in Paris, where one of her sisters is studying music, and will then fly to Oslo to visit our Minister, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman. After a trip to Oxford to learn what the English undergraduate is thinking about things in general, Miss Davis will sail for home December 3.

Mrs. Donald Richberg and Mrs. Raymond Clapper have thought up something original in the way of bon voyage presents for Miss Davis. They have ordered a bottle of champagne to be presented to her by the steward the third night out, figuring that by that time she will have eaten all the candy and fruit and read all the magazines her other friends have sent to the boat.

MRS. HARRY WOODRING, who has for several years been known as a painter, is now going to do some writing. She is one of several prominent Washington women who have been asked to contribute one piece to the woman's page of a New York daily whose woman's editor is ill at the moment. Mrs. Woodring's article will be about 500 words long and will appear shortly.

POST CARDS from the James Robbs say they are enjoying the life simple in Arizona. They have taken over an enormous house near Phoenix and have turned it into a dude ranch where their friends from Washington can stay. Mr. Robb has a position with a well-known aviation company in Arizona.

Ball for Grace Episcopal Guild Attracts Many Southern Notables

Society From Various States Attends
Charles Mason Remey Leads Cotillion
Pastor and Niece Receive Guests

Society from Washington, Virginia, Maryland, South Carolina and New Orleans was represented last evening at the ball given at the Sulgrave Club for the benefit of the Guild of Grace Episcopal Church. The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, pastor of the church, greated the guests. He was assisted in receiving by his niece, Miss Folra Webster MacBryde, of New Orleans, daughter of John A. MacBryde, dean emeritus of Tulane University.

At midnight a floor show was presented by the Marian Chase Dancers. The cotillion figure which followed, led by Charles Mason Remey, added a bright and colorful note to the evening. Gay Oriental parasols were given to the ladies as favors, and these they carried over their shoulders during the figure. After refreshments were served in the dining room, dancing continued until a late hour.

Miss MacBryde was gowned in a hoopskirt, with her hair piled high Her gown was of black velvet, bordered at the neck with aquamarine flowers, and she carried yellow roses.

Messersmiths Hosts to Countess

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith have as their guest Countess Furstenberg, who will be with them at their home in Georgetown for two days. The countess is an American who married a German. Mr. Messersmith was stationed in Berlin at one time and was later Minister to Austria.

Mrs. Messersmith will give a luncheon today in honor of her guest and for Mrs. Ralph Pocock, who has come from her home in Massillon Ohio, to visit Mrs. Alexander V. Dye.

Yesterday Mrs. Dye entertained at a luncheon for Mrs. Pocock. Her guests were Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Messersmith, Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mrs. Wilson Compton and her houseguest, Miss Esther Boyer; Mrs. Forrest Rutherford, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. D. B. Birnie, Mrs. Harry McBride and Mrs. Abra Warren.

Mr. and Mrs. McConihe Parents of Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Wednesday evening at Garfield Hospital.

Mrs. McConihe is the former Miss Marguerite Hagner, daughter of Mrs. Randall Hagner and the late Mr. Hagner.

Celebrate Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Harding celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last evening at their home in Burnt Mills Hills, Md. More than 100 guests were present, many of them coming from Plainfield, N. J., where both the host and hostess were reared, and where they were married.

Chevy Chase Women Honor Mrs. H. C. Bryant

Former Chairman to Move West Shortly
Members Present Her With Gift of Silver
Business Meeting Precedes Afternoon Tea

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The nature section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase honored its former chairman, Mrs. Harold C. Bryant, at a tea given yesterday afternoon in the clubhouse, Connecticut avenue and Dunlop street. She was presented with a gift of silver as as expression of appreciation for her work with the section ast season.

Mrs. Bryant, who was re-elected to serve again this year, resigned the chairmanship when her husband, who is with the National Park Service, was appointed superintendent of the Grand Canyon, necessitating their leaving for the West the first of the year. She has been succeeded by Mrs. F. P. Wilcox.

One of the projects undertaken by the section under Mrs. Bryant's leadership was the series of District hiking trips, started last season. They are being resumed next Thursday. This group includes but 8 of the 50 members of the section, the strenuous character of the walks appealing only to the sturdiest of the members.

Starting from Chevy Chase Circle, their trips last year followed the old mile posts along the District line to the northeast, covering all but three-quarters of a mile toward the river. This will be included on one of the trips this year, but can be covered only in good weather, as the land is marshy. The trail took them over fences, across streams, and through woods and underbrush.

Next week, starting again from the circle, the group will follow the line to the west going along Western avenue, into the Delacarlis Reservoir section. Mrs. Bryant and another member make a path-finding tour of the territory to be covered a few days before the girdlers' trip. In the group, beside Mrs. Bryant, are Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, Mrs. Liefur Magnusson, Mrs. H. W. Barre, Mrs. Dudley Holtman, Mrs. Fred Sager, Mrs. Horace Troth, jr., and Mrs. George B. Fraser.

The tea yesterday was preceded by a short business meeting at which the section discussed plans for an outdoor fireplace that it expects to present to the club. It will be placed at the rear of the grounds south of the new clubhouse and will provide a place for picnics.

There also was a program, devoted to accounts of summer vacations. Mrs. Sutton described a train trip she and Mr. Sutton and their daughters took through the national parks. Mrs. H. W. Barre told of a motor tour to the Pacific Coast, also including the parks. Mrs. Magnusson and Mrs. L. R. Voorhees also recounted motor trips as far West as Yellowstone. Mrs. Voorhees' talk was chiefly on the wild flowers she studied on her journey.

P.-T.A. to Open Md. Congress

The Maryland State Congress of Parents and Teachers will open its annual three-day convention Tuesday at the Hotel Alexander in Hagerstown. Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the national congress, is scheduled to address the banquet on the opening night and lead panel discussions both Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

Mrs. G. R. Clements is State president and will preside at the business sessions. A presidents' luncheon is planned Tuesday noon, with the first panel discussion on "Good Citizenship" following. On the panel will be Dr. Henry I. Stahr, of Hood College; Miss Stella E. Brown, Towson State Teachers College; Dr. Henry Brechbill, University of Maryland; Dr. F. C. Livingood, Washington College; Dr. J. D. Blackwell, Salisbury State Teachers ollege; ean K. Forrest Free, Western Maryland College; Dr. John Dunkle, Frostburg State Teachers College.

Participants in a second Tuesday panel will be Miss Catherine L. Healy, Miss Elizabeth Amery, Miss Lillian C. Compton, Miss Helen Woodley, Wloyd R. Cromwell, Mrs. F. Conrad Stoll, Mrs. H. P. Bevely, Wilson P. Sperow, Mrs. Ida Belle Thomas.

Those who will participate in the Wednesday afternoon panel on "How High School P.-T. A's may contribute to good citizenship" are: George Fox, Walter H. Davis, E. Clarke Fontaine, James Spitznas, Richard T. Rizer, S. Denmead Kolb, Mrs. Thomas W. Pyle, Mrs. Alfred C. Levis and Mrs. Louis B. Weller.

Thursday morning there will be conferences under state committee chairmen: Mrs. L. Warrington Carr, publicity; Mrs. Fred H. Cook, summer round-up; Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, membership; art, Mrs. Burroughs Price; safety, John C. Krusen,; magazine, Mrs. Earl P. Jordan; publications, Mrs. Robert G. Doty, and parent education, Miss Edna B. McNaughton. Mrs. Milton D. Moore is general chairman of the convention.

MOTION PICTURES based on history should stick closer to it, in the opinion of members of the District of Columbia Branch of the League of American Pen Women. The book review luncheon group yesterday voted to present the matter to the national league for action.

The Pen Women decided to do something about it after Mrs. Bertha Shanks Chaney had reviewed the history of Marie Antoniette and compared it to the picture. Mrs. Theodore Tiller, chairman of the luncheons, pointed out that the events in the lives of such characters were sufficiently dramatic to need no "dressing up" in fiction.

Mrs. Tiller reviewed Rachel Field's latest book, "All of This and Heaven Too," and told of having seen the original manuscript at the Macmillan Publishing Co. in New York. It was written on different kinds of paper, rewritten and pencil-marked, she said, "just like yours and mine."

Blanche Abee, author of the recent history, "Colonists of Carolina," was a guest of honor and described her new book.

MORE ABOUT BOOKS—Floyd Dell, noted author and critic, will talk on the poetry of Edwin Arlington Robinson Sunday night at one of the series of gatherings at the Readers' Bookshop, 1711 H street. Anyone interested may attend by calling Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB of Riverdale is sponsoring a dance next Friday night to raise money for two philanthropic projects it has undertaken this season—a scholarship fund to aid a local girl and a fund to provide cod liver oil for needy crippled children in nearby sections of Prince Georges County. The dance will be in the auditorium of Riverdale School, with Mrs. Brice Bowie in charge of arrangements.

A PALM GROVE setting and night club atmosphere have been planned for the first formal dance of the season to be given by the Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Juniors next Saturday night in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. Jean Karp is chairman, with Lois Berman as cochairman, assisted by Hilda Kirstein, Mildred Lustrick, Kay Arloff, Gertrude Wayne, Bernice Mendelsohn, Rose Kravitz, Tee Blum, Eva Handin and Luna Breza.

THE WOMEN'S GUILD of the Central Union Mission held a regular testimonial meeting yesterday as members told of their experiences in the recent John S. Bennett Memorial campaign. The guild will have no more business meetings this year—spending its time from now until Christmas making gift bags and sewing for the mission.

Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the mission, reported $2,000 received since the close of the memorial campaign Monday.

A TOUR of Leland Junior High School is planned for parents of the students Tuesday night by Mrs. William C. O'Brien, program chairman. Mother and father will follow the routine of classes sister and brother attend by day and hear the teachers explain the A B C's of it.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

By Mutual Agreement

To no more than its folks agree
A neighborhood at peace will be.
—Aunt Sally.

Aunt Sally knows. She knows from long experience. She has entertained neighbors who are not naturally friendly and had them peacefully eat side by side. It was because each party recognized that the other party had equal rights there. And she has had her Woodhouse Night Club completely upset because just one of the patrons forgot himself or where he was and lost his temper. Nothing is more "catching" than loss of temper.

Bobby Coon, Mrs. Bobby and their five well grown children had moved in under the floors of Aunt Sally's house. Under only a part of the house was there a cellar. They had been under there before but only for short stays when visiting the woodhouse for the hospitality Aunt Sally always provided. Now they had moved in to live. Anyway they would live there for the time being, perhaps for all winter. You see the hurricane had destroyed their home in a hollow tree and it had blown down or split open all the other hollow trees of which they knew.

Now to get under the house they had used a hole that some one else had dug. That some one else was Jimmy Skunk. Jimmy had dug it long ago. Both he and members of his family used it from time to time. When after eating they felt sleepy or too lazy to go home they went in there, under the house, for a nap. It was dry and warm and comfortable there. They liked it. They felt that in a way by right of having dug that entrance and of having been the original discoverers of this splendid place it belonged to them.

Now, if Bobby Coon and Mrs. Bobby didn't know this they could easily have guessed it. It was just they way that they would have felt had they been the ones who discovered the place and dug the way in. But if they did guess it this made no difference. They were there and there they proposed to stay. So when later in the evening, after eating all he could hold of Aunt Sally's bounty, Jimmy Skunk came in for a nap in his favorite corner and found it occupied there were immedite aigns of trouble ahead. Jimmy stamped his feet. It is a way he has when he is upset or when he thinks some one needs a warning. He stamped his front feet and did it in a way that any one who heard it could not mistake for anything but a threat. The reply was a growl. It was a determined growl, a peevish growl, a threatening growl. As a matter of fact it was a double growl. It was two growls in one. That corner was occupied by two young coons, young but not small.

Now there is always an advantage in being in the right and a disadvantage in being in the wrong. The advantage was with Jimmy and he knew it. Not only had he the advantage of being in the right but also he had very much the advantage if it came to a showdown and a fight. He knew that, also. So, as the growls of the young Coons became deeper and angrier, Jimmy's stamping became more threatening.

This didn't mean anything to the young Coons. In their ignorance they were rather scornful of this fellow who stamped the ground in such a silly manner. But it meant something to their mother and to Bobby Coon. It meant a great deal. It meant great unpleasantness. It meant the beginning of the breaking up of their happy family, for if Jimmy Skunk used his famous scent-gun on those two youngsters they would and could no longer be admitted to the family. It meant also, and this was most important, that all the family would once more be homeless.

So Mother went over and pushed the young Coons out of that corner. She growled at Jimmy. Jimmy merely raised that big broad tail of his a little higher and stamped his feet a little harder and advanced a step or two.

The two youngsters now being safely out of that corner, Mrs. Coon began a retreat with such dignity as she could command. She didn't hurry and she did do a lot of growling. Those growls were threats, but they didn't really mean anything. They were merely to save her self-respect. Jimmy knew that. As she backed away he moved forward and presently he was in his favorite corner while Bobby Coon and his family were in the opposite corner. So for the time being there was peace under the floor of Aunt Sally's old house, mutual agreement that there was room for all. Aunt Sally, who had listened and understood perfectly what was going on under her floor, smiled. "I hope they won't agree to disagree," said she.

Sodality Union Plans Bazaar

The Sodality Union of Washington will hold its annual bazarr and turkey supper in St. Aloysius Boys Recreation Hall, on North Capitol street Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The various activities of the union held during the year are to commemorate the founding of the society 20 years ago. Supper will be served from 5 to 7:30 p. m. and the bazaar will continue until 10 p. m.

As rural education is the main objective of the Sodality Union, many residents of the country are donating turkeys for the anniversary supper. Mrs. Louise Nock is in charge of the supper, with Mrs. Augusta Neuland, vice chairman. Others assisting are Mrs. Elizabeth Haley, Mrs. Esther Hauber, Mrs. Arthur F. Isaacs, Mrs. Jennie Keeley, Mrs. Mary Horen, Mrs. Julia Griffin, Mrs. Elizabeth McQueeney, Mrs. Ralph Raynes, Miss Mary Schneider, Miss Esther Swayn, Miss Daisy Herbert and Miss Catherine Sweeney.

Other tables will be in charge of the following: Bingo, Miss Nellie Becker; refreshments, Mrs. John E. Stanton; dolls, Miss Christine Hilbrandt; novelty, Miss Elizabeth Milovich; skill games, Miss Mary Keefe, and candy, Miss Beatrice Deeds.

The hostesses for the affair include Mrs. Clarence E. Casey, Miss Katherine Burke, Mrs. Josephine Calvagna, Mrs. Ellen Dawson, Mrs. Raymond E. Dillon, Miss Reginas Dillon, Mrs. Irma M. Joers, Mrs. George Klinker, Mrs. J. C. Kraft, Mrs. George Lavin and Mrs. J. Floyd Maley.

In charge of tickets will be Mrs. R. H. Scroggins and Miss Mary A. McMahon. Miss Mary Walsh will supervise the prize books, and Mrs. Lucy Goldsborough the decorations. The Rev. J. J. Clark, spiritual director of the union and honorary chairman of the benefit, will be present each evening. Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the union, is general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Anna C. Donnelly, vice president.

To Give Play

"The Delta Gamma Ship," a skit presented at a recent rush party of the sorority, will be given for the Delta Gamma alumnae Tuesday night at their meeting at the American War Mothers Club, 1527 New Hampshire avenue. Mrs. Oscar Sells is in charge of arrangements.

P.E.O. Auction Adds $75 to School Fund

Variety Spices Sales
Mrs. Stevenson Seller
To Aid Scholarships

Articles from teapots to tea towels and mince pies "without anything in them" to cakes flavored with rum, were up for sale yesterday at the annual auction held by Chapter G of the P. E. O. Sisterhood for the benefit of its educational fund.

Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson cried the wares at yesterday's auction. The event has been held each fall for nearly ten years and provides one of the most entertaining as well as profitable programs of the season for the chapter. Mrs. Henry Knipe was hostess at her apartment, 2400 Sixteenth street.

"Here's a handsome flowered scarf, satin on one side, silk on the other; what am I bid for it?" "Two embroidered guest towels; what bid do I hear for these?" Mrs. Stevenson, assisted by Mrs. George Middleton, chairman of the educational committee for the chapter, held up one article after another calling for bids and receiving lively response from the members and guests. There was friendly rivalry as bids rose a few cents at a time and by the end of the afternoon the proceeds of the sale were approximately $75. It goes to the scholarships and Cottey College in Missouri which the National P. E. O. Sisterhood supports.

Tea was served after the auction, with the chapter president, Mrs. John A. Smith, and vice president, Mrs. John M. Beavers, pouring.

Among the guests were Mrs. W. W. Stockberger, State president of the society for the District, and members of other chapters, including Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, who is also a vice president general of the D.A.R.; Mrs. Ellis Logan, Mrs. Margaret Hull Jones, Mrs. E. H. Pitcher, Mrs. James Henry Harper, Mrs. Irving O. Ball, Mrs. Beth Moose Ferguson, Mrs. Ophelia M. Satterfield, Mrs. Claudia Hall Fleming, Mrs. Alice Y. MacGill, Mrs. Jeanette E. Coombs, Mrs. M. R. Greenleaf, Mrs. Ada B. Spaid, Mrs. Lucille King and Mrs. Louise K. Smith.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, who is a charter member of the chapter, was among those present.

Mrs. Biddle Aids In Seal Campaign

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, former president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday was named chairman of the organization committee of the Tuberculosis Association in its sale of Christmas seals.

Funds raised this year will be used to finance a hospital and nursing service, the summer camp for tuberculor children and for medical research.

Two Officials Invited

Attorney General Cummings and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be guests of honor at a dance to be given Saturday night at the Wardman Park, by the athletic association of the bureau. Arthur M. Crowl and John J. Ritz are in charge.

Street Will Speak

Elwood Street, director of the Department of Public Welfare, will address a meeting of St. Monica's League today at 11 a. m., in the library of the Washington Cathedral, on "The Economic Plight of the Washington Negro and the Way Out." Canon Stokes will preside.

P. S. C. Files Reply In Transit Dispute

Annapolis, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Public Service Commission today filed an answer in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court defending its right to forbid Jerome M. and Evelyn Lichtenberger and Vernon Snyder from transporting Baltimore WPA workers to a Naval Academy project in trucks.

The Lichtenbergers and Snyder previously petitioned for an injunction restraining the commission from interfering with their contract with the Navy Department.

The commission's answer, filed by J. Purdon Wright, counsel, argued that the trucks are fitted with 40 seats, that they operate on a fixed schedule and charge 30 cents per passenger, and hence are within the jurisdiction of the commission.

Central High Crushes Wilson Under 27-0 Score

Stop Baugh!

Chicago, Nov. 10.—A dangerous character named Slingin' Sammy Baugh and a group of other fellows stuffed into Redskin uniforms will attempt to beat the Bears on Sunday. That is the Chicago viewpoint, and with reason.

In Chicago, Baugh's name is magic. Mothers have not yet reached the point where they tell their obstreperous youngsters that "Slingin' Sammy'll get you if you don't watch out!" but it might not be a bad idea. Baugh commands much respect in Chicago. Anybody who has a habit of beating the big, bad Bears would.

POVICH.

A year ago, the Bears' strategists were busily constructing what they called their "B-B defense." The league championship game with the Redskins was coming up and a B-B defense meant breastworks that would repel the onslaughts of Baugh and Battles. If this pair could be stopped, the Bears could beat the Redskins.

Well, Baugh and Battles were not stopped. Battles' first contribution of the game was a 55-yard gallop with one of Baugh's passes, and a bit later he scrammed 9 yards through the line for a touchdown. The B-B defense was a washout and the Redskins scored four touchdowns to win the ball game, 28-21.

On Sunday, Battles won't be in the Redskins' backfield. He'll be in New York surveying the results of his backfield coaching at Columbia University. So the Bears' coaches are concerning themselves this week chiefly with Baugh. If they can stop Baugh, they can beat the Redskins, they feel.

Bears Confident

There is a great doubt, however, that the Bears' strategists are approaching the task of stopping Baugh with any overflow of confidence. It seems that he gave them something to remember him by last December. They saw him boldly pass from behind his own goal line in the first minute of play with the heave that sent Battles away on his 55-yard gallop, but that was not all they saw.

They saw him throw three touchdown passes later in the game—two to Wayne Millner and one to Ed Justice, beautifully accurate flips from off balance. Two of those passes he completed with big bad Bears hanging on to the scruff of his neck, with his throwing hand badly gashed, his left side numb from a gaping wound in his leg suffered when he was thrown heavily on the ice-crusted field.

Small wonder, then, that the other Redskins pale into comparative insignificance as far as the Bears are concerned when Baugh is back there poised for one of his passes. Or that the Bears will concentrate on rushing Baugh whenever he is in the tail-back position.

He Likes Bausch

It was the Bears' furious charges against Baugh while he was attempting to pass in the 1937 playoff that led to a new professional

Nagurski Wins Over Joe Savoldi

Golden Terror Wins Menacher Defeated Little Wolf Wins Tosses Freeman

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Coming events did a little shadow-casting-before, perhaps, last night in the brightly lighted battle-pit at Turner's Arena where Minnesota tossed Notre Dame for a goal in the feature wrestling bout. What with the Gophers and Irish meeting on the gridiron tomorrow, last night's finish may have been an omen.

Bronko Nagurski, of the Minnesota eleven of a decade ago, was the victor last night, and his victim was a large portion of the 1930 Notre Dame championship, Joe Savoldi. Nagurski used 33 of the 90 minutes alloted him in pinning the Italian with a flying tackle and body press.

Their match culminated an evening of wild excitement, most of it supplied by the Golden Terror, he of the orange-tinted long drawers and violent temper. Mr. Terror reversed the usual proceedings by inciting the fans to riot before rather than after the match, giving rise to a rumor that he had to catch an early train.

Needs Police Escort

The Terror disposed of Walter Gray, an unidentified, bespectacled gentleman, and Frank Brown, the lats named being his official opponent. He polished off Gray with a wild right to the shoulder, chased the bespectacled gentleman from the hall in a fast sprint and finished Brown in 26 minutes with a body press, after throwing him from the ring three times. A police escort was needed to get the Terror into and out of the ring.

But the enraged fans had their ruffled feelings smoothed somewhat by Referee Jules Strongbow, a wrestler himself, who objected to the Terror's actions at the end of the bout, and promptly felled him twice with right elbows to the jaw. This gave rise to another rumor that Strongbow would be imported at an early date to unmask the Terror.

In the preliminaries, lest they be overlooked, Chief Chewaki, threw Sammy Menacher in 19½ minutes with a body press; Chief Little Wolfe pinned Herbie Freeman with his famed "deathlock" in 21½ minutes; and the Cariff Giant fell on Tom Mahoney for an 8½ minute triumph.

They Get Rougher

Working before a distinguished audience, generously sprinkled with Minnesota and Notre Dame alumni, Nagurski and Savoldi wrestled cleanly and scientifically for 10 minutes before breaking out with the routine stuff. But a while it appeared the Joe might forget his lines again, as he did in a match with Jim Londos several years ago, and accidentally win, but Nagurski was in rare form and not to be whipped.

The burly Gopher was guilty of a little horse-play at times, jamming his feet up against the ropes, twisting Savoldi's fingers, and gently strangling him, but Joe survived all the rough work only to lose by an ordinary flying tackle and body press.

They were getting increasingly rougher when Nagurski first served notice of his intentions by backing Savoldi into the ropes and butting him in the mid-riff and out of the ring. He repeated the maneuver, and the second time Savoldi climbed back into the inclosure with fire in his eyes and a litter of peanut shells on his back. He caught

Catholic U., Miami Clash This Afternoon at Stadium

By Jack Munhall.

Upwards of 12,000 fans are expected to pour into Papa Griffith's ball yard this afternoon to watch Catholic University pit its football forces against Miami University's Hurricanes in an intersectional clash, sponsored by the District American Legion as a feature of Armistice Day celebration. Game time is 2:30 o'clock.

Before a distinguished gathering of high church and State officials, including the Apostolic Delegate, the Most Rev. Archbishop Amleto Cicognani and Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, the Cardinals will seek to break precedent and gain their third victory of the season.

Although prospects were for one of the most successful campaigns in the Brookland School's history, the Cards have not yet been able to record two straight victories. But following last week's comeback triumph over DePaul, they have another chance.

But Miami, on the upgrade in the football realm, stacks up as truly formidable opposition. Led by Eddie Dunn, their quarterback candidate for All-America recognition, the Hurricanes have been blowing at a pretty good clip. In fact they have sent five of six opponents to

Mexican Army Horse Wins in Big Show

Azteca, Bay Gelding, Wins Jumping Trophy Crowd of 15,000 Cheers Great Performance

By Hotspur.

A Staff Correspondent.

Madison Square Garden, New York, Nov. 10.—A frenzied crowd of 15,000 crowding Madison Square Garden tonight stood and cheered again and again the gallant Azteca of the Mexican army team, ridden by Lieut. Ramiro Palafox, when, in a spectacular win, the aged bay gelding took the International Military Special Challenge Trophy from a field of the best horses of the army teams of six nations.

What particularly aroused the enthusiasm of the great audience was Azteca's rounding the course with a clean performance when only one other horse got beyond the sixth jump. Next to some of the courses at the Inter-American Horse Show, this was the hardest we have ever seen. The particular stumbling block to most horses was a brutal in-and-out with but a 24-foot spread between jumps which were 4 feet 6 and 5 feet high. But four horses besides the winner negotiated this difficult obstacle.

Gringo, of the Chilean army team ridden by Capt. Pelayo Izurieta, took second place, and three horses were tied for third and fourth. In the jump-off, Santiago, of the Chilean Carabinero team ridden by Lieut. Armando Salas, outjumped his compatriot, Capt. Eduardo Lima, on Caupolican, the former taking the third place, the latter fourth.

The Mexican army team has not been very fortunate in this show, but the winning of this important trophy, donated by Whitney Stone, Esq., made up for all the bad luck they have encountered in previous events. This class was open to all branches of the military service of all nations, and besides the army mounts, there were privately owned horses of army officers entered and a team of the Sixty-first Cavalry Division reserve officers, also a team of the Cuban Carabineros.

Randle Entry Wins

Dipsey Doodle, U. S. Randle's brilliant broad-jumping chestnut gelding, won the award in the feature event of the afternoon's program, the triple bar, from a collection of 18 superior timber-toppers of the noted stables of half a dozen States. The others were not even close to the Virginia sportsman's great jumper in the class that always brings the spectators to the edge of their seats. In the jump-off Dip-

Hoyas Leave For W. Va.

Play Tomorrow Drill at School Given Sendoff

With the cheers of several hundred students ringing in their ears, Georgetown's undefeated Hoyas entrained for Morgantown, W. Va., where they will meet the Mountaineers in a homecoming game on Saturday afternoon. Riding high on a six-game winning wave, the Hoyas figure West Virginia the only obstacle remaining to an undefeated season. They meet Maryland's weakened team the following week.

The team was given a rousing send-off in a rally last night. In the afternoon, the Georgetowners went through their final signal drill at the intramural field. The first team lined up with Joe Daniels and Bob Kercher, ends; Joe Frank and Earl Fullilove, tackles; Bill Burke and Jim Hill, guards; Al Matuza, center; Joe McFadden, quarterback; Joe Mellendeck and Jules Koshlap, halfbacks, and Jim Castiglia, fullback.

The following players wil make the trip: Ends—Daly, Daniels, Kercher, Lascari, Wixted and Harris. Tackles—Frank, Fullilove, Nealon, Robertson and Kowalski. Centers—Matuza, Riofski and Reichey. Backs—Mellendeck, Koshlap, Moulin, Castiglia, Meglen, Darmohray, Spencer, McFadden and Ghecos. Guards—Hill, Burke, Ostinato, Lio and Mickey.

Sam Snead Wins Meet With a 273

Two-Stroke Margin Ky Laffoon Second Posts 275 Card Prize Is $700

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 10.—Firing a spectacular 32 on the final nine holes, Sam Snead came through late today with a seven-under-par 273 for the 72-hole White Sulphur Open Golf Tournament to win the first prize in the $3,000 event by two strokes over Ky Laffoon, of Chicago.

It was a courageous, heartwarming comeback that added $700 to Snead's tournament earnings for a $18,272 total this year, after he had slipped two over par on the first nine of the final round. He wound up with a 68, two under par and one lower than his morning round.

Laffoon, with steady, errorless golf that kept him under par on every round, led Snead by a stroke as the final nine began. But the hard-working Westerner couldn't match the slamming home pro's pace thereafter.

Byrd in Money

Tied for third were Johnny Bulla, chunky young Chicagoan; Billy Burke, of Belleair, Fla., and Sammy Byrd, the former New York Yankee outfielder, of Philadelphia, with 277s.

Snead came up to the eighteenth hole this morning with the situation well in hand and shooting for a 66 that would have put him four strokes ahead of Laffoon and Bulla, who shot sensational golf during the morning round to come within striking distance.

Snead's tee shot on he 140-yard hole was about 25 feet from the pin and his first putt was 2 feet off, but his putt rimmed the cup and rolled off 2 inches to one side. Snead pecked at the ball one-handed as he walked by and it clicked twice

Central Defeats Wilson, 27 to 0

Two Scores Made on First Two Plays Jimmy Clark Paces Winners' Attack Tallies Twice; 1,500 See Game

Woodrow Wilson's hope of upsetting the unbeaten football machine of Central was throttled in less than two minutes yesterday at Central Stadium, as the series leaders ran up a 13-0 advantage on their first two running plays of the game, eventually coming away with a 27-0 victory. About 1,500 witnessed the game.

Wilson took the kickoff and after three tries at the line which netted 7 yards returned the kick to midfield, where the ball bounced crazily and was finally downed by a Wilson linesman. Tony Di Blasi, of Central, took the ball on Central's first crack at the line and went the 50 yards to the goal. It was a beautiful dash straight throught the line. Benny Steiner's placement was short due to a Central penalty for offside.

Again Buck Schlegel of Central, booted to the boys in green, this time to Bob Miller on the 20. The latter sifted to his 35 before being stopped, but on the first play from scrimmage, Halfback Banello fumbled and Central's Goodrick recovered on Wilson's 30. Steiner called for an end-around, the most profitable for the Mt. Pleasanters so far, and Jimmy Clark lugged the ball over for another touchdown. Steiner's placement was good.

The fight seemed gone from the Presidents throughout the quarter. Central's second team went in for the second period. Given a chance to play in their own class, Wilson players gradually came back, picked up the initial first down of the period, but lost the ball when Cokinos fumbled on his own 44.

One of the six intercepted passes of the game accounted for Central's second period score. Gus Plakas, substitute back, snared Banello's aerial at midfield and evaded practically every Wilson player to score standing up. Again Steiner's placement was good.

Its first string again in the game after halftime, Central found itself facing a desperate and hard-tackling club. Three first downs went to the credit of the Mount Pleasanters, but Wilson countered with two to effectively stop further scoring. Most of the period, however, was spent in Wilson trritory, Central at one time advancing to the 14-yard-line. Another intercepted pass at that point ruined the score.

The fourth period was marked by ragged playing on the part of both squads. Central's break came as Bond attempted to hurl to Miller, and Steiner rushed in to intercept. On the next play Steiner threw another pass from the Wilson 35 to Jim Clark and the latter tumbled over with Wilson's Leaphart at his heels.

Despite the loss suffered by his team, Wilson's quarterback, Frank Bond, deserves commendation for a fine game. His passing was accurate, his kicks sufficiently long and his line plunges fairly profitable.

G. W. Preps For Kansas

Drills on Defense To Arrive Today Bring 100-Piece Band

After subjecting his George Washington University squad to three days of the hardest kind of work, Coach Bill Reinhart loosened the rein a bit yesterday and excused the Colonials from scrimmage. Instead, Reinhart charted the plays he expects Kansas to use against G. W. tomorrow and drilled his squad extensively on defensive maneuvers, particularly pass defense.

Reinhart took some time to point out that Kansas' record is not impressive, from a standpoint of victories, but that the Jayhawkers have played improved ball in their last two games.

Two weeks ago, K. U. upset Kansas State, 27-7, in one of the Big Six surprises. Last week Nebraska beat Kansas, but Ad Lindsey's crew went into the last 3 minutes of play with a 1-point lead. Then Nebraska capitalized on three swift breaks and the game was lost—for Kansas.

Reinhart emphasized the passing of Ralph Miller, Kansas' crack left halfback, and Dick Amerine, shifty right halfback, both of whom throw effectively from the Jayhawkers' deep spread formation. The Kansas spread is somewhat similar to that formerly used by George Washington and currently employed by Georgetown.

The Kansas line spreads out far across the field, with Miller and Amerine both in a position to pass to backs or ends. The Colonial reserves ran this spread to the best of their ability yesterday, and Reinhart and Botchey Koch, line coach, believe they can halt this wide-open offensive.

The George Washington starting backfield still is uncertain, with Murphy Booth, crack blocker, and Bob Nowaskey, back at fullback, the only sure starters. The remaining players will be picked from a group including Billy Richardson, Ken Batson, Tom Grady, Frank Merka and Ralph Zelaska.

The Kansas squad arrives today and will be quartered at the Willard Hotel. The 100-piece K. U. band also is making the trip.

Don Budge Turns Pro; Pockets $75,000; Tour Starts January 3

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—To the utter astonishment of nobody, Donald Budge turned tennis professional today for a tidy $75,000, and will open a long series of one-night stands against Ellsworth Vines January 3, at Madison Square Garden.

BUDGE

Walter Pate, captain of the American Davis Cup team, announced Budge already had $25,000 in his pants' pockets, representing the initial payment. Promoter Jack Harris agreed to pay the 23-year-old redhead $25,000 additional March 1, and the final $25,000 at the close of the tour.

There was a touching scene as the United States Lawn Tennis Association kissed Budge and the Davis Cup good-bye. President Holcombe Ward joined Pate in wishing Budge every happiness.

Budge might have chocked up completely if he hadn't had one hand on the $25,000 check. He said he hated to turn professional, that he would have liked to play amateur tennis the rest of his life, but that parental obligations forced his decision. His father has been seriously ill in Oakland, Calif., and Budge will return there within a few days.

Budge and Vines will play approximately 50 matches this winter, Harris said, touching most important cities. If the proceeds are great enough, Budge might make more than the $75,000. He has a percentage privilege. Later, the defaulting world amateur king will make a similar tour against Fred Perry.

Ward and Pate said the move would not affect Budge's ranking as the national No. 1 amateur for 1938. He is similarly ranked in Australia and France, and in the unofficial "World First Ten" prepared by Wallis Myers, of England.

"I feel honored that Mr. Ward has come to hear my announcement," Budge said. "I'm glad the U. S. L. T. A. feels I've lived up to the amateur code, and that they don't feel I'm turning against them now. I wish I could have remained an amateur, but it's impossible. I intend to play professionally for not more than three years and then go into business."

He was asked how he thought he would make out against Vines, who has been slamming the ball around professionally for five years and is fixed for life financially.

"I guess it will be close," he mused. "We went at it outdoors a couple of years ago. He won two sets and I won two and then we stopped when we were two-all in the fifth set. However, I expect he'll knock a lot of them right by me when we first start playing indoors."

Those who watched Don wade through the world's other top amateurs with almost laughable ease last season doubt that Vines will be able to hold him once Budge gets the hang of the indoor game. Vines and Perry, incidentally, made only about $17,000 apiece last season, Harris revealed, which indicates that the pro game was badly in need of the new blood Budge will supply.

Budge and Harris have been scrapping over the financial arrangements for some months, with Budge holding out for a flat $100,000. Pate, who has taken an almost fatherly interest in Don for several years, advised him yesterday to take the lesser figure.

"Don't be too sure that this means we will lose the Davis Cup to Australia next year," Pate warned, but without much conviction. We still have Gene Mako and Bobby Riggs."

It was admitted without further argument that Uncle Sam still had Gene Mako and Bobby Riggs.

Bruce Barnes and Dick Skeen will accompany Budge and Vines on the tour, pairing with them in the nightly doubles match.

'Dazzy' Vance Ill With Pneumonia

Clearwater, Fla., Nov. 10 (AP).—Arthur "Dazzy" Vance, whose fast ball made him a strikeout king in National League baseball a dozen years ago, is ill with pneumonia in a hospital here.

Hospital attaches disclosed today that Vance, who made Clearwater his winter home when he was with the Brooklyn Dodgers, was admitted to the hospital Sunday. His personal physician said today his condition is "favorable."

Vance now owns and operates a fishing lodge on the gulf coast north of here.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al.

Members of the hunt clubs from Maine to the Middle West will report today to witness the Master of Foxhounds Steeplechase, which will be run over the three-mile route. This race is for hunters holding certificates from the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association or those eligible for same to be ridden by amateur riders. Edward J. Brennan, who arranges the steeplechase events for the Maryland Jockey Club, has attracted a smart field. The race was first run in 1928. The card is featured by the second renewal of the $5,000 Ritchie Handicap, a three-quarter-mile sprint for 3-year-olds and upward. J. M. Milburn, who trains the Starmount Stable's string, reported that Shambles, candidate for the $40,000 Pimlico Futurity on Saturday, bucked during the running of Wednesday's opener and won't start in the week-end feature. However, Milburn may start Predestined in the Futurity. The Maryland Jockey Club has made elaborate plans for its Armistice Day services today. Promptly at 11 a. m., officials of the club, owners, trainers, jockeys, stablehands, pari-mutual clerks, special police and any race fans who care to attend, will gather in front of the winner's circle. The track's ancient bell will be tolled while the crowd stands with bared heads. Trainer Tony Pelleteri has arranged to ship the Millsdale Stable's horses to Bowie for the 12-day meeting, beginning November 16. Jockey Charlie Stevenson will accompany the stable. D. B. Midkiff shipped six horses and the stallions Balko and By Pass II to Lexington, Ky. Trainer Frank Kearns shipped Bull Lea, winner of the Pimlico Handicap, and four other horses to the same point. Time Alone, winner of the Eastern Shore at Havre de Grace, was one of ten horses that Owner-Trainer F. A. Carreaud shipped from here to California. Thomas Hitchcock's Annibal, considered the best steeplechase horse in America, proved he was ready for his engagement in the $5,000 Manly Memorial on Monday by reeling off a mile in 1:44 on the flat.

First race—Balkan War turned in a good effort behind Challedon in the Maryland Futurity and meets claiming platers here. Best bet. Fictitious was a hot choice that failed to get close in fair company recently. Next best. Part One merits a money chance.

Second race—Orient Express raced well in New York, is dropping down for this and has the edge over the rest. Mintson was second to Sun Antioch, last out; moving up but in good form. Brannon is dangerous if he has early foot.

Third race—Homesteader finished close behind Good Chance in the Battleship Handicap opening day; meets a cheaper field today. Wild Son was a beaten favorite at United Hunts Tuesday, should improve. Telemark has been running in good company.

Fourth race—Knoxville indicated top form when he won over better grade platers in New York; moves up but has edge. Suntime raced well in better company and should be the one to beat here. Dip won his last and gets a good figure.

Fifth race—Journey On lost a close decision to Clingendaal when they met last but receives an eight pound weight shift in his favor which should reverse that decision today. Clingendaal is the best of the others. Honey Cloud for the show.

Sixth race—Sun Egret was an easy winner of the Baltimore Autumn Handicap indicating good form. Has the class to win this. The entry of The Fighter and Liberty Flight should be able to cinch second place as both have performed lately. Acctolade figures to be close.

Seventh race—Count Tetrarch falls in a soft spot here after failing to show anything in better company at Narragansett. Brown Light needed his last two races and is due for a good effort today. Waka has shown flashes of speed.

Eighth race—Vestale raced well with high-class platers his first start in some time at Laurel. In a good spot here. Bottle Cap ran very well in a handicap last out and runs for cheap claiming today. Probably something the matter with him. Gaurissankar for the show.

Best bet—Balkan War.

Victor Beats Mr. Canron, Pays $53.60

Mrs. Grayson Attends Presents Trophy 10,000 See Race Yarberry Is Winner

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Nov. 10.—In a rough-and-ready stretch battle which would have brought joy to Admiral Cary T. Grayson, in whose memory the race was named, H. P. Metcalf's High Velocity won by a neck from W. W. Vaughan's Mr. Canron. Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Arthur was third in the field of 11 going a mile and a half.

The outcome would have been all the more pleasing to the late "physician to Presidents," for the winner, High Velocity, was trained by Matt Smart, the colored horseman, who handled many horses for him. In fact, Smart lived up to his name because he sent High Velocity back after he had won at a mile and a sixteenth to go a longer distance, pick up 15 pounds and hang defeat on some of the best distance horses on the grounds.

The crowd of 10,000 was reluctant to back High Velocity, despite his easy victory of yesterday, with the result that a $53.60 mutuel was displayed. The winner was perfectly handled by Warren Yarberry, the apprentice sensation.

Mrs. Grayson Presents Trophy

Yarberry broke High Velocity on top, steadied him just off the pace battle, turned him loose to take a short lead and then forced him to hang on with rare courage to last ahead of the charging Mr. Canron.

Mrs. Grayson presented a trophy to H. P. Metcalfe after the race.

E. R. Bradley's Bing Bong surprised by defeating 11 juveniles in the first race to bring his scattered backers a $30.90 mutuel. The son of Flying Ebony was close up from the beginning and took command in midstretch to win while opening a gap. Chance Watch was second, and Stable third in the test of six furlongs.

Last Chase, owned by G. H. Bostwick and ridden by Warren Yarberry, took the second event by a length from Sea Gull. Westbrooke was third in this field of eight going a mile and a sixteenth. Yarberry rode an excellent race on the $8.40 shot and put him to decided pressure in the stretch run.

Wilfrid G. Pays $4.50

Favorite players were given some chills before Wilfred G. made good in the day's steeplechase. The veteran gelding was in trouble in the early running and after taking what appeared to be a comfortable lead, he was pressed to the finish line by Promoter. Court Time, despite some bad landings, was third. The winner paid $4.50.

Miss Brief, from the Joseph E. Widener string, proved the best in the fourth race, a sprint that drew mostly candidates for the Futurity. With an $8.50 price attached, the Sickle filly circled the leaders to win going away. Sun Girl came with a rush in the stretch to be second a neck ahead of Predestined.

Bar Fly, proved the second E. R. Bradley winner of the day in the My Own Purse, named for the star of the Grayson stable. The Black Toney colt drove to a neck victory in a blanket finish that found Transmitter nosing Cravat, the odds-on favorite, out of second money. F. A. Smith rode Bar Fly out in front all the way and his backers cashed an $11.80 mutuel.

against the club for two strokes and a two over par five for the hole.

On the 535-yard twelfth Sam's second shot hit the pole and dropped within inches of the cup, and Sam dropped it for an eagle three, then birdied the fourteenth and fifteenth.

Laffoon Under Par

Snead's rounds were 68, 68, 69, 66, and Ky Laffoon, who carded 69, 69, 68, 69—277 for $450 second money, was the only other player to crack par every trip. Burke, Byrd and Bulla took $283.33 each.

Jimmy Thomson's final day splurge of 65-70 rounds gave the Shawnee (Pa.) pro a two under par 278, good for $180, and Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, zipped a 69 over on his final round to tie Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., with $150 rewarding their 279s.

Harry Cooper, of Chicopee, Mass., with 281; Dutch Harrison, of Oak Park, Ill., 282, and Ed Oliver, Wilmington, Del., with 284, all shared in the purse.

Leads Amateurs

Bob Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., an amateur, shot a 284 for top Simon-pure honors.

Stanley Horne, of Ottawa, and Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., had 286 and 285, respectively.

Jules Huot, of Quebec, faded out of the money with a final 18-hole 75 that gave him a 287. His 66 was best the first day and Bob Hamilton, Evansville, Ind., pro, who had a 67 behind him that day also ended up with 287.

Long-Shot Players Heard Bing Bong Drop a $30.90 Price at Pimlico

their storm cellars. Last week Jack Harding's charges walloped Oglethorpe, 44-0, to clinch the S. I. A. A. Conference championship and a second straight victory over C. U. would assure them of a successful season.

It is on the capable shoulders of this fellow Dunn, who almost single-handed blasted the Cards into a 21-0 defeat last season, that the Hurricanes place their hopes. The former Port Jervis (N. Y.) High School star is one of the best athletes Miami has ever boasted.

For three years he has been the team's leading ground gainer and high scorer. Last fall, for instance, he accounted for 714 of the total of 1,839 yards Miami advanced the ball from scrimmage—and all of Miami's foes gained but 976 yards. Dunn alone outgained four of these foes, one of which was strong South Carolina.

This season Dunn has averaged 7½ yards per try from scrimmage and against Florida he returned a punt 90 yards for a touchdown. Incidentally, he also plays safety, calls signals, passes and is the team's best pass receiver and punter.

But the Cardinals, groomed all week in the most diversified attack they have tried all season, are confident they will be able to push over more scores than Dunn. With Henry Sant'Ambrogio and Henry Matukaitis plunging, Burke Vidnovic passing and Joe Guyon turning the ends, C. U. should flash a much improved offense over that which five times bogged down in scoring territory against St. Louis.

The gates at Griffith Stadium will be thrown open at 1 p. m. and the military ceremonies to precede the game will begin at 2. Early comers will be entertained by no less than five bands, including Miami's famed 75-piece collegiate unit.

A partial list of notables expected to attend the game includes: Stephen F. Chadwick, national American Legion commander; Cass Schroth, encumbent Grande Chef de Guerre of the "40-8;" Fred Fraser, former Grande Chef de Guerre of the "40-8;" Watson B. Miller, director of the Rehabilitation Service; Msgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, and all the commanders of the American Legion posts in the city.

Bears Rule 7-5 Favorites for Game Sunday With Redskins

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

1918-1938

Twenty years? Say, Bill, you're right. It has been 20 years at that. Sometimes it seems just yesterday, and sometimes it's more like a dream that happened centuries ago. You never know. You never know.

Twenty years ago today we did not think we'd be here now. Yet here we are, Bill, safe and sound. Well, anyway, we're safe enough. That's not so tough, Bill; not so tough.

VIDMER.

Remember, Bill, when morning came—and you reached out and touched my hand, and said: "O. K. Let's try it, Joe. We've got a chance. Come on. Let's go."

Remember, Bill? We hardly hoped to reach our lines again, but what was there for us to lose? We couldn't stay there in that hole all filled with mud . . . and blood . . . and men we almost envied, wishing we could lie there with them peacefully and never face the future's dread . . . for they were dead.

And so I hauled you on my back and you told me which way to go. That's how we started with the dawn. We had to take it mighty slow, and sometimes I just felt as though I couldn't move another foot, but you would say, "It's not far now." And then when you would weaken some, I'd say, "Hang on, Bill. Hang on tight." We must have been a funny sight.

And there was thunder in the sky and bullets whizzin' by our ears, and bombs explodin' all around . . . God, what a sound!

Then all at once, the firin' ceased. Just sudden like, and we could hear a bird sing on some distant hill . . . high and shrill. We didn't speak for quite some time but waited, wonderin' what had happened to the thunderin' we'd been hearing days and weeks. And silence, somehow, seemed to roar much louder than the noise before.

I guess we thought the end had come, but that was the beginning, Bill. They found us out there, side by side, and brought us back and patched us up. They all explained how someone said that all the firin' had to cease . . . and this was peace . . . we've been together ever since and everything has been all right . . . but you and I, Bill, realized that we had just begun to fight.

As I look back, across the years, we found the goin' kind of tough, especially right at the start. But that is all forgotten now. We stuck together, side by side, just like they found us, and somehow we did get back—not to our lines we started for, but all the way back . . . that's a fact.

Bill, life's been mighty kind to us. We've got no kick with what's our lot. It's pretty swell to be alive and hear birds sing and children play and feel a cheek against your cheek—that help a heap along the way . . . we've got our work each day to do. The business has been comin' in. Not that we're millionaires or such, but still we make enough to pay the butcher's bills and grocer's, too, and buy our clothes. Why should be crab? They may not be all tailor made, but neither are they olive drab . . .

And then when dusk comes after day, we have a home to call our own. And there's my Sarah and your May. What's better than two loving wives, more like sweethearts, you might say? They're always laughing, always gay, full of life and hope and cheer. What has anybody got, better than our lot?

Why, Bill, we've even got some kids. You have three and I have two. That's not bad for such as us. And they're as fine and strong and sound as anybody else's kids. But what I get the most kick from is hearin' yours go rompin' around and knowin' they've all got their legs. And when my Bob or Bessie cries, I thank the Lord they've got their eyes . . .

Yes, Bill, life's brought us everything we ever thought about out there when we were lyin' in the mud while over head the bullets whined. Twenty years ago today we didn't think we'd be here now. Yet here we are, Bill, safe and sound. Well, anyway we're safe enough.

That's not so tough, Bill, not so tough.

Washington Club Plans Aerial Raid

Faces a Tough Line
Chicagoans Are Heavy
Passes Are Stressed
Snow Due for Game

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Lo, the poor Redskins!

There is a strong temptation to haul out that backneyed line again after a glimpse of the Chicago Bears in a grim practice for Sunday's battle at Wrigley Field.

Anything the Redskins achieve in Sunday's game will not be at the expense of the Bears' line, it seems. From tackle to tackle the Bears are a sprightly beef trust, a group of giants whose presence on the field has impelled Chicago betting men to label the Bears as 7-to-5 favorites.

The Redskins' line, proud boast of the Eastern Division of the National Football League, appears in for a very strenuous afternoon. The Bears have gone in for beef in their first line of defense, but the names they present prove that it has not been at the expense of speed and skill.

At center for the Bears will be a tidy little 225-pound bundle named Pete Bausch, for years the best center in the league save for the Giants' Mel Hein. At the guards will be cute little George Musso, a mere 270-pound all-league honor man, and Danny Fortman, a 215-pound midget of three years' experience with the Bears.

Stydahar's Here

At one tackle will be Joe Stydahar, a 230-pound all-league choice last year. As his running mate he will have a newcomer to the league, Jack Thompson, late of Nebraska. Thompson is a mere six feet six inches with no spare flesh on his frame when he tips the scales at 250.

It is behind this line that the Bears operate their famed power attack, and their backfield's lightest man is Quarterback Bernie Masterson. As running mates in the starting backfield, Masterson will have 210-pound Jack Manders at right half, 215-pound Bart Johnson at left half, and 215-pound Sam Francis at fullback.

So it was small wonder today that Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, devoted the bulk of this squad's workout to forward passing. Unless the Bears' line suddenly melts in the heat (and the weather forecast is for snow), the Redskins will not trifle with line plays on Sunday.

The Redskins' line is not exactly a passel of pygmies, not with 255-pound Turk Edwards, 225-pound Jim Barber and 240-pound Lee Olsson available, but Flaherty anticipates a free-scoring game and is expected to lose little time in unfurling the Redskins' passing attack.

Look to Baugh

That means, of course, that Sammy Baugh will see a great deal of action, barring further injury, but today Bill Hartman was back at his old position in the starting line-up and throwing the ball with dazzling accuracy.

Flaherty does not know yet, however, to what extent he can rely on Andy Farkas, who is still being annoyed by his bruised foot. Farkas has been excused from practice in the hope that rest will hasten his cure. He is the power boy of the Redskins' running game and, sans Farkas, heavier duties will devolve on the passers.

Big Jim Barber, cut about the head and left ear by Don Irwin's spikes while performing a stunt for the photographers, is expected to be in the starting line-up on Sunday. A special pad for Barber's ear has been ordered from the manufacturer.

Flaherty indicated his willingness to accept any kind of a score in favor of the Redskins when he ordered Tillie Manton and Riley Smith in front of the posts for a prolonged field-goal practice. To the oh's and ah's of the Loyola student body, who poured out of school buildings onto the practice field when word of the Redskins' presence spread, Manton put on a show. From the 30-yard line he kicked nine consecutive field goals and from the 40 he booted six in a row.

'Gansett Granted Six Extra Days

Providence, R. I., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Narragansett Racing Association today was granted a license to run its fall meeting six extra days, at a meeting of the Rhode Island Division of Racing. The meet was originally scheduled to close after Saturday's program, but will now run through November 19. This makes a total of 35 racing days this fall and 69 for the Rhode Island season.

Cal's Courtmen Are Booking Games

Cal's Valet Five, boasting a line-up of former schoolboy and sandlot stars, is booking games. The team's line-up includes Gene Swift, Rex Smith, Jesse Black, Carroll Genovese, Keye Mulvihill and Joe Much.

Manager Cal Calvaqua is challenging Company F, Fort Myer. Call Potomac 0880.

Kann's Bowlers Boost Lead

Kann's bowling team, apparently headed for the Department Store championship, boosted its lead on first place to five games by taking a 2-to-1 decision from the second place Hecht Co. last night at Recreation Alleys. Irwin Simon, with 354, was high for the Avenue boys.

Stanley Beall, shooting top set of the night with 375, was the star in Guy-Curran's 2-to-1 win over the Credit Bureau.

In other matches, Garfinckel's took a 2-to-1 decision from Hahn Shoes, while Jelleff's swept their set from Woodward & Lothrop, defending champions.

Eastern Football Briefs

WORCESTER, MASS., Nov. 10.—Coach Eddie Anderson has changed his mind about starting Holy Cross' second string against Brown in tomorrow's Armistice Day gridiron battle. Although fearful of a letdown after victories over Georgia, Colgate and Temple, he said at practice today he would start the Crusaders' full strength.

ANNAPOLIS, MD.—Navy's football squad entrained tonight for New York and its game with Columbia with all hands in good shape except Cliff Lenz, 200-pound fullback from Latrobe, Pa. Lenz is badly bruised and Coach Hank Hardwick said it was doubtful he would be used.

HANOVER, N. H.—Dartmouth's big green held a light workout on Memorial Field today and attended one of the biggest pre-game football rallies in the school's history before leaving for Ithaca, N. Y., where it will risk its undefeated slate against Cornell Saturday. Coach Earl Blaik said his team was "ready."

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Two triple-threat sophomores, Cliff Wilson and Dick Banger, took over the first string halfback assignments for Syracuse today as Coach Ossie Solem sent the Orange through a long offensive workout in preparation for Duke. The Blue Devils will arrive tomorrow.

NEW YORK—Fordham's varsity staged a defensive scrimmage against North Carolina plays in a final hard workout while Coach Jim Crowley put his reserves, including the speedy Len Eshmont, to work perfecting their attack. The Rams will be without some of their stars because of injuries.

ITHACA, N. Y.—Cornell tapered off its Dartmouth preparations with a dummy scrimmage and Coach Carl Snavely remarked, "If we aren't ready we never will be." The Big Green will share Schoellkopf Field in tomorrow's final workout.

BOSTON — Undefeated Boston College rated an overwhelming favorite for its Armistice Day game with Boston University's injury riddled eleven. Thus the Eagles hope to avenge last year's defeat, first in the history of the series with B. U.

NEW YORK — Cheered by the presence of Capt. Jack Wright and Star Passer Sid Lukman, Columbia's Lions put up a vigorous defense against Navy's plays in the last hard workout for Saturday's contest. Coach Lou Little grinned as he said: "We are at our best for the first time in four weeks—since the Penn game. We have a good chance."

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Yale held only a light workout against Princeton passing plays as Coach Ducky Pond satisfied himself the Elis were in fighting trim for their test with the Tigers. He said Bud Humphrey would be back in the lineup at quarterback.

WEST POINT, N. Y.—Army's first and second strings scrimmaged against Princeton formations again in spite of the intervening game with the University of Chattanooga Moccasins Saturday. The squad was kept on the field long after floodlights were turned on.

Kweller, Zahn Sign With Heurich Pro Five

Play Exhibition Against Newark
Kweller Former Duquesne Player
Zahn Veteran of G. W., Heurich

Two Heurich Brewers players signed their contracts for the 1938-39 American Basketball League season and an exhibition test with Newark Hebrews, in Newark, N. J., Sunday night was lined up for the Brewers yesterday at Sponsor Chris Heurich, jr., started bearing down in preparation for the season.

First player to agree to terms was Ed Kweller, 6-foot 6-inch former center of the Pittsburgh National League Pirates and Duquesne University, who has proven key man on every team with which he has been affiliated. Next in line was Arthur Zahn, former George Washington University star and a Heurich veteran of several seasons, who appears to be one of the best conditioned men on the squad currently working out.

Both Kweller and Zahn are expected to be started against Newark Hebrews, in Newark, Sunday night. General manager, Bob McDonald, announces that a ten-man squad will be taken to Newark and players will be used freely in this initial exhibition test against a Newark team represented by several established American League stars.

American League Basketball activity sings into full stride over the approaching week-end with five games being scheduled within the next three days. In the only games played to date Philadelphia Sphas defeated Brooklyn Visitations after which Brooklyn Visitations came back strong to win over ..ew York Jewels.

Three games are scheduled for Sunday. Troy visits Jersey Reds. Philadelphia Sphas meet New York Jewels, in New York, while the Wilkes Barre Barons play Brooklyn Visitations.

Wise Is Victor In Table Tennis

Play in the city's table tennis tourney progressed to the semifinal round yesterday as Russell Wise beat Bill Helfrich, 21—17, 18—21, 21—18; John bested J. M. McConnery, 21—18, 21—19; Eli Gottlieb won from B. Mosely, 21—17, 21—18, and Robert Bensinger beat Allen Sondheimer, 21—18, 21—15.

In today's play, which will take place at the Golf and Tennis Center, 3330 Fourteenth street northwest, Wise will meet Evans, and Gottlieb will play Bensinger.

Sprinters Get Chance Today In Pimlico Race

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—The sprinters of the horse tracks will have their chance tomorrow in the $5,000-added Ritchie Handicap at Pimlico, named for Maryland's late Governor.

The victor in the race will be crowned king of Maryland's sprint division.

Sun Egret, carrying 121 pounds, is rated as the favorite, heading for his third straight stakes win. The field is practically the same as that bested by the son of Sun Briar and Polly Egret in the Baltimore Autumn Handicap.

Principal opposition was expected to come from Mower, second in the Baltimore Handicap, and Accolade.

Schulze Out At American

The trials of Coach Gus Welsh, whose American U. football team is slated to meet Haverford on the American U. field Saturday, increased yesterday with the announcement that "Dutch" Schulze, regular end, would be out for the remainder of the season. Water on the knee was given as the reason.

In Schulze's place Welsh plans to start young Don Davido, one of the team's few substitutes. All was not gloom in the A. U. locker room, however, when Bob Hall, stellar center, returned to the squad after a month's absence. Hall withdrew with an appendix which needed removing as the season began. He has recovered from the operation and makes a welcome addition to the squad.

One other casualty marked the final scrimmage of the Americans. Kim Shoop, tackle, twisted his ankle severely and may not be ready for tomorrow's tilt. Coach Welsh may have to move an end or a spare backfield man to the guard spot.

U. S. Cagers Win

Montevideo, Uruguay, Nov. 10 (AP). The touring United States basketball team, sponsored by the A.A.U., opened a four-game series here by beating the local Olympia quintet, 37 to 17, after leading, 18 to 8, at half-time.

New Haven Loses

Providence, R. I., Nov. 10 (AP).—A pair of goals in the third period by Crossley Sherwood, recruit winger, tonight gave the Rhode Island Reds a 2-to-1 triumph over the New Haven Eagles before a slim crowd.

In League Opener

By the Associated Press.

Hershey, Pa., Nov. 10. — The Hershey Cubs defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 3 to 2, in the opening game of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League here tonight.

Russell scored from scrimmage on a short pass from Kawalski in the first period, to give the Cubs the lead.

Catlin added another in the second on a long pass from Thompson. In the same period Jack Tuten scored for the Orioles on a pass from his brother, Audley.

With less than three minutes left to play, Russel scored on a pass from Enns for what proved to be the winning goal.

Generals Hosts To Harriers

Lexington, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Approximately 100 runners will match strides over a difficult 4-mile course here tomorrow afternoon when Washington and Lee plays host to the State cross-country meet.

All members of Virginia's Big Six are entered for the event. The freshman meet will get under way at 3 p. m., with the varsity starting an hour later. All will finish at Washington and Lee's Wilson Field.

Virginia Tech, defeated by Washington and Lee this year, is the defending champion. The Generals and the Virginia Cavaliers are regarded as perhaps the most dangerous contenders for the Gobblers' crown.

Varsity entries follow:

V. P. I.—Boyette, Davis, Dennis, Draine, Etheridge, Cocahill, Schuler.

V. M. I.—Dale, Rockwood, Read, Kump, Weiss, Seitz.

W. and L.—Ragon, Harvey, W. Murray, G. Murray, Nocker, Martin and McConnell.

St. Albans, Landon In Grid Tilt Today

The grid teams of Landon Prep and St. Albans meet today at Landon Field in the only local prep school clash of the day. St. Albans will probably be favored, having battled Georgetown Prep to a scoreless tie, and Landon having lost by two touchdowns to Georgetown. Game time is 3:15.

Yucatan Kid Wants Armstrong Battle

Will Deposit $2,500 Forfeit With Commission
Seeks Title Match in Mexico New Year's Day
Fight With Ferrando Here Monday a Good One

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Evidently borrowing the idea from Tony Galento, Yucatan Kid, the grinning Mexican lightweight with the broken down English vocabulary, will visit the District Boxing Commission office today to seek assistance in getting a title match with Henry Armstrong. Yucatan, it seems, would argue about the lightweight championship with Henry at Mexico City New Year's Day.

The Kid apparently is overlooking Monday night's bout with Joey Ferrando at the Arena. He expects to knock out Ferrando, and would like to get Petey Sarron back in the ring to avenge an old score with him before squaring off with Armstrong.

The Mexican hasn't a shiny new $10,000 bill handy—even one of the slightly used variety, but through the good offices of Representative Gabe Menendez has managed to rake up $2,500 as bond.

A Good Match

Yucatan bases his claim to a match with Henry on a victory over one Joe Condi, who, it is alleged, whipped Armstrong two weeks previous to meeting Yucatan. The Kid's performance so impressed his public it has been clamoring for a championship match for him since.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday predicted a great match Monday night, and, after some little persuasion, permitted himself to be quoted.

"This is positively the best match I ever put in at the Arena. Mark my words, it's gonna end in a knockout (sotto voce) or else they changed the gloves on me."

Better Than Average

It does shape up as a better than average match, however, because of the principals' styles. Ferrando demonstrated his lightning-fast walk-in style while beating up Joey Straiges two weeks ago, and the audience evidently liked him. Yucatan didn't get much chance to show his stuff against Sarron, but has a potent right that will lull to sleep anybody it hits.

Yucatan likes an opponent that comes at you in orthodox fashion, as Ferrando does, and has never yet taken a backward step. He takes a punch well and gives a good one, and and undoubtedly will be a favorite over Ferrando.

Yucatan is the best known Mexican pugilist to cross the Rio Grande since the original Joe Rivers. Unlike Rivers, who liked his wine, black cigars and strong words, Yucatan is a model of clean, tolerant living. Yucatan's style also is different from Mexican Joe's, but critics say the young hombre has a rosy future before him because he punches as well as Rivers.

Yucatan claims to have had 20 of his last 22 opponents on deck at least once. Ferrando, he got over to us via an interpreter, will be No. 21.

Twin Softball Bill at Tech

Seeking to widen its lead in the Community Center Indoor Softball League, Victory Post meets Treasury tomorrow night in the opening game of a double-header at Tech High gymnasium at 7 o'clock.

Community Center All-Stars half a game behind, the Legionnaires engage Bill Benzing's Unknowns. Should the All-Stars falter, they will drop into a tie with the Unknowns. Bill Edwards and Johnny Amstadt will oppose on the mound. Treasury hopes to knock Victory Post from the lead. Harold Steffes and Orren Shanks will take up the mound duties.

Kentucky Derby Slated on May 6

French Lick, Ind., Nov. 10 (AP).—Col. M. J. Winn, American Tuff Association and Churchill Downs president, said today the sixty-fifth running of the Kentucky Derby "most likely" would be on May 6.

"It'll be a bigger and better derby in every way," he predicted while vacationing here.

*Collar Pin Doodler

But a Collar Pin Doodler is one who is always fussing with his collar pin. If you're in this class, try one of these new Collar Pins by Swank. They can't come loose or dangle from one end. They always hold your tie in its correct position . . . not like the ordinary pin, which usually slips and your tie with it. Get out of the Doodling habit and wear a collar pin that's right at home with the best of shirts.

Safe-T-Pin Collar Holder by SWANK
A bit larger and heavier than the average pin. Made to wear with the more rugged types of clothing worn today. And perfect with oxford shirts and knitted ties. In silver or gold finishes. $1

Great Organ Is Dedicated At Cathedral

Bishop Freeman Leads Ceremony Is Simple Tonal Powers Displayed

With a ceremony the more impressive for its simplicity, the great organ in Washington Cathedral, one of the largest and most richly voiced instruments of its type, was dedicated last evening by the Right Rev. James Edward Freeman, Bishop of Washington. A processional hymn by the choir singing a cappella preceded the service, which began with the antiphonal reading of versicles by the minister and congregation. Invocations by the bishop, including a prayer for the donor of the organ, led to the dedication declaring the instrument "to be forever set apart from all common uses and consecrated to the praise and worship of God."

The first use of the organ after its hallowing was made by Robert George Barrow, Cathedral organist and choirmaster, who played a recital of compositions selected to display some of the most effective registrations and tonal combinations. The recital opened with Mendelssohn's variations on the chorale, "Our Father Which Art in Heaven," from the D minor sonata for organ. In this work were employed the gamba-celeste stop, flute pipes, reed combinations and other couplings as well as the full pedal organ.

In three of Bach's chorale-preludes, "Das alte Jahr vergangen ist," "Alle Menschen muessen sterben" and "Ich ruf' zu dir, Herr Jesu Christ," the softer voices of the organ disclosed its possibilities in music of contemplative mood. In contrast to this tranquility was the brilliance of the intermezzo from Charles Widor's sixth organ symphony, in which the sparkle of mixture stops produced a pointillist effect of high colors.

Barrow's own "Legend," composed for the occasion, brought into play some of the beautifully toned solo stops: the clarinet, the English horn and the flauto mirabilis. The imaginative and skilfully written piece had melodic charm and a pleasing harmonic background.

The tone-coloring potentialities of the organ were called upon in the impressionistic "Landscape in Mist" by Sigfrid Karg-Elert, a musical painting in pastel shades. The recital closed with two movements from Louis Vierne's third symphony: the delightfully whimsical scherzo and the resplendent finale which mounts to a climax of orchestral power.

A large audience, including many organists, choirmasters and other musicians of the city, listened in silence to the expertly performed program. One of the most interested auditors, keenly observant of every nuance in tone, was Ernest M. Skinner, under whose supervision the organ was built and installed.

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Al Norton, prominent and popular as an emcee in Washington for the last nine years, will lead his own band at Bamboo Gardens beginning next Thursday, November 17. Al's debut as leader will also be marked by Bamboo's presentation of a big floor revue produced by Paul Florens, of Hollywood. The show will run for 40 minutes, is said to be one of the most lavish ever booked into the Capital.

That look of deadly concentration worn by Milton Davis, director of the Rainbow Room Orchestra, isn't altogether due to his musical duties. Milt was one of the three top golfers in a field of 80 who competed in the Argyle Club turkey tournament last Sunday. His score was 71. The play-off comes next Sunday and Milt is determined to win the turkey or—well, he'll probably sprain his vocabulary if he doesn't.

Caricatures in water color are the specialty of Artist Carl Bankston who's just come to the Pall Mall Room straight from One Fifth Avenue. His caricatures are gay, amusing, good likenesses, but without an ounce of malice. You'll be able to get a laugh out of your picture without squirming inwardly.

Caprice has a new canary. She's Evelyn Nations, pretty as a pink, and arrived in town only yesterday. She also plays both piano and accordion very fetchingly. Vee Lawnhurst's fans will be pleased to know that her absence will be a short one, not over a week or so, depending on how long it takes her to make arrangements about publishing a book.

Every place in town is all readied up for Armistice Night and will cater especially to the vets and their memories.

Hi Hat is outdoing itself by offering a comedy drama that will take you "Over There" and bring you back. All the Hi Hat entertainers will participate in the show, and even Jerry and Joe, the tallest and shortest waiters, have been drafted to play rookies. We, the customers, will have an opportunity to sing all the war songs we know and don't know. Oscar's had a program of war songs printed for the patrons' benefit.

Metronome Room's Johnny Slaughter is preparing to break your heart with a waltz medley of war-time tunes including "Roses of Picardy," "Memories," "My Buddy," "Smiles." Non-dancers will be permitted to weep into their Martinis.

Shoreham's Blue Room will give a Hemingwayish touch to Armistice Night by offering "Farewell to Arms" done by Collis and Wanda. Shoreham's eloquent publicist, Leonora Kuhn, writes us that "Farewell to Arms" shows "the short lived ecstasy of love when bugles blow and lovers interrupt their gayety and and love with tears of parting, etc." What's this etc. business, Leonora?

Appropriate to the day is "Farewell to Arms" (upper), as done by Collins and Wanda at the Shoreham. Lee Sullivan (lower) is the barytone singer at the Cafe Caprice

Troika's new show leaves you breathless, calls for more superlatives than we can find on this typewriter. Brandished spears, feverish rhythm, characterize the opening Cossack Caucasian number. "Gay '90's," Russky mode, is wickedly comic. Violinist Sasha Lukas plays "Chanson Bohemienne" dreamily. And this is just the beginning. Though the Troika artists work on an "all for one, one for all" basis, we can't help trying to pin a special gold star on Tania Orlik. He's a dancer whose sheer fire and perfection naturally dominate the scene.

Anchor Room's rhymestress, Frances Chapman, rolls her own paragraph. Here it is:

To prescribe for Old Man Gloom
So next time you have a cocktail
Have it in the Anchor Room."

Mayfair's newest ambrosial drinkable, we hear from Promotion Manager Jimmy Byrd, is "Spirit of the Old South." The base is apple jack and lime juice. Two of them and you get a "Stonewall" Jackson fixation, three and you'd lead Pickett's charge.

Pix of the Minute: Shar-Zad so crowded with Georgetown undergrads at the afternoon cocktail session that there was hardly room for the faithful delegation from the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Hoopskirt headquarters—meaning the Heigh Ho. If the hoops get much bigger, Pete Macias will have to widen the entrance—or have a hoop garage outside.

Evelyn Knight (King Cole Room) looking like the Lidy Maid of Astolat in a white moire gown, but singing like Ella Fitzgerald.

Lotus' Chester Doherty girls drilling with the precision of West Pointers—and a lot more "u-umph."

Remember Helen Forrest, who used to warble so charmingly at Madrillon not so many months ago? She's now on a national cigarette program, thus properly justifying the admirers who, more than a year ago, prophesied that she would reach the top.

Lounge Riviera at 2400 Sixteenth street is rapidly nearing completion. Its opening is just a week from today, Friday, November 18. A preview shows a subtly gay mise en scene, with soft but lively browns contrasted with sharp red, white and blue that lends the Riviera touch. It's easy to fancy yourself right on the lovely "Azure Coast." Clever, too, is the mirrored ceiling of the entrance colonnade.

Montmartre Noctambule is the gathering place of the town's intelligensia in their lighter moments. So-o-o, if you fancy your mental capacity——. They have mighty good times, too, we're told.

Realtors Hear Arguments on Home Taxes

Taylor, Aldis Speak D. C. Presents Gavel Straus Gives Talk

By Thomas M. Cahill.
A Staff Correspondent.

Milwaukee, Nov. 10. — "Shall homesteads be tax-exempt?" was debated today at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards meeting at the Hotel Schroeder. Arguments for and against the exemption, now in effect in 12 States, were presented respectively by Carl Taylor, Milwaukee, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Building and Loan League, and Graham Aldis, president of the Chicago Building Owners and Managers Association.

Emphasizing that real estate taxation was adopted as the principal means of securing revenue back when real estate was the chief source of wealth and income, Taylor insisted it bore no relationship to the principal expenditures of a community with respect to relief, protection and education. Declaring it did not represent ability to pay, he reminded that it continued as the basis of taxation simply because of an old custom and its easy location for taxation purposes.

Advising it is a social necessity that home ownership be encouraged and made secure, the speaker said taxes should be based on sales, income, or market value of wealth, and urged exemption on modest homesteads and a tax limitation of 15 mills on all other real estate.

Admitting that real estate paid more than its share of the taxes and should be relieved of the burden, Aldis, speaking for the opposition, said tax improvement should be the support and realization of the national association's program, foundation of which is a general tax rate limitation.

The important task confronting private construction is provision of housing for that third of the nation's urban families who cannot be aided by public programs and have not yet been helped by private ones, Nathan Straus, administrator, United States Housing Authority, told the assembly. Dividing the population into groups, Straus revealed that of every three families in cities and towns, one has an income of less than $1,100 a year and can afford rentals of less than $20 a month and that it was from this classification that the tenants of USHA projects will come.

Another group, he recounted, is that which has an income of more than $1,750 per year, can pay rentals upward from $30 a month, or afford to buy a house at $3,500 or more, and representing the field now served by private industry. There is a third section, however, with annual incomes of less than $1,750 and more than $1,100 and this constitutes the challenge to private construction, for except in very special circumstances, public housing projects will not accept tenants with incomes above $1,100 and private builders do not reach families with incomes less than $1,750.

Referring to prevalent opinion that public housing is more expensive than private, Straus said such belief was incorrect, that the former is not costing more and even introducing economies of its own. Contracts actually awarded for the first USHA projects, he said, show that cost per dwelling unit will be lower than the average cost of private building in the same cities, as revealed by comparison with figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, this despite the fact that the public projects are designed for 60-year life and built at prevailing wage rates.

Julius P. Heil, Republican Governor-elect of Wisconsin, addressed the general meeting, advocating a fair valuation of real estate, instead of a routine and arbitrary assessment. President Joseph W. Catharine, of the national association, was presented with a gavel and block made from White House timber, as a gift of the Washington (D. C.) Real Estate Board. The presentation was made by Charles J. Rush, secretary of the board and chairman of the National Realtor Secretaries Council.

Auto Show Ticket Price Unchanged For Holiday

Despite the Armistice Day holiday there will be no advances in prices at the Nineteenth Annual Auto Show, in the Chevy Chase Ice Palace today, the managers announced last night. Admission will continue at 25 cents until 6 o'clock with a 40-cent admission later. The doors will open at 11 this morning as usual and close at 11 tonight.

Attendance and sales figures, Murphy said, continue well in advance of last year.

National Hockey Matches Set Here

Meet Dated Nov. 18-20; Trials Set

Seminary Is Scene Games at Cathedral Exhibition at Madeira Schedule Arranged

The Southeast section of the United States Field Hockey Association will hold its annual tournament here on November 18, 19 and 20. The teams represented are Baltimore, Harrisburg, Pa.; Lancaster, Pa.; North Jersey, Philadelphia, Virginia and Washington. The games on Friday, November 18 and Saturday, the 19th, will be played on the National Cathedral School field at Thirty-fourth street and Woodley road, and the Sunday exhibition games on the Madeira School field in Greenway, Va.

Tickets may be obtained from Jean A. Pearson, Mount Vernon Seminary, Woodley 1400. The general admission is 40 cents and the admission for members 25 cents.

The All-Washington First and the All-Washington Reserve teams will be announced at the annual dinner meeting. All club games will be considered tryouts for the two Washington teams. Final trials will take place at the Mount Vernon Seminary field on Nebraska avenue.

The schedule follows:

Friday afternoon, November 18: 1 p. m.—Baltimore, First, vs. Virginia. 3 p. m.—Philadelphia, Second, vs. Baltimore, Second. 3 p. m.—Washington, First, vs. Philadelphia, First.

Saturday morning, November 19: 10 a. m.—Washington, Second, vs. Harrisburg, Pa. 11:15 a. m.—Philadelphia, First, vs. Virginia.

Saturday afternoon, November 19: 1 p. m.—Baltimore, Second, vs. Lancaster, Pa. 3 p. m.—Philadelphia, Second, vs. Baltimore, First. 3 p. m.—Washington, First, vs. North Jersey.

Sunday morning, November 20: 10 a. m.—Washington, Second, vs. Lancaster, Pa. 11 a. m.—Harrisburg, Pa., vs. North Jersey. 12 noon—Southeast, First, vs. Southeast Reserve.

Miss Arnold Heads Hockey Association

Margery Arnold was named president of the Washington Field Hockey Association when the group met at its annual fall banquet. Others elected were Jean Pearson, vice president, Elizabeth Cooper, secretary, and Lucy Sanborn, treasurer.

First and second teams, selected from a squad of 80 to compete in the Southeastern tournament being held here November 18, 19, and 20, will play preliminary games today and Saturday. The two groups will meet each other tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. on the Mount Vernon Seminary Field, and on Sunday they will play against the first and second Baltimore teams in Baltimore.

Clemson Celebrates Victory Over G. W.

The Washington Chapter of the Clemson Alumni Association will celebrate the victory of Clemson football team over George Washington University last Saturday at a dinner at Naylor's Sea Food Restaurant, 951 Maine avenue southwest, at 6:30 p. m. on Monday, November 14.

Dr. Henry Barre and Capt. Frank Jervey will be the principal speakers. Capt. Jervey, who has just spent two weeks with the Clemson football team, will give the high lights of the game at Greenville, S. C., last Saturday when the Clemson "Tigers" rode rough-shod over George Washington. A large turnout of Clemson men is expected.

Mexican Army Horse Wins in Big Show

sey Doodle clearly outstripped his rivals, expertly ridden by Stanley Lawson.

Another Randle entry, Randle's Way, was in the jump-off for third place but failed at the second jump. The May Top Stables' Golden Brew took second place, with their Bartender in third; Walter von Lambeck's Sport's Crusader took the white ribbon.

A noted Virginia stable scored again, when Brown Bruin, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, won the blue over a choice field of 17 of the country's superhunters in the class for lightweight hunters to carry up to 160 pounds to hounds. This was an impressive win for the statuesque brown gelding and he was expertly ridden by the popular Mrs. Jacob Wetherall to a perfect performance over an intricate and difficult hunting course.

While performance was a 60 per cent factor, conformation counted for 40 per cent. Crispin Oglebay's Holystone, by Man o' War, who is being regarded as a very promising candidate for the hunter championship, was second; the Sundown Stable's Fitz Lee was third, and fourth, Inky, owned by Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Durham, N. C., has often been shown at Middleburg.

Miss Cotter Applauded

Though Margaret Cotter only took fourth place in the knockdown and out by an unlucky toss for third place, she received what amounted to an ovation from the crowd. Far greater applause was given Margaret than the winner of the event. The knockdown and out, which is daily featured, arouses more enthusiasm than any of the civilian classes. This is the second knockdown and out in which Rocksie has taken a ribbon, and if the applause she receives is any indication of the wishes of the crowd, Margaret and the gallant Rocksie would take the blue ribbon every night. She has already qualified for the final on the last night of the show, and we expect Margaret to make a great effort then. Margaret's big bay gelding seems to be getting better as the show goes on.

Red Sails, owned by C. V. Henkel, jr., and Crossbar, owned by Philip J. Bliss, were the only two horses to have a clean record, and in the jump-off Red Sails won, receiving first award, Crossbar taking second place. There were five in the jump-off for third and fourth places. Goldamsel, Mrs. Tilli Kaufman's chestnut mare, and Rocksie had clear performances over the raised bars. Choosing to toss, instead of going through the ordeal of another jump-off, Goldamsel's owner won, Rocksie taking fourth place.

The class for officers' charges, horses which are the bona fide property of the United States Army, Reserve or National Guard, brought some of the closest competition of the afternoon performance. Three horses—Sir Conrad, owned and ridden by Lieut. John R. Pugh, of Fort Myer; Ard Patrick, owned and ridden by Lieut. O. K. Kane, and Don, of the United States Horse Show team, ridden by Lieut. Scott M. Sanford—were tied for first place with a perfect score. Four horses were tied for fourth place with but four faults.

On the jump-off the triple in-and-out was raised to 4 feet 6 and 4 feet 9. Ard Patrick was the only one of the three contestants able to make a clean performance over the course, taking the blue. Both the gallant Sir Conrad and the smooth-performing Don knocked down the first rail of the in-and-out. Instead of jumping off again, Lieut. Pugh and Lieut. Sanford elected to flip a coin for second place, Lieut. Sanford winning the toss and giving Don the red ribbon.

The four contestants tied for fourth place, among whom was Col. Charles B. Lyman on his Maui-Girl, well known to local horse show fans when he was stationed in Washington two years ago, also flipped a coin and King Hi, of the U. S. Army Horse Show team, ridden by Capt. Royce A. Drake, was awarded the yellow ribbon.

Albee Entry Wins

Due to the increasing public disapprobation of the practice of setting horses' tails in the saddle classes, Mrs. Fitch Gilbert, who has decided opinions on this matter, donated a prize of $2,000 for a three-gaited saddle class stake for horses with natural tails. The entry was large for this type of class and particularly popular with the public.

Veterinaries examined the horses before their entry was accepted. There were six awards in this class, which was won by Mr. and Mrs. Reed A. Albee's Strolling-bye; second, Clearview Maybelle, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mahoney; third, Wonderman, owned by W. L. Orcutt; fourth, Sporting Hour, owned by Arthur Poland; fifth, the Upway Farm's Northern Light; sixth, Jack Frost, owned by Moses W. Faitoute.

Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN.

Maryland has suffered, for omer than a century, for want of sensible and proper conservation of her natural resources. A little sop is now and then handed to sportsmen and others interested in the preservation of their God-given heritage, but no carefully thought-out plan has ever been adopted as in other States, such as Pennsylvania, West Virginia and New Jersey.

Thert is proposed for Maryland a model conservation commission law. It will be introduced to the new Legislature in January. But in the interim, until it is passed, her resources of wildlife will continue to be depleted. There can be no sensbile conservation until there is a State administration which is conservation-minded.

The angler and hunter know this, and it is hoped this Legislature will recognize it, and not continue to be fooled by a few ranting fishermen taken to Annapolis every time conservation measures come up, by the commercial interests, to show tender-hearted delegates that such measures would be taking the bread out of the mouths of their wives and children.

Certainly it would do so in a few isolated instances, but it would also stop their breaking the law by their bootlegging of black bass, and within a short time would return five sportsmen's dollars for every one they received from commercial interests, without hurting in any way these commercial interests.

We have every hope that Gov.-elect Herbert O'Conor, who has given every indication of being conservation-minded, will in his appointments to the present conservation commission setup, keep in mind the fitness of his appointees, so that they might continue as a nucleus in the new commission, if the proposed law is passed.

If any Marylander, who might not be an outdoorsman, don't know what its all about—this new era of conservation, by all means attend the second Annual North American Outdoor Life Show to be held in the Fifth Regiment Army in Baltimore from February 17-25. The first one was a revelation to more than 100,000 people. Ding Darling says "The finest sportsmen's show ever staged." With the experience gained from it, this year's should be larger and finer in every way.

With final returns having been tabulated, Nova Scotia again holds top place as the world's tuna angling center. No less than 236 of the bluefin giants, with a total poundage of 99,283 were brought to gaff in waters of the province during the short summer season.

That four fishing ports could produce such a remarkable record is noteworthy in itself, but when one considers the fact that Liverpool, Jordan's Ferry, and Shelburne, three of the chief producers of angling action, suffered setbacks this season, producing less than a sixth of their usual quota of tuna, it is reasonable to assume that had these usually reliable fishing centers been anywhere near par, Nova Scotia's grand total taken with rod and reel would have come close to doubling the 1937 figures.

As it is, Wedgeport, pioneer tuna center of the province, getting off to a later start than usual, rang up 194 tuna with a weight of 77,606 pounds—this in just a little over three months of fishing and with no time deducted for bad weather. The first fish was brought to gaff at Wedgeport on July 12, and the last fish weighed on the scales was on September 21.

The greatest catch, not of this season alone, but of any season, was made on September 4 at Shelburne, when Alfred Kenney, a resident of that town, broke the world's record with a tuna weighing 864 pounds. Kenney's catch has been officially confirmed by Thomas Aiken and the American Museum of Natural History.

Women were again very much in the spotlight, although they didn't break the records this year as they did last. Georgia McCoy was probably the outstanding performer with 13 tuna that weighed 4,219 pounds.

Among the men, John Manning registered 17 of the blue giants for a total poundage of 6,744. His largest, weighing 805 pounds, was the largest ever taken on rod and reel at Wedgeport.

Don't forget the Turkey Shoot of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Ike Waltons on Sunday on the Rockville Pike just a mile beyond Bethesda. Without any doubt the outstanding event of the season, this year it looks as though it will be bigger and better than ever. Although at that, it will have to be something if it beats the one last fall, when 36 fine turkeys were taken home by the shooters, who stopping banging away only when darkness settled down upon them.

Either shotgun or rifle, the only restriction being the use of iron sights. Telescopers will have to leave them home for this event.

league rule aimed at giving the passer a chance for his life. The new rule calls for a 15-yard penalty for roughing the passer after the ball has left his hands. There were occasions in last year's game when Sammy, after getting rid of the ball, literally was forced to run for it, with angry Bears chasing him to the sidelines.

Only one among them, according to Baugh's own story, was the least solicitous about possible injury him. That one was Pete Bausch, Bears' center, whom Sammy describes as a "regular fellow."

"Why Bausch would come piling into me when I was trying to get off a pass, and try to knock me flat. He wasn't bothering about batting down the ball. But will say one thing about him. Every time he knocked me down, he came back to help me up. Then he'd say, 'Sammy, this is a heluva of a way to make a living, ain't it?' You can't hate a fellow like that!"

Old-Time Style

The Bears' style of football is a delight to anybody who played the game or watched it 20 years ago. Because the Bears are probably the only team in the Nation who still go in heavily for the old indirect pass from center in which the quarterback bends for the ball and hands it over to the runner.

They use the direct pass from center only on their punting formations. Their running game is based on quick thrusts through the line and sweeping end runs, but always with the quarterback first handling the ball. They line up in the old T-formation which every sandlot, high school and college team was using, 20, 30, 40 years ago.

Coach Is Worried

From Saturday to Saturday there is no more worried personality in the land than Mr. Ned Merriam, of Chicago University, despite the fact he has no traffic whatsoever with football.

The source of Merriam's worry, however, concerns football. He is the track coach at Chicago U., but John Davenport, his Big Ten 100-yard dash champion, and Bob Wassem, his star hurdler, are members of the Maroon football team as well. From Saturday to Saturday, Track Coach Merriam is in deep fear that they will come down with football injuries.

But he was smiling broadly last Saturday night following Chicago game with Harvard. Davenport had suffered a broken nose, Wassem had a finger broken. Said Track Coach Merriam: "Ain't it wonderful that they were practically unhurt. You don't run with your nose or your finger."

Nagurski off guard and felled him with a flying tackle, then pounced on him while Referee Strongbow started the count. Strongbow reached two before noticing Nagurski's legs were out of the ring.

Again Savoldi rammed his opponent with a flying tackle, and again he clamped on a body press. Again it was no go, for Nagurski's head was under the ropes. As the Italian marshalled his muscle for one final dive, Nagurski suddenly came to life, bowled him over with an old Minnesota line-rush, 1929 vintage, and fell on him to win.

Women's Backstroke Record Is Broken

Amsterdam, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Netherlands swimmer, Irene van Feggelen, broke the world 150-yard women's backstroke record today, covering the distance in 1 minute 43.3 seconds. The listed record is 1 minute 45.4 seconds, set by Nida Sneff, also a Netherlands swimmer, in 1936.

Corn Climbs In Active Pit Trading

Gains 1⅛c a Bushel Farmers Hold Supplies Wheat Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Corn assumed leadership of the grain trade today, and rose 1⅛ cents a bushel in lively dealings, whereas wheat suffered ⅝ of a cent setback.

Indications pointed to sensationally large amounts of corn being withheld by farmers to obtain Federal loans. According to some trade estimates, the total of corn sealed for loans from the Government this season is expected to equal or exceed the aggregate which normally would move into commercial market channels.

Rural offerings of corn today were scarce, and numerous traders bought corn futures against sales of wheat. Topmost prices for corn since September 30 were reached.

Corn closed at the day's peak quotations, ⅝@1⅛ cents higher compared with yesterday's finish, December, 47½@47⅝; May, 51¼@51⅜; wheat showing ¼-⅝ decline, oats unchanged to ⅜ up, rye, ⅝-¾ advanced, and provisions 2 cents to 7 cents down.

Mo. Pac. Directors Protest ICC Plan

Cleveland, Nov. 10 (AP).—Directors of Missouri Pacific Railroad agreed today to file briefs and exceptions to an Interstate Commerce Commission examiner's report which would wipe out Missouri Pacific common and preferred stock as part of a reorganization plan. William Wyer, secretary of the railroad, said the directors voted to "carry the fight as far as necessary."

Wyer said Missouri Pacific's plan was based upon the agreement of all committees of bondholders or trustees which had entered appearances, with the exception of "two small bond groups."

"We feel our plan is the only one with a chance of being adopted," he said. "The directors think the examiner's report is definitely unfavorable to creditors as well as to us."

Circulation Rises To 6.764 Billion

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night that money in circulation hit a new high for normal banking times in the week ended November 9. The board estimated $6,764,000,000 of cash was in the hands of the public and of banks, a total exceeded only when the banks were closed in March, 1933.

Board officials said the increase was due partly to seasonal influences and also to the accumulation of more cash by banks because of their large volume of idle funds. One result of the increase in money in circulation was a $90,000,000 decrease last week in the lendable excess reserves of banks to a total of $3,130,000,000.

Rail Wages Top 1929 Average

New York, Nov. 10.—Average weekly earnings of wage earners working for class 1 railroads were 2.2 per cent higher in July, 1938, the latest month for which figures are available, than in the boom year of 1929, according to a study by the statistical division of the National Industrial Conference Board.

With 75 per cent of the wage earners classified as skilled or semi-skilled and the remainder unskilled, the average weekly earnings in July were $32.41, as compared with $31.71 in 1929. Road passenger engineers, road passenger conductors, road freight conductors, road passenger firemen and road passenger brakemen are employes whose weekly pay check is notably higher than in 1929. On the other hand, road freight firemen, yard brakemen and road freight brakemen are paid, on the average, about $3 to $5 per week less than in 1929.

In view of the present agitation over the railroad wage problem, it is interesting to compare the trend of earnings in 25 manufacturing industries with those in class 1 railroads. Using 1914 as a base period, with an index of 100, the index numbers of earnings in the 25 manufacturing industries were 224 in 1929 and 181 during the first seven months of 1938. Similar index numbers for wage earners of the class 1 railroads were 209 in 1929 and 218 for the first seven months of 1938.

Connecticut Mutual In Billion Dollar Class

The billion dollar mark in life insurance in force has been reached by the Connecticut Mutual, according to the report just received by John L. McElfresh, general agent for the company at Washington. With a gain of $2,423,956 for the month of October, the total in force figure now stands at over $1,000,000,000. This is a gain of $20,899,989 since the first of the year.

The Connecticut Mutual now becomes one of fifteen life insurance companies in the United States to have a billion or more of ordinary life insurance in force.

Holiday Cuts U. S. Volume of Bank Clearings

18.6% Under Year Ago Washington Gains New York Off 22.2%

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Cut down by the election day holiday, the volume of bank clearings for the current period dropped sharply from that of the week preceding and were also considerably less than the aggregate for the corresponding week last year, which did not include election day, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Total clearings for the five-day week ended November 9 amounted to $4,414,529,000, a decline of 18.6 per cent from the $5,422,722,000 for the corresponding full week a year ago.

New York clearances fell to $2,635,719,000, as compared with $3,388,647,000 for the same 1937 week, giving a decrease of 22.2 per cent. Outside of New York, the turnover was $1,778,810,000, or 12.5 per cent less than the $2,034,075,000 for the like period a year ago.

Realizing Sets In After Wednesday's Rise Motor Shares Prove the Most Vulnerable Steels, Rails and Oils Are Resistant

New York, Nov. 10.—Stocks finished with irregular price changes, mostly on the downside. Profit-taking after Wednesday's sharp rise and in advance of the holiday neutralized vigorous buying, from both domestic and foreign sources, causing the 100 key stocks to end 0.19 point lower, which lopped only a small fraction from the advance of 1.15 points in this index in the previous session. Volume on the big board, of 2,176,753 shares compared with turnover of 3,098,780 the day before.

Commodity markets presented a mixed picture, cotton advancing 6 to 8 points on active dealings. Corn rose ⅜ to 1⅛ while wheat dipped ¼ to ⅝.

Motor shares were the most vulnerable to realizing, with coppers, rail equipments and utilities also showing sizeable losses. Steels, oils and rails, on the other hand, were steady to firm. Bonds of all descriptions continued to harden despite hesitancy of stocks, speculative liens in particular being bouyant. For the second day foreign exchanges slumped severely in terms of the dollar as European funds were transferred in volume in New York for investment in American stocks, made more attractive by election results. A factor in the weakness of the French franc, as on Wednesday, was the further delay in announcement of the new economic plan, promised by the finance minister nearly a week ago.

Early Activity

The first half hour or a little more saw the most active period of trading, during which tickers were unable to keep pace with floor transactions. In addition to Republic, large initial blocks included 3,500 for Steel common, 4,000 for North American Aviation, 3,500 for Packard, 2,000 for Pennsylvania Railroad, 3,000 for United Corp., 2,500 for General Motors and 1,500 shares for U. S. Rubber. It was during this stage of the market that more of the day's 147 new highs were recorded. The breadth of the market, with 952 issues included in transactions, illustrated the revival of interest in equities, largely because of the election.

Quite a bit of buying was in evidence in the dry goods shares, which have been backward recently because of unseasonably warm weather in the Eastern States. Usually, public interest in this group develops early in the final quarter of the year as profits for most companies are largest in that period. Long pull buying in this division is said by brokers to be based largely on the 1939 World Fair prospects.

Street gossip was to the effect that a little short selling has taken place in utilities. These were strong in early trading, but dropped back for sizeable losses before the close. No liquidation was, however, in evidence, selling being confined to day-by-day traders. Dealers say there is good interest in evidence in power shares, including demand for 90-day calls on low-priced stocks in the group. North American turned weak on announcement of important shifts in stock ownership by American Cities Power & Light and Electric Shareholdings Corporation. American Can, American Smelting and Du Pont were among active shares which finished 1 to 2 points off.

Prime Bonds in Demand

Advances in speculative bonds were continued in the listed market today and activity also was well maintained. The hesitancy in equities found no parallel in senior obligations, which were under accumulation by dealers and investors. Railroad issues furnished most of the business. United States Treasury and best grade corporate bonds were dull. In the foreign section gains were numerous. Turnover in all bonds was $11,390,000, against $11,870,000 the previous day.

The buying of carrier bonds was most pronounced among the medium-priced interest payers. These issues forged briskly ahead and in a few instances managed to attain highs for the year. Most bonds still are far under the best levels, however, which may account for some of the interest. Default rails showed fractional advances. The local traction group was relatively quiet and steady, as were rail and utility holding company issues. Industrial convertibles were dull.

United States Treasury bonds lost the small fractions they gained on the previous day, and dealings were small. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations likewise were dull. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds held close to former figures, although some dealers were accumulating bonds for offering to large institutional investors.

In the foreign section some interest was displayed in the default obligations of Colombia and Brazil, but the changes were small. Some German bonds were marked higher on small transactions, while other European default issues were dull. Japanese and Italian bonds hovered around former levels. The high grade Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian issues were neglected.

Wrigley Declares Extra Dividend

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Directors of Wm. Wrigley, jr., Co. today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents per share payable December 1, 1938, to holders of record November 19. The board also declared regular months dividends of 25 cents payable February 1; March 1 and April 1, 1939, to stockholders of record on the twentieth of each preceding month.

Curtiss-Wright

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Directors of Curtiss-Wright Corporation today declared a dividend of $1 a share on class A stock, payable December 15 to holders of record November 25. The previous payment, 50 cents a share, was made in December last year.

Sterling Inc. Extra

Directors of Sterling, Inc. have declared an extra dividend of 10 cents per share on the common stock, payable December 20 to stockholders of record December 1. The payment of this dividend will bring the total amount paid on the common stock during 1938 to 50 cents per share, an extra of 20 cents having been paid in May in addition to four quarterly dividends of 5 cents each per share.

Goodyear Tire Plans Plant in Brazil

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 10 (AP).—Plans for the establishment of a rubber manufacturing plant in Sao Paulo, Brazil, were announced today by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. The new factory will have a capacity of 600 tires a day, along with a limited line of other rubber products.

The production will serve the Brazilian market only and will utilize raw materials from that country, the company said. The plant is Goodyear's second in South America and its ninth in foreign countries. The company has been manufacturing tires in the Argentine for several years.

Market Closings For Armistice Day

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—With domestic security and commodity exchanges closed for Armistice Day, attention in financial circles will be directed toward English markets. In addition to banks and exchanges in this country, those in Canada and France will observe the holiday.

Livestock trading in Chicago and other principal centers will progress as usual but dealings will be suspended in the Jersey City and Boston markets.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Nov. 10 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.)—Trading was tending to slacken on the Boston wool market today. A few buyers were taking fine territory wools, but their purchases were confined mostly to small lots which they could buy at lower than recent prices on sizeable quantities. Sales included mostly short French combing fine territory wools, in scattered bars, at mostly 66 to 67 cents, scoured basis.

Cotton Up; December 8.58

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—New highs for the current movement were touched in some cotton deliveries today as the trade bought against better sales of cotton goods. March advanced from 8.45 to 8.51, and closed at 8.50, with final prices 6 to 8 points net higher.

The market opened 1 to 3 points higher in response to steadier Liverpool cables and on trade and foreign buying. Orders were evenly divided early. Moderately increased price fixing developed later but around the 8¼-cent level for March and 8.30 for May a little resistance appeared. Toward the close, renewed foreign demand for late months carried them to the best levels for the day.

No. American Moves Toward Integration

Two Units to Sell 775,000 Common To Meet New Law

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—The Harrison Williams interests, controlling the $625,000,000 North American Co., of which Capital Transit and Potomac Electric Power are units, took a step today toward reducing holdings in the big utility system in a broad program designed to meet Federal Government requirements for revamping electric power setups.

The company announced plans for the sale of about 775,000 shares of North American common by the American Cities Power & Light Corporation and Electric Shareholdings Corporation, investment companies controlled by Central States Electric Corporation. In turn Central States Electric is controlled by Harrison Williams, chairman of the executive committee of the North American Co., through the New Empire Corporation.

A registration statement, it was said, has been filed with the SEC for public sale of the shares from the portfolios of the two companies. Corporate records show they held around a million shares of North American common at the end of 1937, valued at more than $20,000,000. North American shares listed as outstanding totaled 8,574,677.

The North American Co. said it had been advised that disposal of the stock was intended to reduce the interest of the two companies and those affiliated with them to less than 10 per cent of the North American control so that the investment companies would not be classified as holding units under the utility holding company act.

Steel Output Likely to Hold Around 61%

No Letdown Indicated Autos Chief Support Scrap Prices Higher

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—The Nation's current steel rate of around 61 per cent of capacity is likely to continue throughout the remainder of 1938 and even may climb a little higher, Iron Age said today in its weekly review of the steel industry.

"The immediate outlook for steel operations is promising," the publication said. "No letdown this month is indicated and, in fact, the rate may rise further during November and possibly December."

It seems probable, the trade journal added, that 1938 ingot output may be near 30,000,000 tons, output in the first ten months having been 21,123,872 tons. On the longer-term future, however, the publication was less optimistic.

Private Prospects Lag

"Unless there is a revival of private undertakings, it is difficult to forecast a continuance of the present favorable trend in steel bookings and production beyond the time when lettings of Government-financed projects reach a peak, which probably will be about next March," the organ said. "Aside from the automobile industry, which is making rapid strides in getting back to a normal basis of operations, there is no outstanding improvement in any important steel-consuming channel.

"Much of the current activity, which has lifted ingot production this week to 61 per cent as compared with an average output last month of 52.45 per cent, emanates from the automobile industry and Government-financed construction work. Automobile companies are taking large shipments of steel and, in some instances, have asked for earlier deliveries than were originally specified, which accounts in part for the 4-point rise in operations over last week."

The Iron Age scrap composite price index now stands at $14.50, up 8 cents from last week.

Electricity Output At High for Year

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Electric power production in the week ended November 5, topped the similar week of the previous year for the first time since early December last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. Power output in the latest week of 2,207,444,000 kilowatt-hours was ¼ of 1 per cent above 2,202,451,000 a year ago but .8 of 1 per cent below 2,226,038,000 in the preceding week.

The decline from last week, however, was less than seasonally expected and the Associated Press index of production, with 1929-30 taken as 100, advanced to a new high for the year at 114.8, compared with 114.5 last week.

Morgenthau to Discuss December Financing

Secretary Morgenthau invited Federal Reserve officials yesterday to meet him after Thanksgiving to determine December 15 financing of the Treasury.

Unofficial estimates indicate the Treasury probably will borrow upward of $500,000,000 on that date, but no final decision will be made until after Morgenthau consults the executive committee of the Reserve board's open market committee. This group consists of experts on the Government bond market who will advise Morgenthau on the probable market reaction to various financing proposals.

Republic to Spend $1,250,000 on Plants

Cleveland, Nov. 10 (AP).—Republic Steel Corp. announced today appropriation of "nearly $1,250,000" for plant improvements. The largest appropriation covers installation of equipment at its Gadsden, Ala., plant for manufacture of welded wire mesh and for bending building reinforcing.

Other improvements, Republic said, are at Ohio plants in Youngstown, Warren and Cleveland

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended November 5 as approximately 8,000,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 8,880,000 tons; 1936, 9,782,000 tons. Percentage of change: 1937, decrease 9.9 per cent; 1936, decrease 18.2 per

AFTER BEING CALLED A SISSY FOR WEARING A WRIST WATCH YOU DISCOVER A WELL-KNOWN FIGHTER WITH ONE

Bob Burns Says—

I guess a lot of my friends are still wonderin' why I didn't go to London on my vacation as I planned it at first. It's jest simply because somebody told me that I would be hittin' London right in the middle of their foggy season and it scared me. I jest get plum lost in a fog. I guess it's because we don't have 'em much down home.

My Uncle Sanky was depot agent when the first big fog rolled in there and the second day, when the superintendent called him from St. Louis, and asked him if the trains were running through there all right, Uncle Sanky says, "Yes, but where they're comin' from and where they're going and what they're doing here, I'll be durned if I know!"

Byron Certain Of Lewis Seat In Md. Contest

Lead Rises to 1,100
Lottery Law Defeated
Wedding Curb Wins

William D. Byron, Democrat, yesterday was assured election as United States Representative from western Maryland to the seat vacated by Representative David J. Lewis, who made an unsuccessful race for the Democratic nomination for Senator.

With only four precincts unreported, Byron had a lead of 1,100 votes in 278 precincts. His total vote was 44,407 as against 43,337 for A. Charles Stewart, Republican candidate.

The latest reurns indicate defeat of the State lottery amendment and a proposed income tax. The amendment abolishing Gretna Greens was approved.

On the lottery vote the count stood 81,980 against and 60,924 for its adoption, whereas the income tax amendment had 65,617 against and 62,422 approving.

Mrs. Shepley's Rites to Be Held This Afternoon

Funeral services for Mrs. Lillia A. Shepley, chief of the record and certificate section of the Copyright Office, Library of Congress, who died Tuesday, will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Zurhorst chapel, 301 East Capitol street.

A native of New York, Mrs. Shepley had been a resident of Washington for 40 years and an employe at the Library since 1901. She was the wife of John B. Shepley, and resided at 2020 Porter street northwest.

The Rev. Thomas J. Crowley, assistant at the Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, Chevy Chase, will officiate at the services.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Shepley leaves two sisters, Mrs. Harriette Mishler and Mrs. Jean Fuller, and a brother, Nathanial G. Schlamm, all of New York.

Mrs. Helen Walker Dies Here at 60

Mrs. Helen O'Sullivan Walker, 60, of 2848 McGill terrace, who was for 30 years a resident of Washington, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital.

She leaves her husband, Francis Walker, chief economist of the Federal Trade Commission; two daughters, Mrs. Russell Leigh Snodgrass and Miss Evelyn Walker; a son, Francis Stoughton Walker, and one sister, Miss Theresa O'Sullivan, all of this city.

Requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m. Saturday in the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Twenty-eighth street and Woodley road northwest. Interment will be private.

Mrs. Lila Davis' Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Mrs. Lila Jennings Davis, a Washington resident for 35 years and descendant of a family prominent in Orange County, Va., since the seventeenth century, who died Wednesday at Garfield Hospital after a week's illness.

Mrs. Davis was born in 1868, the daughter of William A. and Mary Amelia Jennings. She was a niece of Gen. Gabriel Wharton, Confederate general.

Mrs. Davis was the wife of William F. Davis, retired Government employe, and lived at 1428 Columbia road northwest. She was active in Robert E. Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Fort McHenry Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

She leaves her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Harry H. Keith and Mrs. Oliver F. Naquin, both wives of naval lieutenants and residents of Arlington, Va.; and two sisters, Mrs. Ida J. Hume and Mrs. Emma J. Throckmorton, both of Orange County.

The services will be held at 10:30 a. m., at St. Stephen's and the Incarnation Protestant Episcopal Church, 1527 Newton street northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Rites Tomorrow For Col. MacDill

Funeral services for Col. Leslie MacDill, General Staff Corps, U. S. Army, who was killed in a plane crash Wednesday in Anacostia, will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow in Fort Myer Chapel, with Chaplain Ora J. Cohee officiating. Burial with military honors will be in Arlington Cemetery. A formation of Army planes with one blank file will fly over the grave.

Honorary pallbearers will be Col. Frank S. Clark, Lieut. Cols. Floyd E. Galloway, Harvey C. Allen and Charles T. Phillips, Maj. E. C. Whitehead and Capt. Donald D. FitzGerald.

Funeral Rites For Mrs. Lawrence Set Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Grace F. Lawrence, a musician, who died Wednesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Cherry Ford White, 4414 Dettmar road, Arlington, Va., will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, Fourth and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

The Rev. J. Tracy Fenby, pastor of Walker's Chapel in Arlington, will officiate at the services. Burial will take place November 20.

Mrs. Lawrence was the widow of Dr. William H. Lawrence, a dentist. She was graduated from the Peabody Institute of Music in Baltimore. Besides her sister, she leaves a niece, Miss Dolly Grace White, of Arlington.

Edgar C. Gilbert, 91, Dies in College Park

Edgar Cornelius Gilbert, 91, died at his home on Wellesley avenue in College Park yesterday afternoon. A native of New York State, he is survived by his son, Claude Gilbert, of College Park. Funeral services, which will be private, will be conducted at the W. W. Chambers suburban funeral home, at 918 Cleveland avenue, Riverdale.

Sauter Rites

Funeral services for Miss Veronica J. Sauter, who died Tuesday at Sibley Memorial Hospital, will be held today at 9 a. m., in St. Francis De Sales Catholic Church, Twentieth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Miss Sauter was an employe of the War Department for more than twenty years. She is survived by a sister, Miss Vanetta C. Sauter, and a brother Michael J. Sauter.
